What you had Better do, Jenny Marsh.

BY GAIL HAMILTON.

Break your heart for Archie Dean!
Jenny Marsh, Jenny Marsh,
Break your heart for Archie Dean!
Not a bit
'Tis the very thing he's after.
He would say to Kitty Carol,
With a careless, mocking laughter,
"Here's a pretty little child
Who has died for love of me,
'Tis a pity,
But what is a man to do,
When the girls beset him so?
If he gives a nosegay here,
If he calls another "dear"
If he warbles to the third
A love ditty,
Why, the darling little innocents,
They take it all to heart,
Alack a-day,
Ah! she was a pretty maiden;
A little too fond-hearted—
Eyes a little too love-laden—
But, really, when we parted—
Well, she died for love of me.
Kitty Carol." Don't you see
You are giving him to Kitty
Just as surely as can be?
'Tis the way he takes to woo her,
By slily showing to her,
What a dashing, slashing beau is at her feet.
And for all the pretty prating
Of a woman's "deathless loving,"
And her ever "faithful proving,"
And her "womanly devotion,"
I've a very wicked notion.
That to carry off the one,
Who Mary here is sighing for,
And Fanny there is dying for,
Is nearly half the happiness,
And more than half the fun!

Now, if I were a man,
Jenny Marsh, Jenny Marsh,
If I only were a man
For a day—
(I'm a woman, so I can't Always do just what I want.)
But if I were a man, I would say:
"Archie Dean, go to thunder!
What's the use of sighs, I wonder,
Your oaths, and vows, and mutterings
Are awfully profane.
Ble away to Kitty Carol.
Your loss is but a gain
Aren't there fishes still a-swimming
Just as luscious every way
As those that hissed and sputtered
In the saucepan yesterday?"

But Jenny, charming Jenny,
You're a tender little woman,
And I can't exp ct you'll say what's
So shockingly inhuman,
And, besides, you'll never dare,
You little witch to swear
But when you re at the fair
Don't flirt too far with tawny lads,
Because, perhaps you'll rue it,
And don't you dance too merrily,
Because he may see through it
And don't put on an air as if You're mortally offended,
'Tw'll be a feather in his cap
And then your game is ended,
And if, with Kitty on his arm,
You meet him on the green
Don't agonize your pouting lips
With "Mr. Arthur Dean."

But every throb of pride or love
Be very sure to stifle
As if your intercourse with him
Were but the merest trifle
And take heed re'n with all your might
You do not care a feather
For all the Carols in the world
And Aronis Deans together
Take this advice and get him back,
My darling—if you can
But if you can't—why right about,
And take another man.

AGRICULTURAL.

Shelter Cheaper than Fodder

Notwithstanding much that has been written during a year past, espicially in the agricultural journals, on the true principles of Winter protection and feeding of domestic animals, there is still a great amount of costly ignorance on this subject.

Last Winter we chanced upon the farm of a man who possessed a fair share of intelligence upon general matters, and we were not little surprised to find him still clinging to the old opinion, that his stock Wintered better when exposed to the cold than if warmly housed. He kept no account of the amount of food consumed, but his observation taught him—and truly—that his sheep, for instance, consumed more food in a cold Winter than in one of moderate temperature; and he reasoned that if they ate more it indicated better health, and a faster growth of flesh and wool, and of course a greater profit. Following out this opinion, he kept a flock of sheep in an open field, exposed to bleak winds and pelting storms. In this field he had placed a number of small stacks of hay, to one after another of which they had free access, and upon which they made rapid inroads. Their only shelter was afforded by the leeward side of these hay stacks, and by the stone walls that surrounded the field together with the grove on the northern side that served to break the wind from that direction, but from entering which they were prevented by the intervening fence. He was quite sure they ate better when thus exposed than if housed up or allowed a warm shelter around and under the barn.—His other stock were treated in a similar manner. Instead of warm sheds or stables they fed and slept in a cold open yard. He said it kept them in better 'heart,' and gave them a sharper appetite—as to the latter, he was doubtless correct.

But he, like thousands of others, had drawn his conclusions from a false theory, which a few careful experiments would have corrected. He should have considered that the profitableness of keeping depends not upon the absolute amount of food they consume, but upon the greater or less product of flesh, wool, &c., obtained from a given amount of nutriment.—Had he weighed his animals in the Fall and divided them, keeping one part inclose, warm sheds or stalls, and the other part in the cold situation, he would that the protected animals, while consuming less food, gained more in weight than the others, and in May or June would have been in superior health and heart. In the case referred to give the sheep a dose of tar by applying it upon their noses in the Spring to opperate as a tonic, and to counteract the running at the nose produced by colds, which sheep "catch" as well as men.

There is a principle or two involved in feeding and nutrition, which, if well understood by all who have the care of animals, would render their labor doubly profitable. The food consumed by animals serves a double or treble purpose. It supplies the waste of the system produced by natural wear of the various organs, and keeps up respiration and the resulting heat. What is left after these ends are served goes to increase the flesh or weight.

The wear depends upon the amount of exercise taken hence the more quiet animals are kept after allowing just enough exercise to preserve the organ in a healthy state, the less will be the amount of food required to supply the waste.

The heat of the body results from the consumption of carboneous food, especially the oily starchy portions—The union of carbon in a tallow candle or oil lamp with the surrounding air, producing the heat and the flame has an exact counterpart in the lungs and blood of the animal, when the air drawn in at respiration unites with the oily or fatty matter in the blood and give heat to the system.

On a warm day not much heat is removed from the surface of the body and the animal breathes less rapidly and fully and less fat is consumed to supply wasted heat.

If the same amount of oily food is consumed and digested as on a cold day, there will be a larger surplus to be stored away as fat.

As a matter of course, the colder the weather the less surplus fat, or profit, will be obtained from the food.

Another point usually overlooked is this: In coarser substances—such as hay and straw—consumed by animals there is but a small proprtion of the oily or carbonaceous matter; and, to get at this, it is necessary to digest a prodigous quantity of food. This overtaxes the digestive organs, and results in more or less debility.

We have here an explanation why a smaller quantity of meal which supplies oil and starch, (both of which are rich in carben, the cheif heat producing element,) will keep an animal in so much better health.

The principles above indicated, which are fully established by both scientific theory and oft repeated experiment, lead to the certain conclusion that for all kinds of animals, whether kept as stock, or for fattening it is most profitable to furnish warm shelter. We repeat; a flock of sheep or a drove of cattle, will, without doubt eat much less food and gain much more in weight, if kept nearly at Summer heat during Winter than if left exposed to our inclement weather.—N. Y. Times.

NEW READY-MADE

BOOT & SHOE

STORE.

The subscribers would respectfully inform the citizens of Tecumseh and the surrounding country, that they have entered into a co-partnership for the purpose of carrying on the Boot & Shoe business in all its branches, and hope by close attention to business to merit a liberal share of public patronage. Believing that a Nimble Sixpence is better than a Slow Shilling they have adopted the ready pay system for all goods sold in the house. Having just received a new assortment of Goods from the Best Eastern Manufacturers, comprising all the new styles of the season, they would say now is the time, and this is the place for you to buy cheap, and as we intend to keep constantly on hand a seasonable assortment of goods of both Eastern and Domestic manufacture, manufactured from the best Eastern stock the market affords, the public will find it to their interest to call on us, as they can save money by so doing. Small Profits and quick sales will be our motto. All kinds of work made to order on short notice in the best workmanlike manner.

The highest cash price paid for hides and skins.

N. B. As the co partnership heretofore existing between Wimple and Stocking, is mutually dissolved, immediate settlement of all their accounts will be expected. They will be found in the hands of A. M. Wimple, at the boot and shoe store of Wimple and Thompson.

EXPRESS!

Tuesday and Friday.

The subscriber has established a semi-weekly of Express between Tecumseh and Adrian, leaving Tecumseh at 8 1-2 o'clock A. M., and Adrian at 4 o'clock P. M. As he runs a good carriage, passengers will find it a pleasant ride, and it gives our citizens a better chance to attend to business than if they went by railroad, as it will give them some six hours time, and then return the same day. He will also do all errands that may be entrusted to him with promptness.

ATLANTIC White Lead, a superior article at Apothecaries's Hall.

DR Everson's Great American Remedy for Ague, or Chills and Fever, is the most popular and certain remedy now known. The people and the press speak of it in the highest terms of commendation. It is pleasant to take, does not purge, vomit or sweat, but invigorates the system. It contains no Arsenic Strichnine, Quinine, or any other poisonous or injurious drug, but it is an originally discovered Antidote to Malaria and as an Ague Killer it has no equal. Call and get a circular containing certificates from Professors, Physician, Clergymen and the press.

THE PEOPLE DEMAND IT AND WILL HAVE IT.

Unmistakable Evidence of its Work and Worth.

CERTIFICATES

Almost without number, might here be adduced, from Physicians, Clergymen, officers of State, and private individuals, but the following will suffice:

From our intimate knowledge of Dr. Everson, and the extraordinary virtues of his Ague remedy—being apprized of its constituents, and knowing, as we do, that it contains neither Arsenic, Quininine, Strichnine, Mercury or any poisonous or injurious drugs, we heartily commend it, and also his Family Phisic, or Cathartic Pills, as medicines deserving the approbation of an intelligent public.

MORE BOUNTY LAND.

THE ACT OF CONGRESS, passed March 3d, 1855, gives

160 Acres of Land,

To every Officer, Soldier, Musician, in the Army, or man, Marine, Clerk, or Landsman in the Navy, who served fourteen days, or was in any battle in any war since 1790, or to their widows or minor children—embracing officers and soldiers of

WAYNE'S WAR,
WAR OF 1812,
BLACK HAWK WAR,
PATRIOT WAR,
FLORIDA WAR,
AROOSTOOK WAR,
MEXICAN WAR.

ALSO, the Revolutionary Soldiers or their Widows. In cases where 160 acres have been received under former Acts of Congress, no more can be drawn; but those who have been allowed a Warrant for 40 or 80 acres are now entitled to a Warrant for enough more to make up 160 acres.

P. S. We have faithful and experienced Agents in Washington, and we make no charge in any case unless we obtain the land.

The second, third or fourth marriage of a widow, does not impair her claim under this act, if she is a widow at the time of her application.

Persons under the age of 21 years on the 3d of March, 1855, are regarded minors by this act.

Those having claims, will have them promptly attended to by calling on or writing (post paid,) to BILLS & BAXTER, Tecumseh.

THE NEW SPECIAL
Topographical Map of
Lenawee county, Mich.,

From original surveys and actual measurment throughout the whole county, by Bechler and Wenig, Surveyors and Civil Engineers, Authors of Maps of Allegany, Schoharie, and Broome County, N. Y., and Washtenaw Co., Mich.

The subscribers, who have been engaged in compiling a map of Lenawee County since 14 months, are about to review the whole work in order to correct even the slightest error, if any should have occured. The same time they will obtain subscribers for the enterprise, which is connected with immense labor and expense.

The Map is about 3x5 feet in size, and contains every public road with all its variations, section lines, Dwellings, places of Worship, Post Offices, and School Houses, Stores, Mills, Shops, &c., also, section and farm lines with the owner's name expressed on it. Views of Public buildings. Plans of every village in the County on the margin forming not only a correct and complete, but also an ornamental Map, and will be handsomely colored, mounted and furnished to subscribers for $5 per copy

BECHLER, WENIG & CO.,
Adrian & Philadelphia

The undersigned having examined Messrs. Bechler & Wenig's Surveys of Lenawee Co., take pleasure in recommending their Map to the citizens of this County, as being in our opinion a very accurate, reliable and practical Map, and complete County Directory, and will solicit their liberal patronage. Considering the expense attending its survey procuring so accurately all the names localities, distances, town plat, farm lines, views etc., and the limited subscription necessarily meet with on account of its being entirely a local work, we think they offer it very reasonable, and have subscribed for the Map

The Life Shore.

Alone by my fire-side dreaming,
Counting Life's golden sands:
Counting the years on my fingers,
Since my youth and I shook hands—
Since I stood weak and weary
On the shores of a troubled sea.
And my youth and its hopes went drifting
Down the ebb-tide, dark and dree—

Counting the years on my fingers
And looking along the shore,
Back to the spot where we parted—
Parted for evermore—
Many a precious footprint
Trace I upon the sands.
Hence to the shadowed waters
Where my youth and I shook hands.

Wavering and slow at their outstart,
Oft halting and turning back
Alone in the mournful journey
Are the first steps on the track;
Looking away through the sea-mists—
Not at the stumbling feet—
And the tear-blind eyes of the wanderer
When she and Pale Sorrow meet.

Her passion is mute in this presence,
And slow, with her face on her hands,
Keeps she a virgil of silence
Midst the wreck on the storm-beat sands;
Till comes through the moonless darkness,
Wraith-like unheard and slow
With trailing garments of mourning,
Patience, with heavenward brow

Strains up from her weeping,
And looks over the sea again;
But night is low on the waters,
And her eyes may watch in rain
Onward her Patience guided,
Onward along the shore,
Leaving the wrecks unbuilded,
Unburried for evermore.

Peace comes in the morning twilight
Strength comes in the later day,
And all these four together
Press forward upon the way.
Not without bitter struggle
Passes the noon-tide heat,
Turned back and checked and baffled
Oft are her weary feet

Could she but sit and rest her
One hour by the whitening wave,
And get sight of dreams around her,
The all that her heart will crave,
But she must work and suffer
While the day is daylight still,
There is time for no friendliness
In the grave beyond the hill.

Quicksand and ghastly breakers
Are there on the forward track;
One on [illegible] moans the tide advancing,
One lingers, no look to back—
Swifter and ever swifter
Comes the cold night on the misty moor,
And the wave of dark Dim-sweeper
The spot where late she stood.

A wide, black waste of water
Strewn over with spar and mast,
The wrecks that the centuries carry
To the Present from the Past,
Across that heaving whirlpool
She may look and look again.
There is only mist and foaming,
Dark cloud and driving rain.
Dead Hopes, lost Love, lost Happiness,
Lie pale on the tempest sea—
Sad sown in youth for a harvest
That shall never gathered be.

Forward and ever forward
Skirting the laggard rocks,
Where no banner of golden sunshine
The dusty sky silence mocks.
Footsore and lagging often
Weary in both heart and brain—
Courage, faint heart, and forward!
Such travail is not in vain.

The heat of the day is over
Twilight enshrouds the sky
Gone back are the sullen waters
Leaving the footprints dry
Some faint on the dry-pebbled sea sand
In all their wandering maze
When she and her heart went blindly
Through long long aching days:
Some clear as if cut in marble,
Straight on the beaten strand;
Steady and true to their purpose,
Guided by angel hand

Sitting alone by my fire-side,
Alone this October night,
Tracing a backward journey
By memory's pale moonlight,
Looking through Life's long vista,
At its hours of golden sands,
And counting the years on my fingers
Since my youth and I shook hands
Till in the far-off distance
Like sun in a pictured scene,
As 'round the hills of autumns
The old spring-times are seen.

A young lady, whose name we did not learn, who resides in Fentonville, became the victim yesterday, of misplaced confidence, losing her port monnaie and a considerable sum of money. She had been attending a school at Oberlin, O, and was traveling homeward. She had been accompanied thus far by a young man with whom she had a slight acquaintance, and who had also been attending school at Oberlin. At this point their roads diverged, the young lady going to Fentonville, and the young man in another direction. On arriving at the depot of the Detroit and Milwaukee Railway, she requested him to purchase her a ticket to Fentonville, at the same time handing him her pocket [illegible] the money she had. He said he would procure the ticket, and left her for that purpose, but he has not since been heard of.

Romance and Revolvers.

The Emperor of Russia has lately performed an act of justice to a much injured and honorable American family, which reflects the highest credit on his government. The facts were giving me by Mr. Sala, the principal writer for Dickens' Household Works, with whom I had the pleasure to dine at London, and who was an actor in the history I am going to give you. About eighteen months ago, a Miss Ward, from one of the Southern States, was married, at Florence, after a short courtship, to a Polish count, whose unpronounceable, escapes me at this moment. They were married before the American Consul, I believe. After living with Miss Ward maritally for three weeks, the count took French leave, one fine morning, carrying off his wife's jewelry as booty. A letter left behind informed Miss Ward of a fact of which she had been, till that moment, entirely ignorant, to wit: that any Russian subject not married according to the service recognized by the Greek Church and the Russian government was invalid and not binding, and that, the service which had united them resembling in no wise the one required, they were as free as if no service had been performed. The consternation of Miss Ward and her family at this delectable piece of villainly may well be imagined; for, on inquiry, they found that the count's statement was but too true. Miss Ward and her mother remained a short time in Italy, endeavoring to obtain some kind of redress for the base imposition which had been practised on them; but their efforts were fruitless. They came to Paris and spent the winter here, where they were generally known to the Americans resident in the place. At the period of the coronation of the Emperor of Russia they went to St. Petersburg. It was here that Mr Sala made the acquaintance of the family by a letter of introduction from Pa is —. The family were going to demand justice of the Emperor of Russia against his scoundrelly subject.

Mr. Sala drew up the petition to the Russian Minister, and in this petition Miss Ward demanded of the Russian government, "the rehabilitation of her honor by a lawful marriage with the count"—. The document was handed to Mr. Seymour, the American Minister, and he handed it to the Russian Minister of State. The moment the case was laid before the Emperor, an order was issued to the Russian Minister at Naples (where the count was then living) to confer with the Neapolitan government with a view to his arrest. The Neapolitan government which was just then, in great favor with Russia, yielded at once to the request —. The count was seized by the Neapolitan police, and at Russia's expense, was conducted to the Russian frontier; there he was received by the Russian police, and carried to Warsaw. The Wards were already there, awaiting his arrival.

The count was marched into the church by a posse of policemen and was compelled to stand up before the altar and marry Miss Ward in due form. When the ceremony was concluded, his wife, now legally the Countess of ——, made him a formal bow, and bade him adieu, forever.

The count, who was an exile was sent to Siberia; his property was confiscated—the countess retaining, by law, one-third. The family immediately left again for Italy, where they are spending the winter.

The Father and brother of Miss Ward were present at the marriage at Warsaw, with revolvers in their pockets, determined, if there was any flinching on the part of the count, to blow his brains out —. For in view of the fact that he was destined for Siberia under any circumstances it was feared that he might not, at the last moment, pronounce the necessary word. And thus was a high act of justice performed by the Russian government in a bold and rapid manner, and an act which does her the greatest honor.

☞ An exchange says: "When a man gets mad and stops his paper, he always borrows the next number of his neighbor to see if the with[illegible]awal of his paper hasn't killed the editor, and dressed the columns of the paper in mourning. Such men are apt to imagine that the world rests upon their shoulders."

☞ J. C. Underwood, Esq., the Republican delegate to the Philadelphia Convention from Virginia, has offered his farm in Clark county for sale. The people would not permit him to live in the county.

Dr. Elisha Kane

Dr. Kane was born in Philadelphia in the year 1822, and had accordingly just entered upon his thirty-fifth year. He received his academic education at the University of Virginia, and graduated as Doctor of Medicine at the University of Pennsylvania in 1843. Soon after that date he entered the United States Navy as assistant surgeon, and accompanied the first American embassy to China. With his native thirst for observing the manners and customes of strange countries, he visited different parts of China, the Philipines, Ceylon, and the interior of India. He was the first white person who descended into the crater of the toil of Luzon, abcomplishing this enterprize at the hazard of his life. He was suspended by a bamboo rope around his waist, from a projecting craig, more than two hundred feet above the romains of volcanic eruptions. With bottles of sulphurous acid, and other specimens from the mouth of crater, he was dragged up senseless thro' the scoriae. Upon this expedition he was attacked by the Ladrones and savages of the Negrito race, and exposed to other hardships, which proved fatal to his traveling companion, Baron Loe. of Prussia. After this, he traversed a considerable portion of India, visited Ceylon, ascended the Nile to the confines of Nubia, and passed a season in Egypt. He traveled through Greece on foot, and returned in 1846 to the United States.

He was immediately ordered to the coast of Africa, and sailing in the frigate United States—visited the slave factories from Cape Mount to the river Ronny, and obtained free access to the barracoons of Dahomey. Returning home in a precarious state of health, he recovered sufficiently to visit Mexico during the war as a volunteer.

He succeeded in delivering dispatches from the President to the Commander in Chief, escorted by the notorious spy company of the brigand Dominguez, and after getting the better of a detachment of Mexican soldiers, whom they encountered at Nopaluca, he was forced to combat his companions single handed, in order to save the lives of his prisoners, Gen. Torrejon, Gen Gaona and others, from their fury. On the return of peace he was ordered upon the Coast Survey, under Prof. Bache, and was thus employed in the Gulf of Mexico, when he volunteered his services to the first Grinnell expedition. He was accepted as senior surgeon and naturalist of the squadron, and entered upon his duties with an enthsiasm, sagacity and power of endurance, which admirably prepared him for the more arduous responsibilities of the second expedition, the results of which are before the world.

In his private character, Dr Kane displayed a singularly lovely and attractive union of qualities in striking contrast with the boldness and resolution which impelled him on his career of advanture. The narrative of his expeditions present a delightful illustration of his personal traits.

In this respect they possess the charm of unconscious autobiography. His modest simplicity, his refined tastes, his tenderness of feeling, and his almost feminine sympathies are perpetually revealed in connection with as dauntless courage and constancy as ever nerved heroic heart to lofty prowess. Hence, the magic power which he exerted over the companions of his enterprise, winning their romantic attachment, and making himself a centre of light and encouragement amid the darkest moments of the forlorn hope in the Arctic seas. Whatever the scientific results of his perilous voyages, they are of still higher significance in the example they have presented of noble, presistent, disinterested manhood.

It is a Scottish claymore of great antiquity—having been in the possession of this Granville family for several centuries made of the finest tempered steel, with basket hilt of the same material, and measures about three feet from point to guard. The owner presented it to Capt. Du Riviere of the Zouaves, the present possessor, who succored him while lying on the field of Balaklava, desperately wounded. The scabbard is dented in several places by the hoofs of horses, and the hilt is slightly injured by the thrust of a Cossack's lance. The charge of the Light Brigade is not so recent but that relic of the event possesses considerable historic interest.

Mr. Burritt's Brotherly Plan

We are gratified to see that there is a general response to the plan proposed by Mr. Burritt for getting rid of slavery.—The democratic papers are generally silent, as they always wait to know what the leaders say; but the Independent Press speaks out generally in approving terms. But such a proposition requires time. It must first command the attention of our people before it awakens their serious thought. Slavery cannot be yielded by the South without blood. The vast amount of property invested in the bone and sinews of men makes the question of manumission one of terrible interest to the South; and in the present dull state of the moral sense there is no hope of any appeal but to that of power or money.

The Cleaveland Leader well observes that "there is not a true hearted patriot in the land who does not view the animosity which is yearly growing up between the North and the South upon this question, with the feelings of anxiety and regret. It is a result of the demands constantly made upon the nation by Slavery—demands which are necessary to it's (Slavery's) preservation, and which never can be relinquished on the part of its friends so long as they are determined never to consent to its ultimate extinction. There is no such thing as a compromise with Slavery which shall secure peace, by an agreement on the part of the North to let Slavery alone in the States where it already exists, on condition that the South shall cease her unholy exertions to extenn it over free territory! Slavery extension is necessary to the permanent existence of the institution. To confine it to its present limits is to commence its slow, but certain suffocation. This fact is understood partially at the North—it is understood fully at the South."

This is a plain statement of the facts, and we cannot get rid of slavery without blood unless we are willing to accept some method in which the South will at [illegible] proposed by Mr Burritt is feasible as a financial measure; will neutralize the opposition of the South; will bring over to our side the wavering States; will narrow the circle which bounds this awful despotism; and, to all appearance, will work out easily and without undue chafing the results which all good men desire, and which are so important to the future interests of these millions of bond men on the one hand and to the prosperity, growth development and peace of our country on the other hand.

It may be true—it is true that right and justice would indicate the payment of this money to the slave and not to the master. The latter has stolen him, brutalized him, extorted toil from him, deprived him of his liberty, his children his property, his means of pursuing happiness and all those blessings which are the common gift of God. Then, to pay the plunderer for his injustice, and to reward the man-stealer for the outrages of which he has been guilty, may well strike the mind as a monstrous proposition. But we must take things as they are, and deal with them by practical methods, if we would deal with them successfully. The power is not with one man, but with the country; and we cannot impress the country which is deeply implicated this wrong, with our idea of what would be just and right. Let us get rid of this wrong at all events, at whatever cost, at whatever sacrifice. Besides, the evil is hoary, and has fastened itself so thoroughly on the usages, laws, moral teachings and religion of the country that the wrong is not universally perceived, and we may congratulate ourselves if we can get rid of it by the payment of money. The more we look at this scheme the more we are satisfied that it ought to take hold of the heart of the whole north.

A Bad Night.—A gentlemen was once dining with a friend, when a most dreadful storm arose. In hopes of its abatement the entertainment was prolonged to the latest possible hour; but at length it was over, and the storm showed no signs of ceasing, but, on the contrary, grew worse. The host insisted upon his guest's acceptance of a lodging for the night in view of the impossibility of reaching his home. The guest complied, but in a few minutes was missed from the parlor. In half an hour he reappeared drenched with rain. "Where, in heaven's name, have you been?" asked the host, viewing the singular object, which looked like a dog about the paws, and a weeping willow about the head.—"I," said he, gently shaking off the water—"I have been at home to tell my wife that, as it was such a bad night, I should not return."

Keep Your Seats in Railroad Accidents.

The Albany Journal says this is the counsel of the most experienced Railroad managers in this country, to passengers upon trains encountering accidents by collisions, by breakages of rails, or damage to the track. "Keep your seats—let the car go—your chances of escape are better in the inside of a strong car, than they would be in a bewildered jump from the windows or the platform. Sit still."

Ignorance or disregard of this plain teaching of prudence, made the accident on the Central Railroad recently, a fatal one to a passenger and to another brakesman. All three leaped from the platform. Hamblett had the upper halt of his head cut off by the car, as it turned over. Mahaney was caught, and both of his legs were fractured. The unfortunate man will probably loose his life. Mr. Smith, a merchant from Johnstown, sustained a simple frature of his left leg and a compound one of his right leg. Of the others on the train who remained in their seats not one sustained the slightest injury. A member of the Legislature, who impulsively quit the car and jumped for his life, very narrowly escaped death. He was thrown into a deep bank of snow head first. His feet were scarely visible above the crust. Had he not been discovered in time and extricated, his death would have been as certain as shocking.

The accident was due to the breaking of a rail by frost. Three feet of the upper half of a bar at one end split off, and let the flange of the wheel slip to the outside of the succeeding rail. There is no iron in the world proof against the severe cold of our climate. Nor can any degree of watchfulness guard against accidents which may result from breaking of frosted rails—if the trains are run up to the speed which the public demand.

☞ Walker, in his "Original," lays down the following rules for attaining high health: "First, study to acquire a composure of mind and body [illegible] agitation, or hurry one or the other, especially just before and after meals, and whilst the process of digestion is going on. To this end govern your temper, endeavor to look at the bright side of things, keep down, as much as possible, the unruly passions; discard envy, hatred, and malice, and lay your head on your pillow in charity with all mankind. Let not yours wants outrun your means.—Whatever difficulties you have to encounter be not perplexed, but only think what is right to do in the sight of him who seeth all things, and bear without repining, the result. When your meals are solitary, let your thoughts be cheerful; when they are social, which is better, avoid disputes or serious arguments, or unpleasant topics. "Unquiet meals," says Shakspeare "make ill digestion;" and the contrary is produced by easy conversation, a pleasant project, welcome news or a lively companion. I advise wives not to entertain their husbands with domestic grievances about children or servants, nor ask for money, nor produce unpaid bills, nor propound unreasonable questions; and I advise husbands to keep the cares and vexations of the world to themselves, but to be communicative of whatever is comfortable, and cheerful and amusing."

A Garrote Robbery in Vermont.—A gentleman named Lyman from Canada, was driving in a cutter along the road a short distance from Rutland, Vt, on Thursday last, when he was accosted by a rough-looking fellow on foot, who asked him for a ride. The request was complied with, and he took a seat. After they had proceeded about a quarter of a mile, and while Mr Lyman's attention was attracted by some object on the roadside, the stranger sprang upon him suddenly, grasped him tightly by the throat, drew out his wallet, and jumping from the sleigh, coolly bade his victim good bye. The wallet taken contained about $1,200 in bills, and some business papers.

The Washington correspondent of the Springfield Argus, gives the following characteristic anecdote of Sec. Marcy:

"Some ardent Know Nothing went to Mr. Marcy and told him, with great impressment, that fourteen out of the nineteen clerks, employed in the State Department were Roman Catholics—and he paused to hear the Secretary's expression of surprise, regret, or excuse. "Ah!" said Mr. Marcy, with his imperturbable bland smile, and his quiet manner, "I am glad to hear it—I didn't know that I had so many as fourteen with any religion at all!" The Know Nothing sloped!"

FRIENDSHIP.

Friendship thy name how dear, how sweet the tie
That blends congenial hearts in unity
Bright polar star on life's tempestuous sea,
Pointing the way to high felicity.

Cream of life's bliss, nectar of all its joy,
Soul-satisfying sweets, that never cloy,
Oil on the troubled waters of the soul,
That speaks it's calm and hids it's wounds be whole.

Sunshine of hope when darkest clouds arise,
In withering drought, dews dewdrops from the skys,
Replenish earth flowers that in Eden rose,
And scents with fragrance every breath that blows.

Mine be the bliss with thee that joy to share,
Whilst present friendship shall our souls prepare,
For more substantial joys which shall be given,
To all the ransomed of the Lord in Heaven.

Liberal Symptoms in Kentucky

Following cheerily upon the recent manifestations of the growth of liberal principles in Missouri, we have evidences of a similar state of feeling in Kentucky A correspondent of the Frankfort Commonwealth, a leading journal of the latter State, recently proposed to exempt slaves from execution for debt, with a view to strengthen the existence of slavery, and induce investments in chattels personal; but the editor takes ground against the measure, as not likely to produce the results anticipated, because of some 41,000 citizens of the State whose properties are rated at the avarage value individually of a slave, all but five or six thousand are already slave owners. But the editor goes still further, and expresses his preference for intelligent white labor, without considering that it can never flourish in the uncongenial and repugnant locality of slavery. His views are given in a very guarded manner, as if he felt that caution was necessary when enforcing a home truth, but he concedes the whole question in dispute by his admissions, and we give his language as it appears in his own columns. He says:

It is a self-evident fact, needing no demonstration, that slave property is not comparatively profitable in Kentucky, and the laws of political economy will effectually prevent the increase of negroes, to any considerable extent, in this State

The citizens of Kentucky cannot generally become slave holders, because the larger portion of the people of the State are not able to buy a single negro. We, for one, wish to see commerce and manufactories so thriving in Kentucky that "white laborers and servants," provided they were of native growth, would be induced to remove to Kentucky and stay there. Such immigration would increase the wealth of our State, and give us importance in the halls of the Federal Government. The same causes which would confine immigration, "to those who expect to become slave-owners," would drive out those who are not able to own slaves. According to the argument of our correspondent, every negro brought into the State drives one white laborer out.—Certainly, then every negro brought into the State drives out one white laborer who is now a citizen of Kentucky

It is the interest of Kentucky to keep her hardy sons at home. Too many of the rose and expectancy of our fair State leave her borders every year for the far West. In this manner is Kentucky kept in the rear of many of her sister States, which possess nothing equal to her resources, whether of agriculture or mineral wealth. In order to retain our present position among the States, inducements for white laborers must be held out In order to fully develop the countless wealth of our mineral regions, our own sons must be induced to stay at home, and these same white laborers, whose presence our correspondent so much depreciates, must be invited to our soil; for this purpose negro labor cannot be successfully employed. We envy Massachusetts her wealth and industry, her manufactories and her free schools, instead of looking down upon her with contempt We are jealous of the progress of Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, in railroads and other facilities of rapid communication. In order to compete with those States, we must have intelligent white, as well as slave labor

A young man, evidently a stranger in the city, was induced by a gang of rowdies, to attend a dance in a bawdy house in the Tenth Ward, last Monday evening, and on returning from it, about two o'clock Tuesday morning, the whole party, numbering nearly twenty, set upon him at the corner of Lafayette and Beaubien street, beating him in a most brutal manner and rifling his pockets. After this the party moved down Beaubien street toward Jefferson avenue. They soon came back however, seemingly not satisfied with the manner in which they had disposed of the man. They took him into the back yard of a grocery, or saloon, near the place, and it is not known whether he escaped finally, or was murdered, and his body concealed. We trust our Police will take the matter in hand, and ferret out the mystery. The scenes nightly enacted in the vicinity of this outrage, call loudly for a watch, and we ask the attention of the proper authorities to the subject.

Rural Improvements.

A taste for rural improvement has of late gradually gained ground with almost all classes of men in our country. On the Prairie of the far west the settler as he rudely constructed his cabin, shows in its construction that the love of the beautiful in nature were not denied him.

Each tree, or rock or rivelet surrounding his rustic abode, may form a part of the pleasing picture of Landscape beauty, which more frequently than formerly marks the home of an American pioneer, and we rejoice that the time has come, when the love of ornament is not so ruthlessly sacrificed to a utilitarian spirit as in past years.

On our eastern sea-board, and along the noble rivers which mingle their waters with the Atlantic, opulence and wealth seem to have carried out to the fullest extent a love of landscape adornment, and we find the beautiful villas, and the stately mansions of an old and long settled country. Nature too has there lent her helping hand, and above the Pallisades, where the noble Hudson by a generous expansion becomes the Tappan Zee, upon the lofty and overhanging cliffs above and below West Point, at the beautiful inland city of Newburgh, and all the way up to where the fine rolling eastern bank of the stream stretches away in the distance and terminates in the blue hills of Vermont, she has formed for man to build upon, landscapes and sites of rare perspective beauty.

Nor has she been less beautiful upon the banks of the Susquehanna, the Delaware, or the rivers which flow under the more genial sky of the south.

Thus, we say, are Americans beginning to learn and put into practice the beautiful lessons nature has so long been teaching them, and American homes, at the East and West, the North and South are becoming something more than mere huts for shelter from the storms of winter, or the heat of summer, built with the least possible expense, placed in the most unpicturesque location, and surrounded with the fewest possible embellishments of nature or art, but they are becoming the homes of men of lovers of their country, adorned with tasteful hedges, smiling [illegible] all nature's gifts, improved by man.

There undoubtedly have been many reasons why as a nation we have until late years neglected beautifying our homes.

We have been and are too much a business, dollar worshiping people, with too little time, in our opinion, to give of either time or money to improve the lands we call our own, unless we could realize from the time and money thus spent some increased production or value beyond that produced by artistic beauty.

Hoods "song of the shirt" might with truth be called the song of the nation when it says "work, work, work." We have worked long enough, and it should be a source of congratulation with us all that as a nation we have begun to do something else.

Then as we have "found time" for something else than drudgery, attention has been turned to the subject which heads this article, and all over the great West, as well as in the East, the beautiful smiling villages adorned with neat cottages, and broad streets, the tasteful, cheerful, House of God—the Seminary of Learning, in lieu of the forbidding, unpainted gloomy buildings of earlier days, speak the change, and tell us that beauty as well as utility has a voice in human creation now a-days. And as the county becomes more settled still, the formation of State and County Agricultural Socities by allowing of a free interchage of sentiments, by encouraging the careful improvement and increase of all farming stock, together with improvement in the farm and appearance of buildings, with other improvements of various kinds, further promote the object we discuss.

Every one who can by the blessing of God, call a single inch of ground his own, and especially those to whom a kind Providence has given a home, "be it ever so humble," may be their own artists, and beautify, and improve that inch, or that home. A love of home which is closely connected with a love of country prompts to labor thus. A love for those who are to come after us, and enjoy our labors, also bid us beautify and improve the inheritance we must leave them. Above all, God requires the talent he has given shall be increased and beautified

Mr. Buchanan's Inaugural.

Fellow Citizens:—I appear before you this day to take the solemn oath that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States, and will to the best of my ability, preserve, protect, and defend the constitution of the United States. In entering upon this great office I must humbly invoke the God of our fathers for wisdom and firmness to execute its high and responsible duties in such a manner as to restore harmony and the ancient friendship among the people of the several States, and to preserve our free institutions throughout many generations. Convinced that I owe my election to the inherent love for the Constitution and the Union, which still animates the hearts of the American people, let me earnestly ask their powerful support in sustaining all just measures calculated to perpetuate these, the richest political blessings which heaven has ever bestowed upon any nation. Having determined not to become a candidate for re-election, I shall have no motive to influence my conduct in administering the Government, except the desire ably and faithfully to serve my country, and to live in the grateful memory of my countrymen. We have recently passed through a Presidential contest, in which the passions of our fellow citizens were excited to the highest degree, by questions of deep and vital importance; but when the people proclaimed their will, the tempest at once subsided, and all was calm. The voice of the majority speaking in the manner prescribed by the Constitution was heard, and instant submission followed. Our own country could alone have exhibited so grand and striking a spectacle of the capacity of man for self-government,

What a happy conception then was it for Congress to apply this simple rule, that the will of the majority shall govern to the settlement of the question of domestic slavery in the Territories. Congress is neither to legislate slavery into any Territory or State, nor to exclude it therefrom, but to leave the people thereof perfectly free to form and regulate their domestic institutions in thier own way, subject only to the Constitution of the United States. As a natural consequence Congress has also prescribed that when the Territory of Kansas shall be admitted as a State it shall be received into the Union, with or without slavery, as their Constitution may prescribe at the time of their admission. A different opinion has arisen in regard to the time when the people of a Territory shall decide this question for themselves. This is happily a matter of but little importance, and, besides, it is a judicial question, which legitimately belongs to the Supreme Court of the United States, before whom it is now pending, and will, it is understood, be speedily and finally settled To their decission, in common with all good citizens, I shall cheerfully submit. Whatever this may be, though it has been my individual opinion that, under the Nebraska Kansas act, the appropriate period will be when the number of actual residents in the Territory shall justify the formation of a Constitution, with a view to its admission as a State into the Union. But be this as it may, it is the imperative and indispensable duty of the Government of the United States to secure to every resident inhabitant the free and independent expression of his opinion by his vote. This sacred right of each individual must be preserved. This being accomplished, nothing can be fairer than to leave the people of a Territory free from all foreign interferance to decide their own destiny for themselves subject only to the Constitution of the United States.

The whole territorial question being thus settled upon the principle of popular sovereignty—a principle as ancient as free government itself—every thing of a practicle nature has been decided, and no other question remains for adjustment because all agree that under the Constitution slavery in the States is beyond the reach of any human power, except that of the respective States themselves, wherein it exists. May we not then hope, that the long agitation on this subject is approaching its end, and that the geographical parties to which it has given birth, so much dreaded by the Father of his country will speedily become extinct? Most happy will it be for the country when the public mind shall be diverted from this question, to others of more pressing and practical importance Throughout the whole progress of this agitation, which has scarcely known any intermission for more than twenty years, whilst it has been productive of no positive good to any human being, it has been the prolific source of great evils to the master, to the slave, and to the whole country; it has alienated and estranged the people of the sister States from each other, and has even seriously endangered the very existence of the Union—nor has the danger yet entirely ceased. Under our system there is a remedy for all mere political evils, in the sound sense and sober judgment of people. Time is a great corrective. The political subjects which but a few year ago excited and exasperated the public mind have passed away, and are now nearly forgotten—but this question of domestic slavery is of far greater importance than any mere political question, because, should the agitation continue, it may eventually endanger the personal safety of a large portion of our country men, where the institution exists. In that event, no form of government, however admirable in itself however productive of material benefits, can compensate for the loss of peace and domestic security around the family alter. Let every Union loving man, therefore exert his best influence to suppress this agitation, which, since the recent legislation of Congress is without any legitimate object. It is an evil of the times, that men have undertaken to calculate the mere material value of the Union. Reasoned estimates have been presented, of the pecuniary profits and local advantages which would result to different States and sections, from disolution, and of the comparative injuries which such an event would inflict on other States and sections. Even descending to this low and narrow view of the mighty question all such calculations are at fault

The bare reference to a single consideration will be conclusive on this point.—We at present enjoy a free trade throughout our extensive and expensive country, such as the world never witnessed. This trade is conducted on railroads and canals, on noble rivers and arms of the sea, which bind together the North and the South, the East and the west, of our confederacy Annihilate this trade, arrest its free progress by the geographical lines of jealous and hostile States and you destroy prosperity and the onward march of the whole and every part, and involve all in one common ruin. But such considerations, important as they are in themselves, sink into insignificance when we reflect on the terrific evils which would result from disunion, to every portion of the Confederacy—to the North not more than to the South—to the East not more than to the West. These I shall not attempt to portray, because I feel an humble confidence that the kind Providence which inspired our fathers with wisdom to frame the most perfect form of Government and Union ever devised by man, will not suffer it to perish, until it shall have been peacefully instrumental, by its, example, in the extension of civil and religious liberty throughout the world.

Next in importance to the maintenance of the Constitution and the Union is the [illegible] Goverment free from the taint of even the suspicion of corruption Public virtue is the vital spirit of Republics, and history proves that when this has decayed and the love of money has usurped its place, although the forms of the free government may remain for a season, the substance has departed forever. Our present financial condition is without a parallel in history No nation has ever before been embarrassed from too large a surplus in its treasury. This almost necessarily gives birth to extravagant legislation. It produces wild scemes of expediture and begets a race of speculators and jobbers' whose ingenuity is exerted in contriving and promoting expedients to obtain the public money. The party through its official agents, whether rightfully or wrongfully, is suspected, and the character of the Government suffers in the estimation of the people. This is in itself a very great evil The national mode of relief from this embarrassment is to appropriate the surplus in the Treasury to great national objects for which a clear warrant can be found in the Constitution. Among these I might mention the extinguishment of the public debt; a reasonable increase of the Navy, which is at present inadequate to the protection of our vast tonage afloat—now greater than that of any other nation, as well as the defence of our extended sea coast. It is beyond all question the true principle that no more revenue ought to be collected from the people than the amount necessary to defray the expenses of a wise, economical and efficient administration of the Government

To reach this point it was necessary to resort to a modification of the Tariff, and this has been accomplished in such a manner as to do as little injury as may have been practicable to our domestic manufactures, especially those necessary for the defence of the country. Any discrimination against a particular branch, for the purpose of benefitting favored corporations, individuals or interests would have been unjust to the rest of the community, and inconsistent with the spirit of fairness and equality which ought to govern in the adjustment of a revenue tariff, but the squandering of the public money sinks into comparative insignificance, as a temptation to corruption, when compared with the tide of time has ever been blessed with so rich and noble an inheritance as we enjoy in the public lands

In administering this important trust whilst it may be wise to grant portions of them for the improvement of the remainder, yet we should never forget that it is our [illegible] policy to reserve those lands as much as may be for actual settlers, and this at moderate prices. We shall thus not only best promote the prosperity of the new States, by furnishing them a hardy and independent race of honest and industrious citizens, but shall secure homes for our children and our children's children, as well as those exiles from foreign shores, who may seek in this country to improve their condition and enjoy the blessings of civil and religious liberty. Such emigrants have done much to promote the growth and prosperity of our country They have proved faithful both in peace and in war After becoming citizens they are entitled, under the Constitution and laws, to be placed on perfect equality with native born citizens, and in this character they should ever be kindly recognized

The Federal Constitution is a grant from the States to Congress of certain specific powers, and the question whether this grant shall be liberally or strictly construed has more or less divided political parties from the beginning. Without entering into the [illegible] I desire to state in the [illegible] ement of my administration rience and observation have ced me that a strict construction of the powers of the government is the only true theory of the constitution.—Whenever in our past history doubtful powers have been exercised by Congress, they have never failed to produce injurious and unhappy consequences. Many such instances might be adduced, if this were the proper occasion. Neither is it necessary for the public service to strain the language of the constitution, because all the great and useful powers required for a successful administration of the government, both in peace and in war, have been granted either in express terms or by the plainest implication Whilst deeply convinced of these truths, I yet consider it clear that under the war making power Congress may appropriate money towards the construction of a military road, when this road is absolutely necessary for the defence of any State or Territory of the Union against foreign invasion. Under the Constitution Congress has the power to declare war, to raise and support armies, to provide and maintain a navy, and to call forth the militia to repel invasion. Thus endowed in an ample manner with the war-making power, the corresponding duty is required that the United States shall protect each of them (the States) against invasion. How is it possible to afford this protection to California and our Pacific possessions except by a military road through the territory of the United States, over which men and munitions of war may be speedily transported from the Atlantic States to meet and repel the invador?

In case of war with a naval power much stronger than our own, we should then have no other available access to the Pacific coast, because such a power would instantly close the route to the Isthmus of Central America. It is impossible to conceive that whilst the Constitution has expressly required Congress to defend all the States, it should yet deny to them, by any fair construction, the only possible means by which one of these States can be defended. Besides, the government, ever since its origin, has been in the constant practice of constructing military roads. It might also be wise to consider whether the love for the Union which now animates our citizens on the Pacific coast may not be impaired by our neglect or refusal to provide for them in their remote and isolated condition, the only means by which the power of the States on this side of the Rocky Mountains can reach them in sufficient time to protect them against invasion. I forbear for the present, from expressing an opinion as to the wisest and most economical mode in which the government can lend its aid in accomplishing this great and necessary work. I believe that many difficulties in the way, which now appear formidable, will in a great degree vanish as soon as the nearest and best route shall have been satisfactorily ascertained.

It may be right that on this occasion I should make some brief remarks as to our rights and duties as members of the great family of nations. In our intercourse with them there are some plain principles approved by our own experience, from which we should never depart. We ought to cultivate peace, commerce and friendship with all nations, and this not merely as the best means of promoting our own material interest, but in a spirit of christian benevolence towards fellow men wherever their lot may be cast. Our diplomacy should be direct and frank—neither seeking to obtain more, nor accepting less than is our due. We ought to cherish a sacred regard for the independence of all nations, and never attempt to interfere in the domestic concerns of any, unless this shall be imperatively required by the great law of self preservation. To avoid entangling alliance, has been a maxim of our policy ever since the days of Washington, and its wisdom no one will attempt to dispute. In short, we ought to do justice in a kindly spirit to all nations, and require justice from them in return. It is our glory that, while other nations have extended their dominions by the sword we have never acquired any territory except by fair purchase, or, as in the case of Texas by the voluntary determination of a brave, kindred and independent people to blend their destinies with our own.

Even our acquisitions from Mexico form no exception. Unwilling to take advantage of the fortune of war against a sister republic, we purchased these possessions under the treaty of peace for a sum which was considered at the time a fair equivolent. Our past history forbids that we shall in the future acquire territory, unless this be sanctioned by the laws of justice and honor.

Acting on this principle no nation will have a right to interfere or to complain, if, in the progress of events, we shall be further extend our possessions Hitherto, in all our acquisitions, the people under the protection of the American Flag have enjoyed civil and religious liberty, as well as equal and just laws, and have been contented, prosperous and happy,—Their trade with the rest of the world has rapidly increased and thus every commercial nation has shared largely in their successful progress. I shall now, proceed to take the oath prescribed by the Constitution, whilst humbly invoking the blessing of Divine Providence on this great people

The oath was administered to Mr. Buchanan after reading of the Inaugural.

For the Tecumseh Herald.

Mr. Wm M. Knisley favored our citizens, upon the evening of the 10th inst. by one his attractive Concerts in the M. E' Church. His musical entertainments are always of the highest excelence, and the scholars who were under his tutorship this winter, discharged their duty in such a way as to show to their audience, that the arduous attention r Knisely had bestowed upon them, had not been lost. We consider him one of the finest singers in the county, and we certainly know that his manner of illustratin, and his distinct and easy way of teaching, is unsurpassed.

People continued to pour in until the church was crowded to ove flowing. Our citizens nearly all availed themselves of this opportunity of witnessing the advancement of the scholars in Vocal music, which seemed to impart univerral satisfaction to all present. In closing we would say, the young people of Franklin who so kindly tendered their services and so amply done their part toward entertaining the audience will receive our sincere regards It is not the first time they have turned out to help render a Good Time Their company is acceptable at all times.

We beg leave to thank our friends of Ridgeway who also very kindly Volunteered their services.

We emphatically had a good time.

LAST CALL.

It has been several times requested that those who had unsettled accounts at the "Herald" Office previous to the 8th of May last, would at once attend to their adjustment. A few have honorably responded to these requests, but by a large majority they have been, so far, disregarded. The undersigned would therefore now say, that until the 1st of March next the books of said office may be found at Richard & VanTine's Furniture warehouse, where they can be more easily settled than at any time thereafter,

No Family

Can afford to be without Mustang Liniment in their house. The many accidents we are liable to, may render it necessary any moment, and nothing is capable of performing such a certain cure. (Extract) "In lifting the kettle from the fire it caught and scalded my hands and person severely—one hand almost to a crisp. The torture was unbearable. It was an awful sight. ☞ The Mustang Liniment appeared to extract the pain almost immediately. It healed rapidly and left no scar of account Chas. Foster, 420 Broad street, Philadelphia." It is truly a wonderful article It will cure any case of swelling, burns, stiff joints, Eruptions, or rheumatism. For Horses it should never be dispensed with. One Dollar's worth of Mustang has frequently saved a valuable horse. It cures galls, sprains, Ringbone, spavin and founders. Beware of imitations. Sold in all parts of the habitable globe.

A MEDICAL REVOLUTION,
THE WORLD UNANIMOUS.

Holloway's Ointment.

—OR—

THE GREAT COUNTER IRRITANT.

The virus of disease often makes its way to the internal organs through the pores of the skin This penetrating Ointment, melting into the hand as it is rubbed in, is absorbed through the same channels, and, reaching the seat of inflamation, promptly and in variably subdues it, whether located in the kidneys, the liver, the lungs, or any other important organ. It penetrates the surface of the interior, through the countless tubes that communicate with the skin as summer rain passes into the fevered earth, diffusing its cool and regenerating influence.

Skin Diseases and Glandular Swellings.

Every species of exterior irritation is quickly reduced by the anti-inflammatory action of this Ointment. Angry eruptions, such as Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Tetter, Ringworm, Scald head, Nettle Rash, Scabies (or Itch), &c., die out, to return no more, under its application. Hospital experience in all parts of the world proves its infallibility in diseases of the skin, the muscles, the joints and the glands.

ULCERS, SORES & TUMORS.

The effect of this unrivaled external remedy upon scrofula, and other virulent ulcers and sores, is almost Miraculous. It first discharges the poison which produces suppuration and proud flesh, and thus the cure which its healing properties afterward complete are safe as well as permanent.

Wounds, Bruises, Burns and Scalds

In cases of the fracture of the bones, injuries caused by steam explosions, bruises, burns, scalds, rheumatism, stiffness of the joints, and contraction of the sinews, it is employed and warmly recommended by the faculty This marvelous remedy has been introduced by its inventor in person into all the leading hospitals of Europe, and no private household should be without it

UNDENIABLE TESTIMONY.

The medical staff of the French and English Armies in the Crimea, have officially signed their approval of Holloway's Ointment, as the most reliable dressing for sabre cuts, stabs, and gun-shot wounds It is also used by the surgeons of the Allied Navies.

Both the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following cases.

Bunions	Lumbago	Sore Legs	Swelled Glands
Burns	Mercurial	Sore Breasts	Stiff Joints
Chapped Hands	Eruptions	Sore Heads	Ulcers
	Piles	Sore Throats	Venereal Sores
Chilblains	Rheumatism	Sores of all kinds	Wounds of all kinds
Fistulas	Salt Rheum
Gout	Skin Diseases	Sprains	Scalds

The Great Family Weekly Paper

THE NEW YORK LEDGER has now attained the extraordinary circulation of One Hundred and Ninety Thousand copies. The LEDGER is devoted to POLITE LITERATURE, ORIGINAL TALES, SKETCHES, POETRY, ESSAYS, GOSSIP, CURRENT NEWS and maintains a high moral tone. It is every where acknowledged to be the best family paper in the world! Hence its extraordinary and unheard of popularity. Mr BONNER, the Proprietor of the LEDGER, employs the best talent in the country, and by so doing makes the best paper. Such writers as Fanny Fern, Sylvanus Cobb, Jr., and Emerson Bennett, are permanently engaged on it, and will write for no other paper hereafter. Mrs Sigourney, also, constantly writes for it; so do a host of other popular authors, including Mrs. Emma D. E. N. Southworth, Alice Cary, Mrs. Vaughn, Mary W Stanley Gibson, Clara Sydney, &c. &c.. The LEDGER is beautifully illustrated every week

The N Y. LEDGER is printed on beautiful white paper, and is composed of eight pages, making the handsomest weekly paper it the country. It is published every Saturday and sold at all the news offices in every city and town throughout the country; and is mailed for subscribers at two dollars per annum; two copies are sent for three dollars. Any person obtaining eight subscribers at $1 50 each (which is our lowest club rates,) and sending us $12 will be entitled to one copy free Terms invariably in advance. Address all letters to ROBERT BONNER,

Publisher of NEW YORK LEDGER. 44 Ann Street, New York

HEALTH OR SICKNESS.

CHOOSE BETWEEN THEM.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

The blood furnishes the material of every tone, muscle, gland and fibre in the human frame. When pure it secures health to every organ; when corrupt it necessarily produces disease. Holloway's Pills operate directly upon the elements of the stream of life, neutralising the principle of disease and thus radically curing the malady, whether located in the nerves, the stomach the liver, the bowels, the muscles the skin, the brain, or any other part of the system.

USED THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

Holloway's Pills are equally efficacious in complaints common to the whole human race, and in disorders peculiar to certain climates and localities.

ALARMING DISORDERS.

Dyspepsia and derangement of the liver, the source of infirmity and suffering, and the cause of innumerable deaths yield to these curatives in all cases how ever aggravated, acting as a mild purgative alterative and tonic, they relieve the bowels purify the fluids and invigorate the system and the constitution at the same time.

General Weakness.—Nervous Complaints.

When all stimulants fail, the penetrating and bracing properties of these Pills give firmness to the shaking nerves and enfeebled muscles of the victim of general debility.

DELICATE FEMALES.

All irregularities and ailments incident to the delicate and sensitive organs of the sex are removed or prevented by a few doses of these mild but infallible alternatives. No mother who regards her own or her children's health should fail to have them within her reach.

Scientific Endorsements.

The London "Lancet" the London "Medical Review," and the most eminent of the faculty in Great Britain, France and Germany, have eulogized the Pills and their inventor.

Holloway's Pills are the best remedy known in the World for the following Diseases

Asthma.	Diarrhœa	Inflamation	Stone and
Bowel Complaints	Dropsy	Inward weak	Gravel
	Debility	ness	Secondary
Coughs	Fevers	Ague	Liver Com-
Colds	Female Com-	plaints	Symptoms

ONLY ONE BOTTLE.

OF

DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR.

OR LIVER REMEDY.

IS REQUIRED TO CURE ANY ONE TROUBLED WITH LIVER Complaints, unless the most desperate of cases, and the Second bottle will with scarce a single failure, restore the patient to health and Vigor. We wish to call the attention of all to these facts that the Invigorator is compounded by a physician who has used it in his practice for the past twenty years with a success almost incredulous and that it is entirely vegetable being composed wholly of gums.

Some idea of the strength of these gums may be formed when it is known one bottle of the Invigorator contains as much strength as one hundred doses of Calomel without any of its deleterious effects.

One bottle is the surest thing known to carry away the bad effects of mineral poison of any kind

Only one bottle is needed to throw out of the system the effects of medicine after a long sickness.

One bottle taken for Jaundice removes all yellowness or unnatural color from the skin.

One dose after eating is sufficient to relieve the stomach and prevent the food from rising and sour-up.

Only one does taken before retiring prevents nightmare.

One dose taken at night loosens the bowels gently, and cures costiveness.

One dose taken after each meal will cure Dyspepsia.

One dose of two tea sooupful will always relieve the Sick Headache

One bottle taken for female obstruction removes the cause of the disease and makes a perfect cure.

Only one dose immediately relieves Cholic, white.

One dose often repeated is a sure cure for Cholera Morbus and a sure preventative of cholera.

One dose taken often will prevent the recurrence of bilious attacks; while it relieves all painful feelings

☞ One or two doses taken occasionally is one of the best remidies for a cold ever known

Thousands of cases of inflamation and weakness of the lungs have been cured by the invigorator

One dose taken a short time before eating gives vigor to the appetite and makes food digest well

One dose often repeated cures Chronic Diarrhœa in its worst forms while summer and bowel complaints yield almost to the first dose.

One or two doses cures attacks caused by worms, while for worms in children there is no surer, safer and speedier remedy in the world as it never fails.

There is no exaggeration in these statements, they are plain and sober facts, that we can give evidence to prove while all who use it are giving their unanimous testimony in its favor.

We wish all who are sick and debilitated to try this remedy, and test it thoroughly and any who are not benefited by its use we should like to hear from as we have yet to hear from the first person who has used a bottle of invigorator without receiving benefit, for there are such astonishing medicinal virtues in it that all, no matter how long they have been affected if their complaint arises from a deranged liver, will be benefited, if not entirely cured.

NEW READY-PAY

BOOT & SHOE STORE.

The subscribers would respectfully inform the citizens of Tecumseh and the surrounding country, that they have entered into a co partnership for the purpose of carrying on the Boot & Shoe business in all its branches, and hope by close attention to business to merit a liberal share of public patronage. Believing that a Nimble Sixpence is better than a Slow Shilling, they have adopted the ready-pay system for all goods sold in the future. Having just received a new assortment of Goods from The Best Eastern Manufacturers, comprising all the new styles of the season, they would say now is the time, and this is the place for you to buy cheap, and as we intend to keep constantly on hand a seasonable assortment of goods of both Eastern and Domestic manufacture, manufactured from the best Eastern stock the market affords, the public will find it to their interest to call on us, as they can save money by so doing. Small Profits and quick sales will be our motto. All kinds of work made to order on short notice in the best workmanlike manner.

Proclamation to the People of the Realm.

Know all the People that I J. K. Wellman have lately bought of Mr W. Taylor his book establishment, which I have consolidated with my mammoth Store near the Post Office. Know also that I have some $15,000 worth of stock My establishment is now the largest of any Book Store between Cleveland and Chicago. Know also that I am doing a large Wholesale as well as Retail trade, and I can furnish individuals, Town Libraries, Book Agents, Schools and Colleges, on better terms than any other dealer on the line of the Michigan Southern Railroad I am devoting much attention to the School Book Trade and have on hand and can furnish every variety of books used in our Common and High Schools. I keep on hand a variety of Writing Books, Paper, Ink, Pens Slates etc. My stock of Wall Paper is very large and varied.—Bibles large and small. For the benefit of those who live at a distance, I will, for the retail price, sent with order, by mail at my risk, forward any number of books either by Mail or by Express at my own expense. Five dollars will buy six dollars worth of books Ten dollars, twelve, and twenty dollars twenty-five dollars worth of books. Letter paper and envelopes of every style in the same proportion

J. K. Wellman, whose rapid strides from his start on Main Street to his splendid mammoth Book Store in Lothrop's Block three doors west of the Post Office, has been unprecedented in the history of the Book business in our city Mr Wellman, who has had a good experience in the business, has now probably the best and largest assortment of books in the State, and we think a chance at his stock will satisfy any one of the truth of this remark. His great facilities for purchase at low rates, enable him to defy all competition, by selling at a very low figure We congratulate the people of Southern Michigan upon the existence of this mammoth wholesale and retail Book Establishment, and the extensive part it is taking in furnishing books at low rates. We can assure our friends abroad, in this and other counties, that they can buy Books cheaper at Wellman's than at any other place in the west, Come and see.—[Adrian Expositor.

WELLMAN'S LITTERARY EMPORIUM.—Devoted to a Sound, High-toned and healthy Literature, Religion, Freedom, Temperance, Education and all topics calculated to Expand and Elevate the Mind. J. K. Wellman, formerly of the Miscellany, Editor and Proprietor

TERMS—Single copy for a year in advance, $1; Six copies, $5; Thirteen copies, $10; Single number, 10 cents. Money may be sent by mail at the risk of the Publisher Published by J. K. Wellman, Adrian Michigan Emporium Office, in Wellman's Book Store, near the Post Office. Postage six cents a year if paid in advance.

We design to make this periodical what its name imports, an Emporium of Literature It will be independent of party or sect. Free thought, and free expression will be its standing motto. To the extent of our ability we shall advocate the cause of Christianity, Temperance, Freedom, and other subjects which we think calculated to elevate mankind

The Emporium will contain articles from men of various professions and opinions We shall also present various styles; The bold, the original, the terse, the essayic, the sarcastic, the beautiful, sublime, the ideal, and the romantic shall make up its repast. We expect original articles from the following writers; Rev. T. C. Gardner, T. M. Cooley Esq., Rev. George C. Curtis, Andrew Howell Esq Rev. Edward McClure, Lydia Jane Pierson, Rev R. G. Green, M. N. Hulsey, Seba Smith, Delphine Taylor, Rev. O. H. White, Rev. E. H. Pilcher, Professors Churchill, Whipple and Hubbard. Rev's W W Crane, and Luther Lee, C. B Stebbins, and President Tappan

☞ We want 100 Agents in every part of the west, for the Literary Emporium to whom a liberal percentage will be given J. K. WELLMAN.
Book Seller and Publisher, Adrian, Mich

☞ School Teachers who are about closing their winter schools, and will be looking for business, will do well to take an agency for this magazine—With the Emporium, and a small stock of books they can do a good business.

Wellman's Literary Emporium

This new Magazine, J K Wellman Editor and Proprietor, has made its appearance It certainly does great credit to the enterprise and literary taste of Mr. Wellman It is printed by S P & C Jermain from stereotype plates, and contains an original and talented article from the pen of Rev. T. Gardner on "American Civilization" also an original article from the pen of Lydia Jane Pierson, together with oth ers from the pens of G. W. Bethune and others. Mr. Wellman is determined to make this periodical every way of the first order of merit, and worthy a liberal patronage Terms, $1,00 in advance. Office at Wellman's mammoth Book Emporium.—[Adrian Expositor.

A NEW MAGAZINE—ADRIAN ENTERPRISE—About the 5th of February, Mr J. K. Wellman, will issue the first number of his new monthly, The Literary Emporium, a magazine of forty pages of the choisest original and select matter. Mr. Wellman informs us that he designs the Emporium for a family magazine, a fireside companion, and nothing except the most unexceptionable matter will find its way into its columns.

This is a new era in the existance of our young city, and we trust it will be successful as, judging from Mr W's former experience we doubt not it will be. It will do much towards giving our town a reputation abroad —Adrian Watchtower.

MORE BOUNTY LAND.

THE ACT OF CONGRESS, passed March 3d, 1855, gives

160 Acres of Land,

To every Officer, Soldier, Musician, in the Army; or man, Marine, Clerk, or Landsman in the Navy, who served fourteen days, or was in any battle in any war since 1790, or to their widows or minor children—embracing officers and soldiers of

WAYNE'S WAR,
WAR OF 1812,
BLACK HAWK WAR,
PATRIOT WAR,
FLORIDA WAR,
AROOSTOOK WAR,
MEXICAN WAR.

ALSO, the Revolutionary Soldiers or their Widows In cases where 160 acres have been received under former Acts of Congress, no more can be drawn; but those who have been allowed a Warrant for 40 or 80 acres are now entitled to a Warrant for enough more to make up 160 acres.

P. S. We have faithful and experienced Agents in Washington, and we make no charge in any case unless we obtain the land.

☞ The second, third or fourth marriage of a widow, does not impair her claim under this act, if she is a widow at the time of her application.

Persons under the age of 21 years on the 3d of March, 1855, are regarded minors by this act.

Those having claims, will have them promptly attended to by calling on or writing (post paid,) to BILLS & BAXTER, Tecumseh.

LINES.

Addressed to certain musical Friends, on their departure from Brooklyn, Feb. 9, 1857

Has the "good time" gone by? and shall
The same no longer hide
Those thrilling sounds that so refresh'd
The spirits, year by year?

Must we bitterly bathe those boding words
Which drew the gentle rain
Last night from many a heart-felt eye
"We'll ne'er be here again!"

No, blessed Miss-tyes, happier times,
Good times are yet in store,
When Brooklyn's oath ring-ceive shall hear
Your matchless tones once more!

For ye have hearts and when afar
On eastern hills ye tread
Ye'll think of Methune, and wish
The feelings were shared

Yes, ye will remember some
Who joined you here in song,
And hail'd your presence in their home,
With rapture-trolling tongue;

Who felt, when standing by your side,
The enchanting croud
Burst their con-notes to bark—whilst yours
Triumphant, pearl crowned

And surely will you gladly grasp
Ane more such friendly hand
To mark the earnest eye-and that
Our welcomes for your band

You'll think of many a youthful voice
Your sweet influence turn'd
To nich'ty songs thence too (thro' grace)—
Join'd by a heart that burn'd—

To "Zion's hill—to Zion's God:"
And ah! its not a vain
Fond thought—that you will long to meet
Those youthful ones again.

You'll think of some, in years more ripe
Who trudg'd, mid toil and pain,
Life's dusty path, without a thought
Beyond life's fleeting gain.

Till Jennie's soaring sphit-notes
Touch'd some electric wire
That dash'd the rubbish from the soul's
Unfelt and smould'ring fire!

And warmly will you wish to watch—
To fan that struggling flame,
And bid it leap to those nigh realms
From whence its natue came!

One too, is here, whose silver locks
Proclaim his goal nigh won;
I'll loves to gaze on cherub smiles—
To list an angel tone.

And as he lists and gazes thus,
To think how blest twill be—
Basking amid such sixpts and sounds
Thro' all eternity!

Will you not bid his eyes
Light up again with joy,
When Matron mild and village Swain
Maiden and woodland Boy

Ring wildly out thro' every bower
And grove from home to home,
Over the hills and down the turn
"Once more the Minstrels come!"

From the Ladies Cabinet Repository for

Female Sharp Practice

Some years ago a young gentleman living in Crawford county "went west," settled in a western city, and became rich. He married a lady residing in the city where he located. After he had been married about six months, he prepared to visit Crawford county in company with his bride. But a few days before he was to start he was accidentally killed by a crate of crockery falling on him from the second story of his warehouse. The event was duly communicated to his family in Ohio. That was about eighteen months ago.

About three months since, the father of the deceased was startled to see a carriage driving up to his door. A very interesting lady, dressed in mourning, stepped out and introduced herself as the widow of the dead son. Great was the joy of the household at the visit of their beloved son and brother's relict. She said she was going to Rhode Island, and could not resist the opportunity of seeing the parents and relatives of her "beloved Harry." This was accompanied by a flood of tears and "furnace sighs." Three weeks passed by, and she had worked her way deep into the affections of the family. She was regarded as a daughter—as a sister. The hour came for her departure—they had exchanged miniatures—the fare wells were said—the blubbering was at its very height, when she called the old gentleman to one side and with great embarrassment told him that she had lost her pocketbook on the cars, containing about a trifle of her funds. She felt a diffidence in making the request, but if the could get a supply to her beloved Harry's fathers, to whom could she go. The old man's heart melted, and in a moment his wallet was produced, and ten X's of the Seneca County Bank were tendered and accepted. She departed—alas, that dear friends must part! Time flew, and a month passed, but nothing was heard from "beloved Harry's relict." The old gentlemen became alarmed, and addressed a letter to the father of his son's wife, detailing the circumstances of her visit. An answer came. It stated that the widow of his late son was at home—had not been away—and that from the description given, the woman who personated her was a servant girl who had lived with them, and had gleaned enough of the history of Harry's family in Ohio to enable her to play his wife.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Colds, Coughs, and Hoarseness.

BENNINGTON, MASS., 20th Dec. 1855.

DR. J. C. AYER: I do not hesitate to say that the best medicine I have ever found for Coughs, Hoarseness, Influenza, and the concomitant symptoms of a Cold, is your Cherry Pectoral. Its obnoxiant use in my practice and my family for the last ten years has shown it to possess superior virtues for the treatment of these complaints. ERSKINE KNIGHT, M. D.

A. B. MORTLEY, Esq., of Utica, N. Y., writes: "I have used your Pectoral myself and in my family ever since you presented it, and believe it the best medicine for its purposes now in use. With a bad cold I should sooner pay twenty five dollars for a bottle than do without it, or take any other remedy."

Croup, Whooping Cough, Influenza.

SPRINGFIELD, Miss., Feb. 7, 1856.

BROTHER AYER: I will cheerfully certify your PECTORAL is the best remedy we possess for the cure of Whooping Cough, Croup, and the chief diseases of children. We of your fraternity in the South appreciate your skill, and commend your medicine to our people.

HIRAM CONKLIN, M. D.

AMOS LEE, Esq., MONTERY, Ia., writes, 31 Jan., 1856: "I had a tedious Influenza, which confined me in doors six weeks; took many medicines without relief; finally tried your PECTORAL by the advice of our clergyman. The first dose relieved the soreness in my throat and lungs: less than one half the bottle made me completely well. Your medicines are the cheapest as well as the best we can buy, and we esteem you, Doctor, and your remedies, as our best friends."

Asthma or Phthisic, and Bronchitis.

WEST MANCHESTER, Pa., Feb. 4, 1856.

SIR: Your CHERRY PECTORAL is performing marvellous cures in this section. It has relieved several from alarming symptoms of consumption, and is now curing a man who has labored under an affection of the lungs for the last forty years. HENRY L. PARKS, Merchant.

A. A. RAMSEY, M. D., ALBION, MONROE Co., Iowa, writes, Sept. 6, 1855: "During my practice of many years I have found nothing equal to your CHERRY PECTORAL for giving ease and relief to consumptive patients, or curing such as are curable."

We might add volumes of evidence, but the most convincing proof of the virtues of this remedy is found in its effects upon trial.

Consumption.

Probably no one remedy has ever been known which cured so many and such dangerous cases as this. Some no human aid can reach; but even to those the CHERRY PECTORAL affords relief and comfort.

ASTOR HOUSE, NEW YORK CITY, March 8, 1856

DOCTOR AYER, LOWELL: I feel it a duty and a pleasure to inform you what your CHERRY PECTORAL has done for my wife. She had been five months laboring under the dangerous symptoms of Consumption, from which no aid we could procure gave her much relief. She was steadily failing, until Dr. Strong, of this city, where we have come for advice, recommended a trial of your medicine. We bless his kindness, as we do your skill, for she has recovered from that day. She is well yet as strong as she used to be, but is free from her cough, and calls herself well.

Yours with gratitude and regard,

ORLANDO SHELBY, of SHELBYVILLE.

Consumptives, do not despair till you have tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It is made by one of the best medical chemists in the world, and its cures all around us bespeak the high merits of its virtues. — Philadelphia Ledger.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

THE sciences of Chemistry and Medicine have been taxed their utmost to produce this best, most perfect purgative which is known to man. Innumerable proofs are shown that these PILLS have virtues which surpass in excellence the ordinary medicines, and that they win unprecedentedly upon the esteem of all men. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. Their penetrating properties stimulate the vital activities of the body, remove the obstructions of its organs, purify the blood, and expel disease. They purge out the foul humors which breed and grow distemper, stimulate sluggish or disordered organs into their natural action, and impart healthy tone with strength to the whole system. Not only do they cure the every-day complaints of every body, but also formidable and dangerous diseases that have baffled the best of human skill. While they produce powerful effects, they are at the same time, in diminished doses, the safest and best physic that can be employed for children. Being sugar-coated, they are pleasant to take; and being purely vegetable, are free from any risk of harm. Cures have been made which surpass belief were they not substantiated by men of such exalted position and character as to forbid the suspicion of untruth. Many eminent clergymen and physicians have lent their names to certify to the public the reliability of my remedies, while others have sent me the assurance of their conviction that my Preparations contribute immensely to the relief of my afflicted, suffering fellow men.

The Agent below named is pleased to furnish gratis my American Almanac, containing directions for their use and certificates of their cures, of the following complaints:—

Costiveness, Bilious Complaints, Rheumatism, Dropsy, Weakness, Headache arising from a foul Stomach, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Morbid Inaction of the Bowels and Pain arising therefrom, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, all Ulcerous and Cutaneous Diseases which require an evacuant Medicine, Scrofula or King's Evil. They also, by purifying the blood and stimulating the system, cure many complaints which it would not be supposed they could reach, such as Deafness, Partial Blindness, Neuralgia and Nervous Irritability, Derangements of the Liver and Kidneys, Gout, and other kindred complaints arising from a low state of the body or obstruction of its functions.

Do not be put off by unprincipled dealers with some other pill they make more profit on. Ask for AYER'S PILLS, and take nothing else. No other they can give you compares with this in its intrinsic value or curative powers. The sick want the best aid there is for them, and they should have it.

DR. EVERSON'S Great American Remedy for Ague, or Chills and Fever, is the most popular and certain remedy now known. The people and the press speak of it in the highest terms of commendation. It is pleasant to take, does not purge, vomit or sweat, but invigorates the system. It contains no Arsenic, Strichnine, Quinine, or any other poisonous or injurious drug, but it is an originally discovered Antidote to Malaria and is an Ague Killer. It has no equal. CERTIFICATES

Almost without number, might here be adduced, from Physicians, Clergymen, officers of State, and private individuals; but the following will suffice:

From our intimate knowledge of Dr Everson, and the extraordinary virtues of his Ague remedy—being apprized of its constituents, and knowing, as we do, that it contains neither Arsenic, Quininine, Strichnine, Mercury or any poisonous or injurious drugs, we heartily commend it, and also his Family Phisic, or Cathartic Pills, as medicines deserving the approbation of an intelligent public.

OH!—AH!

Mr. A.—Good morning. Sir! Where have you been this morning so early

Mr. B.—Oh, look in my carriage and see if you can tell where I have been

A.—Dear me! that looks like work compared with some I have had done within the last year. Have you had all this work done this morning?

B.—Certainly. He holds himself in readiness at all times, to accommodate those who will pay; he keeps SHAVES and NAILS and other Stock on hand. I think he is the best hand at all kinds of work that can be produced in the whole section of country around.

A.—Well, I shall call on him this very morning, for I want to get back to my work this forenoon. Oh! I liked to have forgot to ask you where he has opened his new shop!

B.—It is in the Brick Shop, near Anderson and Brower's Furnace.

A.—What right by the Railroad?

B.—Yes.

A.—Don't it scare the horses?

B.—No, not but a very little! Some do not notice it at all. STEARNS & CO

THE NEW SPECIAL

Topographical Map of

Lenawee county, Mich.,

From original surveys and actual measurement throughout the whole county, by Bechler and Wenig, Surveyors and Civil Engineers, Authors of Maps of Allegany, Schoharie, and Broome County, N. Y., and Washtenaw Co., Mich.

The subscribers, who have been engaged in compiling a map of Lenawee County since 14 months, are about to review the whole work in order to correct even the slightest error, if any should have occured. The same time they will obtain subscribers for the enterprise, which is connected with immense labor and expense.

The Map is about 3x5 feet in size, and contains every public road with all its angular deviations, and correct distances between Stores, Mills, Shops, &c.; also, section and farm lines with the owner's name engraved to it; Views of Public buildings, Plans of every village in the County on the margin forming not only a correct and complete, but also an ornamental Map, and will be handsomely colored, mounted and furnished to subscribers for $5 per copy.

BECHLER, WENIG & CO.,
Adrian & Philadelphia

The undersigned having examined Messrs. Bechler & Wenig's Surveys of Lenawee Co. take pleasure in recommending their Map to the citizens of this County, as being in our opinion, very accurate, reliable and practical Map, and complete County Directory and well worthy their liberal patronage. Considering the expense attending its survey procuring so accurately all the names, localities, distances, town plats, farm lines, views etc., and the limited sale it may necessarily meet with upon account of its being strictly local work" we think they offer it very reasonable, and have subscribed for the Map.

From Kansas

We have, in the Missouri Democrat and Chicago Tribune, some items of interest from Kansas. Gen. Richardson, who was a member of the Upper House, (Council,) died a week ago on Saturday. He was one of the most active of the pro slavery leaders. He has never been a resident of Kansas Territory, but resided in Buchanan county, Missouri, from which place his family have come to attend his funeral. He had, however, a saw mill and other property interests in Kansas and was appointed a General by the Bogus Legislature at its first session.—Capt. Walker, another pro-slavery leader, who was indicted for murder some time ago, has, at the earnest request of Geary, surrendered himself, and has been bailed under the new murder act; and will be let off easy. His bonds are $13,000.—The bill providing for the census, and other machinery of the State Convention, has passed, and puts all the power in the hands of the pro-slavery managers. Indeed, the Free State men regard the laws passed at this session as more infamous than those that disgraced the first assembly. They are framed with such deliberate and careful experince as will render them formidable weapons of oppression, more especially as Gov. Geary intends to see them enforced. We may look for a continued legal persecution against every Free State man who dares to take a prominent position. One of these laws is to "Punish Rebellion." It is a ferocious and diabolical act, which, in the hands of the pro slavery Inquisitors, will be a second edition of the cruel tyranny of the dark ages. The Legislature, having "fulfilled its destiny," adjourned on the 13th of February. The Governor kept two companies of military at his elbow during the session, to prevent the Legislature from being mobbed by the people too, noted by telegraph, was a pretty serious affair. The Geary meeting presented two sets of resolutions, one of which censured Sherrod, who got on the stand, and declared that any body who voted to them was "a coward and a liar." Mr. Shepard, a pro-slavery man, contradicted him, which brought matters to a crisis. The firing was in a dense crowd, and it is wonderful that so little mischief was done. A great many shots were fired, but finally a ball was put through Sherrod's head, which put an end to the affair. Only three persons were wounded and two—Sherrod—killed.

TESTING LIQUOR.—A man travelling, entered a tavern, and seeing no one present but the landlord and a negro, seated himself and entered into conversation with the negro. Shortly he asked Sambo if he was dry. Sambo said he was. Stranger told him to go to the bar and take something at his expense. Negro did so, and shortly left. Landlord says to the stranger:

"Are you acquainted with that nigger"

"No, never saw him before; but why do you ask?"

"I supposed so from your conversation with him, and asking him to drink."

"No, said the stranger, I was only experimenting. The fact is, I was dry myself, and I thought that if your liquor did'nt kill the negro in fifteen minutes, I would venture to take a drink myself."

☞ The Joliet (Illinois) Democrat says, "a sad, but beautiful and touching scene was witnessed at the accident of the DuPage Bridge. On the morning after the accident, the slow tolling of a bell was heard. On looking to see whence it came, it was discovered to proceed from the engine, as it lay submerged in the water. The waves as they foamed and surged over the sunken engine, swayed the bell, which alone with the smoke-pipe, appeared above water, and caused it to give a slow tolling sound. When the engine was raised from the water, the engineer was found in a standing posture, with his stiff, cold, icy hand firmly grasping the throttle-valve, as though amid the thick darkness he had discovered the perilous condition of the train, and had sprung to avert the ruin. But it was too late; the engine and train, with its precious freight of life and property went down, and during the dreary night, the engine-bell and the mad rushing waters rang out a solemn requiem for the dead! It is probable that had not the freight train gone down as it did, the passenger train from Chicago, due two hours later, and loaded with sleeping passengers, would itself have taken the fearful plunge."

There is a good time coming.

A Wolf in the City

It is said that there was a veritable big gray, lean, famished wolf—a regular orthodox denizen of the forest—prowling about our streets in the storm last night, seeking whom he might devour.

A young man who tends the saloon under the American House, named D. P. Browman, informs us that he had a recontre with him near the residence of Baron Moore, on Washington Avenue, at about five o'clock this morning. He was on his way from the boarding house to the saloon. He first heard him howl; in a short time his worship came up and made a leap at his throat. The young man was unarmed, except with a pocket knife, but by dint of kicking and striking, and some dodging, succeeded in keeping his assailant at bay until he got that weapon out and opened. He then gave the ravenous beast a cut that made him a little more wary, and in this manner he fought his way to the American House. The wolf jumped upon him a number of times, and made several fearful rents in his shawl and pantaloons.

Soon after lighting up the saloon, preparatory to putting things in order for the business of the day, a portly Teuton burst in the door, with hair standing on end, and face where fright had blanched every trace of lager, exclaiming:

"Oh, mein Got!! mein Got!! Der bear is gomin. Er gomes at me in der sthreet, and vil eat me up, altogedder."

After partially recovering his self-possession, and fortifying his courage by a stout dose of Schnapps, Hans and Browman sallied forth, with a large fire-shovel and a knife, for a second encounter.—They found the ferocious animal in waiting in the middle of the street, and succeeded, by a vigorous application of the former weapon, in indeing him to decamp.

Our impression was, on first hearing Mr. Browman insists that he is familiar with the appearance of wolves and was not mistaken.

One of our pressmen who had been at work all night, also had a similar encounter with the animal, when leaving the office a little after five o'clock, this morning in front of Bruen's Block. He is also positive that it was a wolf. The latter sprang at him several times, he had an umbrella, and kept him off by spreading it in his face, after the manner of the lady in India, who discomfited a tiger by a similar stratagem. Our boys are all strictly temperate, and the theory that any of them should mistake the strictly ornamental cast-iron lions at the bottom of the stairs, for live and savage beasts and imagine that he had a dangerous conflict with them, is not to be entertained for a moment.

Seriously, then, from all accounts, the animal in question seems to have been a wolf without doubt, and a hungry one at that. Our Common Council will doubtless take the matter in hand at the next meeting, and pass an ordinance prohibing such forest interlopers from intruding within the city limits. It is bad enough to tolerate the numerous "tigers" that infest our city, and prey upon the unwary stranger, without the superaddition of ferocious, and famished fourlegged beasts of this description.

P. S.—Since writing the above, we have heard a report, about town, to the effect that a man was assaulted and eaten up by wolves, last night some four miles north west of this city.—Madison (Wis) Journal, Feb. 7

☞ Who loved the Sunday School? Not an idle miss, who wasted the early morning hours in bed, and came down stairs last Sabbath, yawning and simpering as she took her seat alone at the breakfast table. "It's too late to go to Sunday school now, and I'm glad of it, for I don't feel like going to-day."

That miss did not love the Sunday school. But Miss Veargalum, a little East Indian girl did. She had a queer name, but that was not her fault. Well, little Miss Veargalum fainted one morning at sunday school. When she recovered, her teacher said:

"What made you faint, my dear?"

"I don't know, ma'am," she replied, "unless it was because I came to school without my breakfast this morning."

"Without your breakfast, child," exclaimed the teacher. "But why did you come without your breakfast?"

"My breakfast was not ready in time, ma'am, replied the simple-hearted child, and I came without it, because I was afraid of being too late!"

That girl loved the Sunday school.—Don't you think so children?"

Old Letters.

BY LORA F. COBB.

There's a package of old letters in the little, rosewood box,
Which the key tied to this locket, worn upon my heart unlocks;
Will you go and get the package, and the letters read to me?
I have tried to do it often, but for tears I could not see.

You have brought them—thank you, darling—now sit down upon the bed,
And lift gently to your bosom my poor throbbing, burning head;
Read the blessed words distinctly that I loose not even one;
Ah, the precious hand that penned them, its last work for me is done!

But if you should ever see him, whom I never more shall see,
Tell him that the sweetest solace his dear letters were to me;
That I never ceased to love him, never doubted that he loved;
That my faith in him was perfect, and remained thro' all unmoved.

And Oh! tell him when he came not, as he promised he would come,
If I could not choose but sorrow, that my grief for him was dumb;
That I never yet reproached him, ne'er a word of censure spoke;
That his memory must be gentle to the heart his coldness broke.

Tell him through the years which followed, when no tidings from him came,
Nor his absence, nor his silence, was I ever heard to blame;
Oh, this wild desire to see him, God subdue within my breast!
For it racks me into torture, and my soul hath need of rest.

When I'm dead, and in my coffin, and the shroud about me wound,
And my narrow bed is ready, in the pleasant churchyard ground,
Lay the locket and the letters, both together on my heart!
And this little ring he gave me, never from my finger part.

Now, I'm ready—read the letters—the dear letters once again;
As I listen while you read them, I shall loose all sense of pain;
And if, when you have finished, I should gently fall asleep—
Gently fall asleep and wake not—dearest sister, do not weep

In the door of a New-England cottage sat a little child, at the close of a summer Sabbath day. The twilight was fading, and as the shades of evening deepened into darkness, one after another of the stars stood out in the sky and looked down on the child in his thoughtful mood. He looked up into the mysterious chambers above him, and counted the bright spots as they came, till his eyes grew weary of watching the worlds light, which to him were only holes in heaven's floor to let the glory through. And the child became so thoughtful in his reveries that his mother said to him.

"What are you thinking of, my son?"

He started, as if suddenly awakened from a dream, and when she repeated the inquiry, he could only say, "I was thinking"—

"Yes, my dear child, I know you were thinking, and I wish you would tell your mother what you were thinking of?"

"Oh," said he, and his little eyes sparkled in the dark with the thoughts upon his lips—

"Oh, mother, I want to be an angel!

"And would you tell me, my precious boy, why you would be an angel?"

"Heaven is always up there, mother, and God is there, and the angels love him, and are so good and so happy; I want to be good and go there to love God, and be an angel to wait on him forever."

There was something so like the voice of heaven in these child-words, that the mother—proud of her son, but trembling for her treasure—called him to her knee, and as she laid his head upon her bosom and wept, she thought she had been warned as in a vision. But she was wise, as well as fond in her affection, and she kissed his forehead and smoothed his silken hair, and in a low, gentle voice told him to be a good boy, and by-and-by he should be an angel among angels. His young heart was comforted. He sat on her knee for an hour, and asked strange, deep questions, which the mother could not always answer; and then he knelt by her side, and with her soft hand on his head, he repeated his evening prayer. A few evenings afterward he was in his cot a-sleep, dreaming perhaps of heaven.

Within less than a quarter of a year, when the summer was gone, but the mellow autumn was yet lingering and the leaves had changed to fall, the child fell sick, and the light of that cottage and the joy of that mother's heart went out. He breathed his last in her arms; and as he took her parting kiss, he whispered in her ear, "I am going to be an angel!"

Adventure With A Tiger.

It was in the cold season, that a few of the civil and military officers belonging to the station Asscarghur, in India, agreed to make a shooting excursion in the vicinity of Agra; and it gave occasion to an animated scene. A convenient spot had been selected for the tents, beneath the spreading branches of huge banyan; peacocks glittered in the sun upon the lower boughs, and troops of monkeys grinned and chattered above. The horses were fastened under the surrounding trees, and there fanned off the insects with their flowing tails, and pawed the ground with their graceful feet; farther off stood a stately elephant, watching the progress of his evening repast, prepared by his driver and taking under his special protection the pets of his master, a small dog, and a handsome bird six feet high, decked in plumage of lilac and black, and accompanied of goats, who, knowing their safest asylum kept to his trunk, or under his huge limbs. Beyond reposed a group of camels with their drivers, some lying down, others standing or kneeling. Numerous white bullocks, the companions in labor, rested at their feet white pack-saddles, panniers and sacks piled around, completed the picture.

Within the circle of the camp a lively scene was passing, fires blazed in every quarter, and sundry operations of roasting boiling and frying were going on in the open air. Every fire was surrounded by a busy crowd, all engaged in that important office—preparation for the evening meal. The interior of the tents also presented an animated spectacle as the servants were putting them in order for the night; they were lighted with lamps, the walls hung with chints or tiger skins, carpets were spread upon the ground, and sofas surrounded by curtains of transparrusses, to deaden sound; precaution against ished swords and daggers, silver-mounted pistols and guns, with knives and boarspears, and the guilded bows, arrows and quivers, of native workmanship, were scattered around. The tables were covered with European books and newspapers so that it was necessary to be continually reminded by some savage object, that these temporary abodes were placed in the heart of an Indian forest. The vast number of persons—the noise, bustle and many fires about the camp, precluded every idea of danger—and the gentlemen of the party collected together in front of the tents, conversed carelessly with each other or amused themselves with looking about them.

While thus indolently beguiling the few minutes which had to elapse before they were summoned to dinner, a full grown tiger of the largest size, sprang suddenly into the center of the group, seized one of the party in his extended jaws, and bore him away into the wood with a rapidity that defied pursuit. The loud outcries raised by those whose faculties were not paralyzed by terror and consternation only served to increase the tiger's speed. Though scarcely a moment had elapsed, not a trace of the animal remained, so impenetrable was the thicket through which he had retreated; but notwithstanding the apparent hopelessness of the case, no means which human prudence could suggest, was left untried. Torches were instantly collected weapons hastily snatched up, and the whole party rushed into the forest—some beating the bushes on every side, while others pressed their way through the tangled underwood, in a state of anxiety incapable of description.

The victim selected by the tiger was an officer whose presence of mind and dauntless courage, in the midst of the most appalling danger, most providentially enabled him to meet the exigences of his situation. Neither the anguish he endured from the wounds already received the horrible manner in which he was hurried along through brush and brake, and the prospect before him of a dreadful death, subdued the firmness of his spirit; and meditating with the utmost coolness upon the readiest means of effecting his own deliverance, he proceeded cautiously with the attempt. He wore a brace of pistols in his belt, and the tiger having seized him by the waist, his arms were consequently left at liberty. Applying his hand to the monster's side he ascertained the exact position of the heart; then drawing out his pistol, placed the muzzle to the part, and fired. Perhaps some slight tremor in his own fingers, or a jerk occasioned by the rough road and brisk pace of the animal, caused the ball to miss its aim, and a tighter grip and an accelerated trot, alone announced the wound he had received. A moment of inexpressible anxiety ensued, yet, undismayed by the ill-success of his effort, and painfully aware that he now possessed only a single chance for life, the heroic individual prepared, with more careful deliberation, to make a fresh attempt. He felt for the pulsations of the heart a second time, placed his remaining pistol firmly against the vital part, and drew the trigger with a steadier hand, and with a surer precision. The jaws suddenly relaxed their grasp, and the tiger dropped dead beneath his burden! The triumph of the victor, as he surveyed the lifeless body of the animal stretched upon the ground, was subdued by the loss of blood and the pain of his wounds. He was uncertain, too, whether his failing strength would enable him to reach the camp even if he could be certain of finding the way to it; but his anxiety upon this point was speedily ended by the shouts which met his ear, those of his friends searching for him. He staggered onward in the direction whence the sounds proceeded, and issued from the thicket, covered with blood and exhausted, but free from wounds of a mortal nature.—[Sinclair.

Disappearance of a R R Train in a River.

The Illinois papers give the particulars of an appalling accident which occurred on the Chicago and Rock Island Railroad a few days since, about five miles from Joliet, at the crossing of the DuPage river, which resulted in the loss of three human lives and seven car loads of horses. The heavy rains of Friday had swollen the river until it overflowed its banks, covered the bottom and submerged the track on both sides of the bridge.

A freight train, consisting of the locomotive, tender and seven cars loaded with horses, approached this river on Saturday. The engineer, ignorant of any obstruction, and confident in the firmness and safety of the road, though covered with water, held on his way, plowing through a stream two feet deep, guided by the iron track, until he reached the bridge, when the appalling fact was revealed that the swollen river had not only submerged the bridge, but swept it away!

Locomotive, tender and seven cars with freight of horses one after another, disappeared beneath the surface of the stream deep enough, by reason of the freshet, to hide from view every vestage of the train. Down with it went all in charge of it, and three of them were lost. One human life destroyed overbalances the destruction of a thousand horses. But who can think without a shudder, of those seven cars closely confining, beyond all hope of escape, their noble freight of horses? And who without a thrill, can picture to his imagination the frantic death struggles of those helpless animals, as with the falling train they took the fatal plunge, and amid gurgling and in rushing waters, died, their car of easy transportation proving their coffins and their tomb!

☞ How the Boys were Sold.—We notice that some of our nice young men were "slightly" taken in, while going their rounds on New Years Day. They found coffee, where they reasonably—or unreasonably—expected something stronger, but like true Lotharios, they gulped down the Rio dose and laughed it off. But one fair hostess—not content with enforcing total abstinence for the day, provided an album for the autographs of all her guests, and before night half a hundred "fast" men had unconsciously signed their names to a pledge to abstain from the use of all intoxicating liquor until the recurrence of another New Year. May they be wise enough to sign a moral pledge in their hearts and keep it.—St Paul Times.

☞ A gentleman sent his black servant to purchase a fresh fish. He went to a stall, and taking up a fish, began to smell it. The fishmonger observing him, and fearing least the bystanders might catch the scent, exclaimed:

"Hallo! you black rascal, what do you smell my fish for?"

"Me no smell your fish, massa."

"What are you doing then?"

"Me talk to 'em, massa."

"And what do you say to the fish, my friend?"

"Me ask him what de news at sea, dat's all, massa."

"And what does he say?"

"He say he don't know; he not been dare dis tree week."

My Birth day.

Oh! I am weary of the world
And glad would leave it now
Though scarce a score of years have pressed
Their signets on my brow

For all is dark and drear to me,
And clouds close vail the sky;
I long to see those days gone by
I've waited anxiously.

But when I e'er began to think,
"One ray of light is mine."
Another cloud would quickly rise
Forbidding it to shine.

I've sought for friends, and found them false,
And ready to deceive,
And now I look around and say,
Why should I wish to live.

What Jesus thou hast power to bless,
Oh, look on me in love;
And give me of that happiness
That cometh from above.

Without thy smile, death brings but woe,
Oh, grant me then this boon!
Teach me to love Thee, more and more,
And take me to Thee soon. H. L.

Feel What You Write.

"I plight from my soul, unhappy man,
Compelled by want to prostitute the pen,
Who must like lawyers, either starve or plead,
And follow right or wrong, where Genius lead."

To a writer as well as a speaker, the sense of feeling has an influence which although imperceptible to himself, yet, without which his productions however ably penned, will lack that grace, dignity and sublimity which alone has power to sway the reader, and the more intense the feeling the more striking the effect. Although the power of logical argument is mighty and may rule great minds yet when a writer may wish to enter into the circle of every day life—may desire to instil into the minds of the mass, some great and important truths, hard, dry, logic, without feeling will never attain the desired end Struck by the simplicity and ardor with which a writer enforces his sentiments, many a mind has been let to soar above the gross walks of depraved nature, and branching out seek for itself, food of knowledge, gems of truth the beauty of which described with such feeling has power, felt not only by itself but exercised by it over others To be an orator or a writer one must enter with feeling into his subject,—cold unacting feeling will freeze the sensibilities of the reader—while the deep, ardent and fervent will melt the heart. Certainly in this we do perceive as much as writers is a duty to write with a soul and prostitute the pen no more.

Why is it we but seldom see among all our periodicals—our newspapers, those soul-thrilling pieces, the very language of which shows where the heart of the writer is? We have standards of high and noble men, handed down to us to follow among whom, is a Henry Clay and Daniel Webster, names which every son and daughter of America love to speak, and why? They live in their writings, their hearts seem yet beating in the written page,—there is no dulness there—no lack of feeling, and their power is felt. Nor are they all dead—many, very many there are who "live, though dead."

We all can speak with feeling, why not write? Does the mere handling of the pen change the current of the mind? Surely not! There is no philosophy for it—a writer can write with the same degree of feeling with which he can speak and although on some the effect may not be so great, yet on others it will be more.

A penny-a-liner may advance some thoughts, with feeling but as a general thing the completed, the penny gained is all he seeks. The times demand a general revolution, a moral renovation and a balancing equality of human society and by what means are these to be obtained if not by writing and speaking. It is a duty which we owe our fellow-men, for the truth is that knowledge is a common property and those who possess it are bound to distribute it for the benefit of others. The impulse of man is to struggle against man a waring with the element that composes human nature and yet there may be seen a noble principle a self acting sincere feeling—the touch-stone to liberty, the wire-spring to action. ALEX.

☞ The Times says an attempt was made to overpower the Deputy Sheriff of Ottawa county, on Sunday last. As he entered the room in the jail where young Connell, who committed the murder in Grand Haven, on New Years', was confined in company with another prisoner, arrested on charge of forgery, an attempt was made by Connell to strike him with a club which he had fashioned for the purpose out of a stick of stove wood; but the officer, seeing the attempt, caught the club and wrested it from the hand of the prisoner. This done, an attempt was made by the other to stab him with an open dirk-like pocket knife; this blow was also avoided and thus the vigilance of the Deputy Sheriff no doubt saved him from bodily injury, and possibly preserved his life.

There is a good time coming.

The Dred Scott Case.

The entire North has been more than surprised, it has been shocked and startled at the serious innovations, and legal aspects of the recent decision of a majority of the Supreme Court of the United States in this case.

What the points there decided were, will be seen in another column of this issue How they are calculated to effect us as freemen, and as American citizens no one need be at a loss to preceive.

When a few years ago we were told that Slavery was a local institution, with which we at the North had nothing to do, and which in any event could never effect us in any way, there may have been those among us who then believed it, but those who then felt that they had reason to question this, have no reason to change their opinion now. It no longer needs any action on our part to Nationalize Slavery, it is nationalized already, without us, and in spite of us.

The Constitution of the United States, an instrument formed expressly "for the establishment of justice, and to secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our prosterity," is thus declared potent only for the restriction of liberty, and the protection and extension of Slavery Such a construction of such an instrument may indeed be well calculated to excite alarm, and to put us upon the inquiry, as to what what barrier or guarrantee shall be here after considered a sufficient security or protection against the inroads of so subtle a foe

Your attention has oftentimes been called to the peculiar organization of this Supreme Court of the United States, and the remarkable fact that, as to locality, four of the nine judges composing it represented six millions of slave holders of the South, while the remaining four, were deemed sufficient to represent sixteen million of the freemen of the North The reason why the South sought that this should be so, may perhaps now begin to be sufficiently apparent to every one, but why the North should have permitted it, manifest treason as it is, and has proven to be to their dearest rights and interests.

In the simple catering to Southern wishes, for the sake of southern votes, in which political parties here tofore have exhibited such an unscrupulous, and ingenious rivalry, it cannot be supposed that any one foresaw or intended such utter treason to the rights and interests of their own firesides and homes, as has since come to be its bitter fruits. No one would be ready to charge or believe this

But as to its tendency and results there is no longer room for doubt. The next important question to us is—where it will end, and how the evils which it has imposed upon us, are to be best met, and remedied

That this will be eventually done, we will not permit ourselves to doubt It cannot be otherwise. The eighteen millions of the North were never made nor meant to be slaves. It matters not, that six millions of our citizens mistaking their own true interests, and disregarding the rights and wishes of so large a majority of the whole, shall for the time secure the patronage of the federal government, or the endorsement of the federal courts, the numerical disparity will and must still continue. The prosperity too, incident to the one condition, and the infirmity and unthriftness of the other will continue, until at length even partizan zeal can no longer blind the eyes of men to their own true intesests, and the right, and freedom with the right shall triumphantly prevail.

Hunt's Merchants' Magazine.

The March No of Hunt is received — Among its leading articles we should notice "Political economy" by Amasa Walker of Mass "Americans and American Trade at Constantinople" by John P. Brown, of the U S Legation at Constantinople, "European Correspondence No 11" by George Train, "Mercantile Biography—Life of Seth Sprague" &c. &c. Published monthly by Freeman Hunt 142 Fulton St. N. The March No of this excellent Magazine is received, and like all the rest welcome to our exchanges. Its embellishments are of a high order, containing two beautiful engravings, entitled "View from Mt. Ida" (near Troy,) and "The Kittens." Its contents as usual are valuable, and its Typography and material unexceptional. Published by Swormstedt & Poe, Cincinnati O D. W. Clark D D Editor. Terms $2. per annum.

Peterson's Lady's National Magazine.

The April No of this justly popular Magazine is promptly upon our table Its colored Fashion Plates, and patterns for Ladies' work will attract attention, Many of its reading articles too are of a high order. "Loves' Labor Won" continued by Mrs. Southworth, loses none of its interest as it progresses. It is edited by Mrs. Ann S Stephens and C. J. Peterson, and Published by C. J. Peterson, 102 Chestnut St. Philad. Terms $2, per annum. The March No for some reason failed to come to hand. Will Mr Peterson supply it to our table?

JOURNAL OF EDUCATION.—The Journal of Education for this State, Edited and published by J. M. Gregory, Ann Arbor, assisted by the best Educational talent in the State, is duly received and appreciated. Its subscription price is $1, per annum. Each School District in the State is entitled to a copy, by the act of our late Legislature.

HEAVY MAIL ROBBERY.—A robbery of the mail between Pittsburgh, Chicago and St Louis, was discovered to have taken place last week The baggage master of the Crestline station, on the Fort Wayne and Chicago road, was the first to discover the mail bags in the water closets of the station, cut open and rifled. The letters found opened covered remittances and drafts to the amount of $40,000. Twenty-seven men of a gang of robbers and burglars, have been arrested on the road east and west of Crestline, but it is not known whether any of the mail robbers were amongst those arrested or not

A MAN LOST — The New York Time, says that nothing has been seen of Chas E. King, Esq, who left the counting room of Messrs Pettibon & Platt, 228 Pearl street on a visit to his friends in Saratoga, on the 25th of last November Mr. King was formerly connected with the Cincinnati Gazette, and afterwards with the Albany State Register. He was reached his friends, and nothing has been heard of him since that time

The Dred Scott Case.

WASHINGTON March 6.

The opinion of the Supreme Court in the Dred Scott Case, was delivered to-day by Chief Justice Taney. It is a full and elaborate statement of the views of the Court.—They have decided the following important points:

1st. That negroes, whether slaves or free, that is, men of the African race, are not citizens of the United States according to the Constitution.

2d. That the ordinance of 1787 had no independent constitutional force or legal effect subsequently to the adoption of the Constitution and could not operate of itself to confer freedom or citizenship within the Northwest Territory on Negroes not citizens by the Constitution.

3d. That the provision of the act of 1820, [illegible] to exclude negro Slavery from and communicate freedom and citizenship to Negroes in the Northern part of the country by the Louisiana cession was a legislative act exceeding the powers of Congress as void, and of no legal effect to that end; deciding these main points, the Supreme Court determined the following incidental points

1st. The expression, "territory and the other property of the Union," in the Constitution, applies in terms, only to such territory as that Union possessed at the times of the adoption of the Constitution.

2d. The rights of the citizens of the United States emigrating to any federal government there, depend on the general provisions of the Constitution which defines in this, as in all other respects, the powers of Congress.

3d. As Congress does not possess power itself to make enactments relative to persons or property of citizens of the United States in federal territory other than such as the Constitution allows, so it cannot constitutionally delegate any such powers to territorial government organized by it under the Constitution

4th. The legal condition of a slave in the State of Missouri is not effected by temporary sojourn of such slave in other States, but on his return, his condition still depends on the laws of Missouri. As the plaintiff was not a citizen of Missouri, and therefore could not sue in the Courts of the U. S., the suit must be dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

NEW YORK, March 14

We have further details of the operations of Walker's troops on the San Juan River, but the accounts, as usual, are conflicting. It is said the forts at Serapiqui surrendered to Col. Lockridge's command after one day's fighting, and that the fillibusters captured a large supply of Minnie rifles, ammunition, artillery, provisions, and cooking utensils. They then proceeded up the river, and took the station at the mouth of the San Carlos, after which the Rescue gave chase to the steamer Charles Morgan. Castillo Rapids was abandoned by the Costa Ricans, who set fire to the buildings and two steamers. The fillibusters succeeded in saving one of the latter in a damaged state

A small party of Costa Ricans remained in the fort at Castillo on the 18th ult. but were to be attacked next day A report had come down from Greytown just before the British steamer left for Aspinwall, that Castillo was taken, and that communication with the lake was open, but nothing was said about Fort San Carlos.

Col. Lockridge had been stopped at Greytown, during the visit he had made there, by the British Commander, on the charge of detaining British subjects; but the matter was satisfactorily explained and he rejoined his forces.

FIRE.—We learn that Lane & Bro's steam saw mill at Wheatland, Hillsdale Co., was burned on Wednesday of last week. Loss heavy.

Appaling Colliery Explosion in England.

By the last steamer we received an account of the appalling colliery explosion in the village of Hemmingsfield, Yorkshire, England. Further particulars go to show that it was the most disastrous calamity of its kind that has ever occurred. On the morning of the 19th of February, about 220 men and lads went down the pit to commence the day's work, the underlooker having proceeded them to ascertain if the pit were safe At noon, a number of men came out of the pit to dinner—some state 20, some 30—and at that time they had not observed the slightest indication of danger. While the men and the inhabitants of the district were partaking of the midday meal, about 12½ o'clock, a rumbling noise was heard accompanied with a sensible vibration of the earth, and at the same time a loud report, which was heard at Hoyland Wentworth, and other villages some miles distant from the pit. Immediately after the explosion vast numbers of persons rushed to the mouth of the pit, many of whom had relatives among those below; and some idea of the excitement which prevailed may be gathered from the fact that after the explosion the mine was fired, and the flames spread with such rapidity and vehemence that they ascended up the air shaft, which is about 260 yards deep, and towered above the top of the cupola for some twenty yards, illuminating the country for a distance around. All efforts to extinguish the fire with engines were found to be fruitless, and it was then attempted to rescue some of the unfortunate people within. Three daring fellows ventured down, and succeeded in saving nineteen men, more or less injured by the explosion. After this it was determined to hazard an attempt at exploring the workings of the pit. Among those who went down was Mr. Webster, who gives the following account of the state in which he found the mine during his perilous exploration:

"He said that on getting to the bottom of the shaft they found that the lower portion of the slides and board gates were entirely blown up and destroyed, and on proceeding further they found the coal around the furnace was in a complete state of ignition. The coal and woodwork in the upcast shaft had taken fire, and the flames were raging furiously. He could compare it to nothing but a river of molten metal being poured down the yards along the south level, and found the whole of the furnaces down and the coal on fire. They proceeded up the levels and boardgates as far as they dared to venture, until they came in contact with the inflammable gas, and were obliged to retreat. They returned to the shaft, and then made an examination of the north levels, along which they proceeded for a distance of 400 yards, up to the first boardgate. During the investigation they found many dead bodies, and the men who accompanied them brought the remains to the shaft. One man was found dead close to the bottom of the shaft; further on they found ten bodies in a mass. Not far from the furnace it was supposed that a large number of bodies were lying, as the men generally congregated near the fire at dinner time. The furnace was blown down, and the stables (containing six horses) were on fire — When they got near the upcast shaft they saw immense masses of coal and rock falling down. The shaft was like a furnace. They were in the pit above two hours. The stoppages and brattices between the two shafts were completely blown away, and, therefore, except in the level, the pit was dead, i. e., full of bad air. They would have succeeded in putting up stoppages, but the fire increased to such an extent that they were obliged to retreat. They were so placed that if they had not retreated they would have been excluded from the air and suffocated because the air was "backing" direct from one shaft to the other. Himself, Mr. Cope and Mr Maddison ascended the shaft and held a consultation but their companions ascended in haste, saying that it was impossible for any one to remain down any longer. Of course they then considered it their duty to acquaint the owners with the position of the mine and to state that it was imperative to close the shafts, as there was no probability of saving any more lives; and that it was the only chance to render the pit in a condition fit for working in again Mr Webster added—My companions and myself, fearing the awful responsibility which rested upon our shoulders, thought it was only prudent to consult with the men who had gone down with us. They were called in separately, and asked if they were of opinion that it was impossible to get any more bodies out of the mine. They concurred in opinion that it was impossible, and we acted upon their resolution and our own by covering over the tops of the pits. In a few minutes after we came out of the mine the cupola shaft was filled with fire, which reached 50 yards above the summit, and the sparks from that body of flame ascended 100 higher."

After ascertaining the number of persons then in the pit, the painful result has arrived at that 162 men still remained in the burning mine, of whose escape from their fearful doom not the slightest chance was ascertained, as these fires sometimes last not only for days but for weeks and months.

As to the cause of the explosion, no particulars have yet been ascertained, nor probably ever will. The survivors are unable to account for it; and the explosion seems the more strange as the pit had been carefully examined only a few hours previously. It is conjectured that a "fall" had taken place in some distant part of the pit, and suddenly let in an overcharge of fire-damp, which by some means ignited, and so caused the explosion.

Dred Scott Case.

CONSERVATIVE SENTIMENT.—We extract the following from the N. Y. Commercial Advertiser, one of the leading conservative papers of the Union:

"Now there is no concealing the fact that under this decision the rights which the Free States have all along believed themselves to possess, are denied and can no longer be recognized They have supposed that it was their prerogative to prohibit Human Slavery within their territories; that they could declare, and carry out their declaration, that a slave brought voluntarily by his owner, within their borders, should thereby be freed from bondage, especially when they meet the requirements of the Constitution by surrendering fugitive slaves, and the requirements of good brother-hood by publicity announcing that any slaveholder bringing his slave or slaves into their territory, would do it at his own risk.—They believed they had just as much constitutional right to say, "You shall not bring your slaves into our State," as they had to say, "We will return your slaves if they escape into our State"—According to the decision now made, all this has been wrong. Now York has no such power. The Federal Constitution requires not only that she shall return the fugitive slave who seeks refuge in her territory, but that if a slaveholder brings into any of her cities or towns a whole retinue of slaves, she shall protect him in his ownership of them, as she would in the ownership of them, as she would in the ownership of so many horses or oxen

"Unless we have mistaken the tenor and extent of the decision, and we do not see consequences may result from it A. B., from Louisiana, may bring his family to New York city, with as many slaves to wait upon them as he chooses He may stay with them a month, a year, or five years, so long as he is always about to return; or he may himself pass to and fro, retaining his residence in Louisana C D. may also come from South Carolina under similar circumstances and with a similar retinue, under similar circumstances and with a similar retinue, and the number of slaves settled in the city, and to be protected and otherwise treated as property, may be indefinitely increased Then A B may sell a part of his slaves to C. D. Or, C. D. and himself disagreeing about the price, he may advertise that he has such slaves for sale to any gentleman from either of the Slave States, and where they may be seen; for the right of property involves these rights. And if under the decision it may still be within the Constitutional power of the State to prohibit her own citizens from buying and selling slaves (which may be doubted so far as any practical assertion of such power is concerned,) yet under that decision slaveholders in transitu might thus convert this Empire City into a slave mart."

Washington, March 17.

In the United States Supreme Court, this morning Justice McLean delivered his views, arguing that slavery is limited to the range where established by mere municipal law. If Congress deem slaves or colored persons as injurious to the Territory, they have the power to prohibit them from becoming settlers therein. The power to acquire territory brings with it the power to govern it. The master does not cary with him to the Territory the law of the State from which he removes; hence the Missouri Compromise is constitutional, and the presumption is in favor of the freedom of Dread Sott and his family, who were free under decisions for the last twenty eight years.

SAD.—We learn from the Enquirer, that Levi Griffith, an old resident of Cass county, met an untimely end on Friday the 7th inst. near that place, by being run over by the cars About fifteen minutes before the arrival of the three o'clock mail train, from the east, Mr Griffith was seen in a State of intoxication, to leave the depot, and go in the direction of the expected train. He walked along the track about a quarter of a mile, and then repose himself upon the ground, with his head upon the rails. The train came thundering along, and in consequence of a curve in the road at this point, the engineer did not see the unfortunate man until it was too late. The wheels passed over his head and killed him instantly.

SAD ACCIDENT — The Hillsdale Standard says the Mattie Griswold, of Monroe was instantly killed on Thursday of last week, while attending a lath machine, by a slab passing over the saw, striking him under the chin, and breaking his neck — Mr G was an active and industrious citizen, about thirty years of age.

DIED.

At Cleveland, on the 5 inst. CORNELIA Tryon wife of Gen. Joseph W. Brown, of this city, aged 31 years

"Thus, while serving God in her generation, hath this holy woman been gathered to her fathers, having the testimony of a good conscience, in the communion of the Holy Catholic Church, in the confidence of a certain faith in the comforts of a reasonable, religious and holy hope, in favor with God, and in perfect charity with the world."

For forty years her steady, consistent and fruitful piety has borne testimony to the faith of Christ. During this long period she met the trials and vicissitudes of a life chequered with such sorrows as few mothers are called to endure, with an unmurmuring patience, and an unshrinking fidelity, rarely equalled and I never surpassed.

To her family, to society, and the church she so ardently loved, she was ever faithful and true In social intercourse her presence was cured meekness, prudence and charity, with a sweet savor of cheerfulness At home she ruled by the persuasion of love, but taught by her daily example as well as by precept, and in the church her memory will ever be associated with whatever is lovely and of good report.

In prosperity she was humble—in adversity resigned—in suffering patient; for the hopes of religion were her constant solace and unfailing support, and "she loved, what she now enjoys for "blessed are the dead who die in the Lord"—Toledo Blade

Mrs Brown was formerly a resident of this place, and by refinement of her manners, and a truly christian life, did much to give tone and character to its early settlement. Beloved and lamented by all who knew her, she was brought back to our village burial ground, for interment at the side of the loved and lost of other years.

No Family

Can afford to be without Mustang Liniment in their house. The many accidents we are liable to, may render it necessary any moment, and nothing is capableof performing such certain cure. (Extract) "In lifting the kettle from the fire it caught and scalded my hands and person severely—one hand almost to a crisp. The torture was unbearable. It was an awful night, * * * The Mustang Liniment appeared to extract the pain almost immediately. It healed rapidly and left no scar of account Chas Foster, 420 Broad street, Philadelphia." It is truly a wonderful article. It will cure any case of swelling, burns, stiff joints. Eruptions or rheumatism. For Horses it should never be dispensed with, One Dollar's worth of Mustang has frequently saved a valuable horse. Always reliable. Anywhere. Everywhere. Sold in all parts of the habitable globe.

A MEDICAL REVOLUTION.
THE WORLD UNANIMOUS.

Holloway's Ointment.

AND

THE GREAT COUNTER IRRITANT.

The virtue of disease often makes its way to the internal organs through the pores of the skin This penetrating Ointment, melting under the hand as it is rubbed in, is absorbed through the same channels, and, reaching the seat of inflammation promptly and invariably subdues it, whether located in the kidneys, the liver, the lungs, or any other important organ. It penetrates the surface of the interior, through the countless tubes that communicate with the skin as summer rain passes into the fevered earth, diffusing its cool and regenerating influence.

Skin Diseases and Glandular Swellings.

Every species of exterior irritation is quickly reduced by the anti-inflammatory action of this Ointment. Angry eruptions, such as Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Fetter, Ringworm, Scald head, Settle bush, Scabies (or Itch), &c., die out, to return no more, under its application. Hospital experience in all parts of the world proves its infallibility in diseases of the skin, the muscles, the joints and the glands.

ULCERS, SORES & TUMORS.

The effect of this unrivaled external remedy upon scrofula, and other virulent ulcers and sores, is almost Miraculous. It first discharges the poison which produces suppuration and proud flesh, and thus the cures which its healing properties afterward complete are safe as well as permanent.

Wounds Bruises, Burns and Scalds

In cases of the fracture of the bones, injuries caused by steam explosions, bruises, burns, scalds, Rheumatism, stiffness of the joints, an contraction of the sinews, it is employed and warmly recommended by the faculty This marvelous remedy has been introduced by its inventor in person into all the leading hospitals of Europe, and no private household should be without it

UNDENIABLE TESTIMONY.

The medical staff at the French and English Armies in the Crimea, have officially signed the approval of Holloway's Ointment, as the most reliable dressing for salve cuts, stabs, and gun shot wounds. It is also used by the surgeons of the Allied Navies.

Both the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following cases.

HEALTH OR SICKNESS.

CHOOSE BETWEEN THEM.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

The blood furnishes the material of every tissue, muscle, gland and fibre in the human frame. When pure it secures health to every organ; when corrupt, it necessarily produces disease. Holloway's Pills operate directly upon the elements of the stream of life, neutralizing the principle of disease and thus radically curing the malady whether located in the nerves, the stomach, the liver, the bowels, the muscles the skin the brain, or any other part of the system.

USED THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

Holloway's Pills are equally efficacious in complaints common to the whole human race, and in diseases peculiar to certain climates and localities.

ALARMING DISORDERS.

Dyspepsia and derangement of the liver, the source of infirmity and suffering, and the cause of innumerable deaths, yield to these curatives in all cases, however aggravated acting as a mild purgative alterative and tonic; they relieve the bowels purify the fluids and invigorate the system and the constitution at the same time.

General Weakness—Nervous Complaints.

When all stimulants fail, the renovating and bracing properties of these Pills give firmness to the shaking nerves and enfeebled muscles of the victim of general debility.

DELICATE FEMALES.

All irregularities and ailments incident to the delicate and sensitive organs of the sex are removed or prevented by a few doses of these mild but infallible alternatives. No mother who regards her own or her children's health should fail to have them within her reach.

Scientific Endorsements.

The London "Lancet," the London "Medical Review," and the most eminent of the faculty in Great Britain, France and Germany, have eulogized the Pills and their inventor.

Holloway's Pills are the best remedy known in the World for the following Diseases

Asthma.	Diarrhœa,	Inflamation	Stone and
Bowel Com-	Dropsy	Inward weak	Gravel
plaints	Debility	ness	Secondary
Coughs	Fever & Ague	Liver Com-	Symptoms
Colds	Female Com-	plaints	Venerial af-

OF

DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR.

OR LIVER REMEDY.

IS REQUIRED TO CURE ANY ONE TROUBLED WITH Liver Complaints, unless the most desperate of cases, and the Second bottle will seldom ever fail to insure a single failure, restore the patient to health and vigor We wish to call the attention of all to these facts, that the Invigorator I compound ed by a physician who has used it in his practice for the past twenty years with a success almost incredulous and that it is entirely vegetable being composed wholly of gums.

One bottle of the Invigorator of these gums may be formed when it is known one bottle of the Invigorator cannot be purchased of such a number of

One bottle is the surest thing known to carry away the bad effects of mineral poison of any kind.

Only one bottle is needed to throw out of the system the effects of medicine after a long sickness

One bottle taken for Jaundice removes all yellowness or unnatural color from the skin.

One dose after eating is sufficient to relieve the stomach and prevent the food from rising and sour...

Only one dose taken before retiring prevents nigh...

One dose taken at night loosens the bowels gently, and cures costiveness.

One dose taken after each meal will cure Dyspepsia.

One dose of two teaspoonful will always relieve the Sick Headache

One bottle taken for female obstruction removes the cause of the disease, and makes a perfect cure

Only one dose immediately relieves Colic, white

One dose often repeated is a sure cure for Cholera Morbus and a sure preventative of Cholera.

One dose taken off in will prevent the recurrence of bilious attacks while it relieves all painful feelings

☞ One of two doses taken occasionally is one of the best remedies for a cold ever known

Thousands of cases of inflammation and weakness of the lungs have been cured by this Invigorator

One dose taken a short time before eating gives vigor to the appetite and makes food digest well.

One dose often repeated cures Chronic Diarrhœa in its worst forms while summer and bowel complaint yield almost to the first dose.

One or two doses cures attacks caused by worms, while for worms in children there is no sure, safer and speedier remedy in the world as it never fails

There is no exaggeration in these statements, they are plain and simple facts, that we can give evidence to prove while all who use it are giving their unanimous testimony in its favor.

We wish all who are sick and debilitated to try this remedy and test it thoroughly and any who are not benefited by its use we should like to hear from as we have yet to hear from the first person who has used a bottle of our Invigorator without receiving benefit, for there are such astonishing medicinal virtues in it, that all no matter how long they have been affected, if their complaint arises from a deranged liver, will be benefited if not entirely cured.

Proclamation to the People of the Realm:

Know all the People that I J. K. Wellman have lately bought of Mr T Taylor his book at Adrian; which I have consolidated with my mammoth Store near the Post Office Know also that I have some $15,000 worth of stock My establishment is much the largest of any Book Store between Cleveland and Chicago. Know also that I am doing a large Wholesale as well as Retail trade, and I can furnish Individuals, Town Librarians, Book Agents, Schools and Colleges on better terms than any other dealer on the line of the Michigan Southern Railroad I am devoting much attention to the School Book Trade and have on hand and can furnish every variety of books used in our Common and High Schools. I keep on hand a variety of Writing Books, Paper, Ink, Pens Slates etc. My stock of Wall Paper is very large and varied.—Bibles large and small. For the benefit of those who live at a distance, I will, for the retail price, send with order, by mail at my risk, forward any number of books either by Mail or by Express at my own expense. Five dollars will buy six dollars worth of books Ten dollars, twelve, and twenty dollars twenty five dollars worth of books. Letter paper and envelopes of every style in the same proportion

J. K. Wellman, whose rapid strides from his start on Main Street to his splendid mammoth Book Store in Lothrop's Block three doors west of the Post Office, has been unprecedented in the history of the Book business in our city Mr Wellman, who has had a good experience in the business, has now probably the best and largest assortment of Books in the State, and we think a glance at his stock will satisfy any one of the truth of this remark. His great facilities for purchase at low rates, enable him to defy all competition, by selling at a very low figure We congratulate the people of Southern Michigan upon the existence of this mammoth wholesale and retail Book Establishment, and the extensive part it is taking in furnishing books at low rates We can assure our friends abroad, in this and other counties, that they can buy Books cheaper at Wellman's than at any other place in the west, Come and see.—[Adrian Expositor

WELLMAN'S LITTERARY EMPORIUM.—Devoted to a Sound, High-toned and healthy Literature, Religion, Freedom, Temperance, Education and all topics calculated to Expand and Elevate the Mind J. K Wellman, formerly of the Miscellany, Editor and Proprietor

The Emporium is published Monthly, and will contain at least 40 pages in each number, making 500 pages in a year TERMS—Single copy for a year in advance, $1; Six copies, $5; Thirteen copies, $10; Single number, 10 cents Money may be sent by mail at the risk of the Publisher Published by J. K Wellman, Adrian Michigan Emporium Office, in Wellman's Book Store, near the Post Office. Postage six cents a year if paid in advance

We design to make this periodical what its name imports, an Emporium of Literature It will be independent of party or sect. Free thought, and free expression will be its standing motto. To the extent of our ability we shall advocate the cause of Christianity, Temperance, Freedom, and other subjects which we think calculated to elevate mankind

The Emporium will contain articles from men of various professions and opinions We shall also present various styles. The bold, the original, the terse, the essayic, the caustic, the beautiful, sublime, the ideal, and the romantic shall make up its repast. We expect original articles from the following writers; Rev. J. C. Gardner, T M Cooley Esq., Rev George C. Curtis, Andrew Howell Esq Rev Edward McClure, Lydia Jane Pierson, Rev R. G. Green, M. N Halsey, Seba Smith, Delphine Pavlin, Rev O. H. White, Rev E. H Pilcher, Professors Churchill, Whipple and Hubbard, Rev's W W Crane, and Luther Lee, C. B. Stebbins, and President Tappan.

☞ We want 100 Agents in every part of the west, for the Literary Emporium; to whom a liberal per centage will be given J. K WELLMAN.

Book Seller and Publisher, Adrian, Mich

☞ School Teachers who are about closing their winter schools, and will be looking for business, will do well to take an agency for this magazine.—With the Emporium, and a small stock of books, they can do a good business.

Wellman's Literary Emporium.

This new Magazine, J. K Wellman Editor and Proprietor, has made its appearance It certainly does great credit to the enterprise and literary taste of Mr. Wellman It is printed by S P & A Jerman from stereotype plates, and contains an original and talented article from the pen of Rev. T Gardner on "American Civilization" also an original article from the pen of Lydia Jane Pierson, and others Mr. Wellman is determined to make this period out every way of the first order of merit, and worth a liberal patronage. Terms, $1.00 in advance. Office at Wellman's mammoth Book Emporium.—[Adrian Expositor.

A NEW MAGAZINE—ADRIAN ENTERPRISE—About the 5th of February, Mr J. K. Wellman, will issue the first number of his new monthly, The Literary Emporium, a magazine of forty pages of the choicest original and select matter. Mr. Wellman informs us that he designs the Emporium for a family magazine, a fireside companion, and nothing except the most unexceptionable matter will find its way into it columns.

This is a new era in the existance of our young city, and we trust it will be uece ssful as, judging from Mr W's former experience we doubt not it will be. It will do much towards giving our town a reputation abroad —Adrian Watchman

Gentle Words.

The sun may warm the grass to life,
The dew the dropping flower;
The eye grows bright, and wears the light
Of Autumn's golden hour;
But words that breathe a tenderness
And smile we know are true,
Are warmer than the summer-time,
And brighter than the dew.

It is not much the world can give,
With all its subtle art,
And gold and grandeur are but dross
To success the heart;
But oh! if there was ever sound

AGRICULTURAL.

Jefferson's Opinion of Farming.

Whatever may be your choice of future occupation—whatever calling or profession you may select, there is certainly none more honorable than that of a farmer. The patriarch of the fields, as he sits beside his cottage door, when his daily toil is over, feels an inward calm never known in the halls of pride. He labor yields him unpurchasable health and repose. I have observed with more grief and pain than I can express, the visible tokens which appear in all directions of a growing disposition to avoid agricultural pursuits and to rush into some overcrowded profession, because a corrupt and debasing fashion has thrown around it the tinsel of imaginary respectability. Hence, the farmer, instead of preparing his child to follow in the path of usefulness himself has trod, educates him for a sloth; labor is considered vulgar; to work is ungenteel; a jack-plane is less respectable than the lawyer's green bag; the handles of the plow less dignified than the yard-stick. Unfortunate infatuation! How melancholly is this delusion, which, unless it be checked by a wholesome reform in public opinion, will cover our whole country with wreck and ruin! This state of things is striking at the very foundation of our national greatness; it is upon agriculture that we mainly depend for our continued prosperity, and dark and evil will be the day when it falls into disrepute. What other pursuit offers so sure a guarantee of an honest independence, a comfortable support for a dependent family? Where else can we look but to the productions of the soil for the safety of investment, and for ample returns? In commercial speculations all is chance and uncertainty, change and fluctuation, rise and fall. In the learned professions scarce one in ten makes enough to meet his incidental expenses; how, then, are we to account for this fatal misdirection of public opinion?

Selecting Seeds.

This is an affair of more importance than is generally supposed, and should be attended to as early in the season as is convenient. The selection of spring wheat cannot be too carefully attended to, especially by those farmers who seed their fields down to grass with this grain.

Much of the foul trash which injures and disfigures our meadows is sown with seeds which have not been thoroughly cleaned. The English farmers sort out all their wheat, and many of their other seeds by hand, which, although a somewhat tedious method, might well be imitated here in many cases.

It is much easier to look over the seeds these long evenings than to eradicate the weeds when they have once taken possession of a field. As the plan of sowing grass seeds with spring grain is rapidly gaining ground the importance of having the seeds clean of anything foul is greatly augmented. There is no other way of destroying them can be pursued until the sward is again broken up for hoed crops.

In selecting seed corn it is not necessary to procure the largest ears without reference to their soundness; but rather to obtain those of a medium size which are sound, well up at the ends, and thoroughly ripe.

Seed oats and barley should be run through the fanning mill at least three times before they are used, which will clean them blow out all the lighter grains.

Pruning Trees.

The pruning of small twigs and shoots can be done at almost any season of the year without material injury to the tree; but when it is necessary to take off large limbs it can be attended to with advantage in the early part of March in which month the tree is in vigorous growth.

Large limbs should be taken off with a fine, smooth saw, after which the corners of the wound (where the bark meets the wood) may be trimmed smooth with a pruning knife. When the wound is left ragged and torn so that rain will settle in, it will often rot and injure the tree materially.

Some experienced horticulturists recommend that the place left by cutting off a limb should be touched over with some cheap paint to prevent the destructive effects of air and moisture. Tar, pitch, and wet clay are often applied for the same purpose.

Fire.—We learn that Lane & Bro's steam saw mill at Wheatland, Hillsdale Co., was burned on Wednesday of last week. Loss heavy.

AYER'S
CHERRY PECTORAL,
FOR THE RAPID CURE OF
Colds, Coughs, and Hoarseness.

Bridgeton, Mass., 20th Dec., 1855.
DR. J. C. AYER: I do not hesitate to say this is the best remedy I have ever found for Coughs, Hoarseness, Influenza, and the distressing symptoms of a Cold. It is truly a Cherry Pectoral. It is constant use in our family, and my brother, for the last year, has found it to possess superior virtues in the treatment of these complaints. JOHN KNOWLES.

AMESBURY, Mass., 20th Dec., 1855.
I have used your Pectoral myself, and in my family ever since you invented it, and believe it the best medicine for its purpose ever put out. With a fact could I should scarcely pay twenty-five dollars for a bottle than do without it, or take any other remedy. MOSES NELSON.

Croup, Whooping Cough, Influenza.
SPRINGFIELD, Miss., Feb. 7, 1856.
BROTHER AYER: I will cheerfully certify your Pectoral is the best remedy we possess for the cure of Whooping Cough, Croup, and the chest diseases of children. We of your fraternity in the South appreciate your skill, and commend your medicine to our people.
HIRAM CONKLIN, M. D.

AMOS LEE, Esq., MONTEREY, Ia., writes, 3d Jan., 1856: "I had a tedious Influenza, which confined me in doors six weeks; took many medicines without relief; finally tried your Pectoral by the advice our clergyman. The first dose relieved the soreness in my throat and lungs; less than one half the bottle made me completely well. Your medicines are the cheapest as well as the best we can buy, and we esteem you, Doctor, and your remedies, as the poor man's friend."

Asthma or Phthisic, and Bronchitis.
WEST MANCHESTER, Pa., Feb. 4, 1856.
SIR: Your CHERRY PECTORAL is performing marvellous cures in this section. It has relieved several from alarming symptoms of consumption, and is now curing a man who has labored under an affection of the lungs for the last forty years. HENRY L. PARKS, Merchant.

A. A. RAMSEY, M. D., ALBION, Monroe Co., Iowa, writes, Sept. 6, 1855: "During my practice of many years I have found nothing equal to your CHERRY PECTORAL for giving ease and relief to consumptive patients, or curing such as are curable."

We might add volumes of evidence, but the most convincing proof of the virtues of this remedy is found in its effects upon trial.

Consumption.
Probably no one remedy has ever been known which cured so many and such dangerous cases as this. Some so human aid can reach, but even to those the CHERRY PECTORAL affords relief and comfort.

AYER'S CHERRY, NEW YORK CITY, March 5, 1856
DOCTOR AYER, LOWELL: I feel it a duty and a pleasure to inform you what your CHERRY PECTORAL has done for my wife. She had been five months laboring under the dangerous symptoms of Consumption, from which no aid we could procure gave her much relief. She was steadily failing, until Dr. Strong, of this city, where we have come for advice, recommended a trial of your medicine. We bless his kindness, as we do your skill, for she has recovered from that day. She is not yet as strong as she used to be, but is free from her cough, and calls herself well.
Yours with gratitude and regard,
ORLANDO SHERBY, of SHELBYVILLE.

Consumptives, do not despair till you have tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It is made by one of the best medical chemists in the world, and its cures all around us bespeak the high merits of its virtues.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills.

THE sciences of Chemistry and Medicine have been taxed their utmost to produce this best, most perfect purgative which is known to man. Innumerable proofs are shown that these PILLS have virtues which surpass in excellence the ordinary medicines, and that they win unprecedentedly upon the esteem of all men. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. Their penetrating properties stimulate the vital activities of the body, remove the obstructions of its organs, purify the blood, and expel disease. They purge out the foul humors which breed and grow distemper, stimulate sluggish or disordered organs into their natural action, and impart healthy tone with strength to the whole system. Not only do they cure the every-day complaints of every body, but also formidable and dangerous diseases that have baffled the best of human skill. While they produce powerful effects, they are at the same time, in diminished doses, the safest and best physic that can be employed for children. Being sugar-coated, they are pleasant to take, and being purely vegetable, are free from any risk of harm. Cures have been made which surpass belief were they not substantiated by men of such exalted position and character as to forbid the suspicion of untruth. Many eminent clergymen and physicians have lent their names to certify to the public the reliability of my remedies, while others have sent me the assurance of their conviction that my Preparations contribute immensely to the relief of my afflicted, suffering fellow-men.

Do not be put off by unprincipled dealers with some other pill they make more profit on. Ask for AYER'S PILLS, and take nothing else. No other they can give you compares with this in its intrinsic value or curative powers. The sick want the best aid there is for them, and they should have it.

LAST CALL

It has been several times requested that those who had unsettled accounts at the "Herald" Office previous to the 8th of May last, would at once attend to their adjustment. A few have honorably responded to these requests, but by a large majority they have been, so far, disregarded. The undersigned would therefore now say, that until the 1st of March next the books of said office may be found at Richard & VanTine's Furniture warehouse, where they can be more easily settled than at any time thereafter.

B.—Certainly. He holds himself in readiness at all times, to accommodate those who will pay; he keeps SHOES and NAILS and other Stock on hand. I think he is the best hand at all kinds of work that can be produced in the whole section of country around.

A.—Well, I shall call on him this very morning, for I want to get back to my work this forenoon. Oh! I liked to have forgot to ask you where he has opened his new shop!

B.—It is in the Brick Shop, near Anderson and Brewer's Furnace.

A.—What, right by the Railroad?

B.—Yes.

A.—Don't it scare the horses?

B.—No, not but a very little. Some do not notice it at all. STEARNS & CO

THE NEW SPECIAL
Topographical Map of
Lenawee county, Mich.,

From original surveys and actual measurment throughout the whole county, by Bechler and Wenig, Surveyors and Civil Engineers, Authors of Maps of Allegany, Schoharie, and Broome County, N. Y., and Washtenaw Co., Mich.

The subscribers, who have been engaged in compiling a map of Lenawee County since 14 months, are about to review the whole work in order to correct even the slightest error, if any should have occured. The same time they will obtain subscribers for the enterprise, which is connected with immense labor and expense."

The Map is about 4×5 feet in size, and contains every public road with all its variations, the localities of Dwellings, places of Worship, Post Offices, and School Houses, Stores, Mills, Shops, &c.; also, section and farm lines with the owner's name engraved to it; Views of Public buildings. Plans of every village in the County on the margin forming not only a correct and complete, but also an ornamental Map, and will be hand somely colored, mounted and furnished to subscribers for $5 per copy.

BECHLER, WENIG & CO.,
Adrian & Philadelphia.

The undersigned having examined Messrs. Bechler & Wenig's Surveys of Lenawee Co., take pleasure in recommending their Map to the citizens of this County, as being in our opinion, a very accurate, reliable and practical Map and complete County Directory, and well worthy their liberal patronage.—Considering the expense attending its survey procuring so accurately all the names, localities, distances, town plats, farm lines, views etc., and the limited sale it must necessarily meet with "on account of its being entirely a local work" we think they offer it very reasonable, and have subscribed for the Map

OH!--AH!

Mr. A.—Good morning, Sir! Where have you been this morning so early.

Mr. B.—Oh, look in my carriage and see if you can tell where I have been.

A.—Dear me! that looks like work compared with some I have had done within the last year. Have you had all this work done this morning?

B.—Certainly. He holds himself in readiness at all times, to accommodate those who will pay; he keeps SHOES and NAILS and other Stock on hand. I think he is the best hand at all kinds of work that can be produced in the whole section of country around.

A.—Well, I shall call on him this very morning, for I want to get back to my work this forenoon. Oh! I liked to have forgot to ask you where he has opened his new shop!

B.—It is in the Brick Shop, near Anderson and Brower's Furnace.

A.—What, right by the Railroad?

B.—Yes.

A.—Don't it scare the horses?

B.—No, not but a very little. Some do not notice it at all. STEARNS & CO.

Lines by Daniel Webster, on the Death of a Child.

Mr. Webster, at more than one period of his life, was visited with the sorest affliction. In 1833 he had the misfortune to see a son, three years of age, named Charles, represented to have possessed singular attractiveness of mind and character even at an early age. On that occasion, Mr. Webster inclosed the following effusion in a letter to his wife:

My son, thou wast my heart's delight,
Thy morn of life was gay and cheery;
That morn has rushed to sudden night,
Thy father's house is sad and dreary.

I held thee on my knee, my son!
And kissed thee laughing like the morning,
But ah! thy little day is done,
Thou art with my angel sister sleeping.

The staff on which my years should lean,
Is broken, ere the e years come o'er me;
My fondest rites thou should'st have seen
Had thou or I in thy tomb before me.

Thou rear'st to me no filial stone,
No parent's grave with tear beholdest;
Thou art my ancestor my son!
And stand'st in Heaven's account the oldest.

On earth my lot was soonest cast,
Thy generation after mine,
Thou hast thy predecessor past,
Taller eternity is thine.

I should have set before thine eyes
The road to Heaven, and showed it clear,
But thou untaught spring'st to the skies,
And leav'st thy teacher lingering here.

Sweet Seraph! I would learn of thee,
And hasten to partake thy bliss!
Ah, oh! to thy kind welcome me,
As dear I used and thee to this.

Dear Angel, thou art safe in Heaven;
No prayer for thee need more be made;
Oh! let thy prayer for those be given
Who oft have blessed thy infant head.

My Father! I behold thee born.
Before me risen to Heaven's bright morn,
And led thy tottering steps with care;
My son! my father! guide me there!

Dreadful State of Affairs in Utah

Washington, March 19, 1857

A letter was received here to day from W. W. Drummond, United States Supreme Judge in the Utah Territory, by the administration. It gives a sad and deplorable picture of matters in that Territory. The following is taken from the letter:

"The leading men of the Church are more traitorous than ever. Only a few days since all the paper, records, dockets and nine hundred volumes of the laws were taken out of the Supreme Court Clerk's office, and burned. And this is not the only instance of the kind. I say to you again, and through you to the President, it is impossible for us to enforce the laws in this Territory. Every man here holds his life at the will of Brigham Young; and here we are without protection. I am firmly of the opinion that Babbit was murdered by Mormons under direction of Brigham Young, and not by the Indians. Murder is a common thing here; and murders cannot be banished with a Mormon jury, witness officers, and a Governor to pardon. It is too cruel, and must not be endured. A man, not a member of the church, is murdered, robber, castrated, and imprisoned, solely for questioning the authority of the church. Persons are now in the penitentiary, convicted before the Probate Judge, who are wholly innocent of any crime. Is there any other country where this abuse is or would be endured? Let us all, then, take hold and crush out one of the most treasonable organizations in America."

The administration have had the matter under serious consideration, and will soon appoint a Governor, I understand, who will take sufficient military force into that Territory to carry out the laws to the fullest extent.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD.—The Board of Directors of the Illinois Central Railroad, have resolved to increase the capital stock of the Company 50 per cent the cost of the road is now represented by a stock of $17,000,000 on which 30 per cent has been paid in; the plan is to add $8,500,000 of extra stock, on which the same per centage will be called, as wanted, making the entire stock $25,500,000, (about the estimated cost of the road) of which only $7,600,000 will have been called in, the remainder being provided by the sales of the lands given to the road at the outset. The stock has declined under this announcement, but most of the friends of the enterprise think that it is a wise policy.

"Can I bid, sir?"

"Certainly," replied the auctioneer.

"Well, then," said the wag, walking off, "I bid you good night."

The Cæsar of the Present Day.

Cæsar has been characterized by Shakspeare as "the foremost man of all this world." We judge of all men by a different standard now, for we have a man much greater Cæsar. The triumphs and glories of all the Cæsars were as nothing compared with the triumphs of Professor Holloway. When "the great Cæsar" was dispatched to Gaul by the Roman Senate, the first communication they received from him was the epigrammatic announcement, "I came, I saw, I conquered." When Holloway, under the influence of a noble philanthrophy, and guided by a sound philosophy, entered on his mission of happiness to man, his successes might well have been recorded in the words, "I came, I saw, I saved!"—Cæsar, during his campaign in Germany, determined to rise up with his army against the State; his first step was to pass the Rubicon. A chaos of bloodshed, wickedness and anarchy ensued, which the world has seldom seen since then—Holloway, disgusted and shocked with the futility of the means commonly employed to counteract disease and preserve health, set his energies to work to devise a new and universal curative: his first step was to consult Nature. Nature responded, and his medicines, scattered over the face of this broad and beauteous earth, shed their blessings on suffering myriads, and brought health to countless homes from which otherwise peace and happiness would have forever fled.

When Cæsar entered Rome in triumph, the envious Marcellus exclaimed:

"What tributaries follow him to Rome
To grace in captive bonds his chariot wheels"

We all know how the imperial despot's wretched prisoners were made a prominent feature of the savage ovations by which his victories were celebrated. Mark how the times have changed. Our Cæsar rejoices in no tributaries purchased with tears and blood. Holloway's laurels have not been bought by human slaughter and desolated homes. His triumphs have been triumphs over disease and death; and his most valuable reward has been the prayers and blessings of thousands of grateful hearts with whom his name and fame have become "household words."

Cassius, though one of Cæsar's foes, acknowledged his greatness when he said:

"Ye Gods, it doth amaze me how he should
So get the start of this majestic world,
And bear the palm alone."

But what a hollow greatness was Cæsar's compared with Holloway's. What a cruel end he had. He lived by the sword, and died by the sword. He was murdered by his "friends." Thus ended the career of the greatest ruler of the greatest republic the old world and the old times have ever had. But here in this new world and these later times we have a republic greater, truer, purer than that of Rome in her palmiest days. And here, too, we have a new Cæsar whose deeds and fame will be commensurated with its greatness, and whose claims to the admiration and respect of the world now and in future times do not rest on the number of human beings he has slain or the desolation he has made, but on the number of human beings he has saved, and the blessings of health and happiness which he has bestowed on humanity in the discovery of his miraculous remedies.—Boston Traveller

Soul Chambers.

But there is, in general a part of the soul house of every man that is not used, and remains locked up. And they are usually the best apartment that are so neglected. Those that have a glorious outlook, that stand up to sun and air, from whose windows one may look calm across Jordon and see the fields and hills of the Promised land, these, men seldom go into. They choose rather to live in that part of the soul-house that looks into the back-yard, where nothing but rubbish is gathered and kept. Many men live in one or two rooms, out of thirty or forty in the soul, all their lives.

If you should take a candle—that is God's word, which is a lighted candle—and go into these soul houses and explore them, you will find them generally very dark. The halls and passage-ways, the stairs of ascent, the vast and noble ranges of apartment—all are stumbling dark.—There, for example, is the apartment of faculty, called Benevolence. You can tell by the way the door grates, that it is seldom opened. But if you were to thrust in a light, you would see that the room is a most stately place. The ceilings are frescoed with angels. The sides and panels are filled with most exquisite adornments. The whole saloon is most inviting to every sense. Seats there are delightful to press; and the niches are filled with things enticing to the eye. But spiders cover over with their webs the angels of the ceiling. Dust blackens the ornaments. The hall is silent, the chambers are neglected. No man in this house lives there!

Turn to another room; it is called Conscience. It is an apartment wonderfully constructed. It seems to be central. It is connected with every other apartment in the dwelling. On examination, however, it will be found that, for the most part, the doors are locked. The room is thick with dust. The dust is its carpet! The room is very dark. The windows are glazed over with webbed dirt. The light is shut out, the whole apartment is dismal. The man who owns the house does not frequent the room!

There is another chamber called Hope—if haply you can see the inscription over the door. It has two sides to it, and two windows. From one of these you may see the stars, and heaven beyond, the Holy City, the Angels of God, the Assembly and Church of the First born, and most wonderful things beside. This is shut. The other window looks out into the World's Highway, and sees men, caravans, artificers, miners, artizans, engineers, buildings, bankers, brokers, pleasure-mongers. The window stands wide open, and is much used!

The room called Faith, is shut, and the lock rusted. The chamber named Worship is silent, unused, unvisited, and is dark and cheerless.

Indeed, in those upper and nobler apartments, on which the sun rests all the day long, from which all pleasant prospects rise, to which are wafted the sweetest sounds that ever charm the ear, and the sweetest odors that ever fall from celestial gardens, around about which angels are hovering—these are, in most soul houses, all shut and desolate. But if you go into the lower ranges, you shall find occupancy there, yet with various degrees of inconvenience and misery.—If you listen, you shall hear in some rioting and wassail. The passions never hold lent; they always celebrate carnival! In others, you shall hear sighs and murmurs. The dwellers therein are disappointed, restless desires, crippled and suffering wishes, bedridden ambitions! In others you shall hear weepings and repinings; in others, storms and scolding; in others sleep and stupidity; in others toil and trouble; in others weariness and disgust of life.

THE BLOODY RUN.—Among the objects of interest at Niagara, there is none more worthy of note than that portion of the river known as Bloody Run, about a mile below the Whirlpool. Perpendicular rocks of nearly two hundred feet in height, inclosed in a narrow channel, through which the river rushes furiously along, piling up through the force of the current, and the accumulation of water above, some seven or eight feet higher in the middle than upon the sides. During the old French war, a detachment of the British army retreating from fort Schlosser, about five miles South, were decoyed into an ambush of French and Indians at this spot, and men, women and children, in all, three hundred souls, with their baggage, artillery, &c., were thrown into the chasm below, notwithstanding a brave defence. But two escaped—one, a drummer, who concealed himself in the branches of a friendly tree during the confusion attending the attack. The other, a man named Stedman, after fighting with desperate courage, cut his way through the thickest of the enemies' ranks, and trusting to the fleetness of his horse, made his escape. After peace was concluded, the Indians, believing him to be under the especial protection of the Great Spirit, and struck with admiration at the valor he displayed, gave him all the land he encircled in his flight, extending from Fort Schoiosser to the scene of his exploit, including the falls themselves.

☞ A passenger who has just came down the Missouri river, says the boats up are crowded with emigrants to Kansas.

The Beginning of the End.

In the case of Dean and Boker, after the injunction had been dissolved by Judge Davis, and it was decided that Boker had no right to restrain his daughter of her liberty, the Judge said as he had had several interviews with the young lady, and that in these interviews she had uniformly stated to him that this man was her own free choice, and she had married him of her own will; that he had found her a young lady of delicacy of demeanor, who was actuated by a double duty towards her parents and to the husband she had chosen for herself. Having satisfied himself that neither force nor fraud had been used; that the parties were of lawful age, and were of sound mind, it was his duty to pronounce this a valid marriage, without any reference to wealth or station, for all were equal in the eye of the law. The lady was capable of entering into the contract, and it is the duty of the Judge to say that it was valid and binding.—The scene which followed is thus described by the New York Times:

"Immediately after the Judge had rendered his decision, even before the adjournment of the court, Dean's friends gathered around him to confer their congratulations. The rush towards him was so great that with difficulty he kept his feet. He managed at last, to retreat to the corner of the room near the Judge's bench, when Judge Davis took him by the hand and tendered his compliments. The crowd all wanted to do likewise, and such was their eagerness that poor Dean was pushed out of the court room. He evidently felt frightened, and sped down stairs to the street, the crowd at his heels cheering him lustily. He was chased over to Centre street, against the side of a dwelling, but with great effort he broke through the mob and ran through Chambers street towards Broadway. At this juncture he was seized by Judge Davis, who jerked him into a coach standing by, entered himself, and the two were driven off, the crowd in their wake yelling like Indians.

They stopped at the Judge's residence a short time, when Dean proceed to the house of Mr. Spencer, his counsel, in 24th st., to await the hour when his wife should be delivered to him.

Early in the evening, Mr. Henry Berthold, Deputy Sheriff, presented himself to Boker, with the order of the court for the delivery of Mrs. Dean to the custody of her lawful husband, which he agreed to do at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Meanwhile several hundred persons collected at Boker's house, anxious to see the noted bride. At the appointed time, Bertholf re appeared with the lady, and after much trouble in getting her through the crowd to the carriage, and extraordinary exertions on the part of Barney, the driver, in dodging through the cross streets to escape the curiosity hunters, she was safely conveyed to Bertholl's residence, where shortly afterwards she was joined by her husband and Spencer.

Here an interview in presence of Bertholf and his family and Spencer was had between the husband and his wife. Dean was anxious that an adjournment should take place to the Metropolitan Hotel, the bridal chamber of which had been engaged by Mrs. Spencer for their use. But Mrs. Dean objected, as she had faithfully engaged to return to her mother that night.—Bertholf asked the lady if she realized the hardships which her new position would entail upon her. How she would like to get up 5 o'clock in the morning to get a mechanic's breakfast? and would it not be repugnant to her feelings to go to market with a basket in one hand and fifty cents in the other to procure their daily food, with other similar questions. She answered in the true lover's way, she could do all this and more to for the man of her choice. His earnings at his trade (he is a ship carpenter,) with what she made by teaching music and the languages, would amply support them.—Some hours later Mrs. Dean was escorted to her father's house, and her husband left for his home.

It is the intention of the pair to start early for Louisville, Ky., where Dean has a brother in law in business, and where he also hopes to live in happiness with his bride.

A Joke.

A number of politicians, all of whom were seeking offices under government were scattered on the tavern porch talking, when an old toper, named D——, came up to them. Now, said D——, who is a person who is very loquacious when "corned," but exactly the opposite when sober. At the present time, being "tight," he said if the company had no objections he would tell a story. They told him to 'fire away,' whereupon he spoke as follows:

"A certain king—don't recollect the name—had a philosopher, upon whose judgement he always depended. Now it so happened that one day the King took it into his head to go hunting, and after summoning his nobles, and making all necessary preparations, he summoned his philosopher and asked him if it would rain. The philosopher told him it would not, and he and his nobles departed. While journeying along, they met a countryman mounted on a jackass; he advised them to return, 'for,' said he, 'it will certainly rain.' They smiled contemptuously upon him, and passed on. Before they had gone many miles, however, they had reason to regret not having taken the rustic's advice, as a heavy shower coming up, they were drenched to the skin.

When they had returned to the palace, the King reprimanded the philosopher severely for telling him that it would clear, when it was not. 'I met a countryman,' said he, 'and he knows a great deal more than you, for he told me it would rain, whereas you told me it would not.'

The King then gave the philosopher his walking papers, and sent for the countryman who made his appearance. 'Tell me,' said the King, 'how you knew it would rain?' 'I didn't know' said the rustic, 'my jackass told me.' 'And how, pray, did he tell you?' the King said in astonishment. 'By pricking up his ears, your majesty.' The King now sent the countryman away; procuring the jackass, he placed him in the office the philosopher had filled.

'And here,' observed D—— looking very wise, 'here is where the King made a mistake.' 'How so?' inquired the auditors. 'Why, ever since that time,' said D—— with a grin on his phiz, 'every jackass wants an office.'

STRAYED.—An exchange contains the following notice:

"Broke into the pocket of the publisher of this paper, sometime during the week, a 10 cent piece. Who it belongs to, or where it came from is a mystery to us, and we earnestly request the owner to come and take it away; we have been without money so long, that its use is entirely forgotten. Upon one side there is a beautiful young lady with a handkerchief to her eyes—weeping to think that she has no mate, and a night cap on a pole as a signal of distress."

ONLY ME.—A lady had two children—both girls. The elder was a fair child; the younger a beauty, and the mother's pet. Her love was centered in it. The elder was neglected, while 'sweet' (the pet name of the youngest) received every attention that love could bestow. One day after a severe illness, the mother was sitting in the parlor, when she heard a childish step on the stairs, and her thoughts were instantly with the favorite. "Is that you, sweet?" she inquired. "No, mama," was the sad and touching reply, 'it isn't sweet, it's only me.' The mother's heart smote her, and from that hour 'only me' was restored to an equal place in her affections.

The love of fun is not unknown among the serious looking Chinamen. An English store keeper, wishing to advertise his wares in the Chinese language, engaged a Chinaman to paint him a sign. It did not answer expectation, for the only perceptible effect it had on the Chinese was to excite a grin. By a bribe he obtained a translation in English, and found it to be as follows: 'Don't buy anything here—store-keeper a rogue.'

The Widow's Prayer.

The Earth is heavy on his breast,
And o'er his grave is spread the sod,
And Sorrow is the lot to me.
And hard to bear O. God!
But Savior, to the stroke I bend,
For thou art still the widow's friend.

Then for Sarepta's widow's waste
Didst freely bread and oil prepare,
And when her only son lay dead,
Father, thy hand was there
And when from Nain one morning went,
Back in rejoicing was she sent.

And thou too art the Orphan's God,
And will to them a Father be
O then from Heaven in mercy look
And bless them graciously
Who weeping at thy side do kneel
O'erflowing with the grief they feel.

And Jesus in our midst be thou,
Our Guide, our Comforter, our stay,
And while providing for our wants
The tempter drive away,
O heal the woundings of thy rod,
On thee we lean, protect us God. T

Holloway's Pills, in spite of the prejudices of medical martinets, have found their way into the leading hospitals and dispensaries of Europe, and are now the established family medicine of all classes in the U. S. Upon the stomach and liver, which prepare and temper the blood, upon the organs which vitalize it in the process of respiration, and upon the excretery vessels, which discharge from the system the residum not required for the purposes of nutrition, these pills operate in an almost miraculous manner, regulating, invigorating, cleansing, and fortifying the whole physique. In bilious disorders, dyspepsia, asthma, diarrhea, dysentery, sick headache and complaints peculiar to females, their effect is astonishing.

There are occasions when even the healthiest people need medicines, the changes of diet, of the weather, and hundreds of other causes, produce a laxity in the system that needs correcting, or in other words, the liver becomes slightly deranged, and needs a stimulator. If all who find themselves in this situation will try Dr. Sanford's Invigorator, they may be sure of relief, as we can testify to its efficacy in curing headache, indigestion sour stomach, and other ills so common in a family. It acts, as a medicine, easier and better than any dose of pills we ever swallowed, and it is so mild that the smallest infant can take it.

COPARTNERSHIP.—It may interest our brethren of the press to know that Dr. J. C. Ayer, of Lowell, (Cherry Pectoral and Cathartic Pills) has associated with him, his brother, Frederick Ayer, Esq., long and favorably known as a leading merchant of the west. Mr. Ayer will conduct the widely extended business of the firm, which now reaches to the commercial nations of both hemispheres, while the Doctor will devote himself to his scientific investigations and pursuits.

☛ The Canadian Parliament have passed an act, providing that after the 31st of December next, pounds, shillings and pence will be superseded by dollars and cents—all public accounts, from the above date, having to be rendered in that form. This is an excellent amendment, and will give general satisfaction.

☛ The Missuri democrat states that an employee of one of the moneyed institutions of that city, has made tracks for unknown parts, carrying with him about twenty thousand dollars to pay expenses.

☛ The Montreal Gazette records the death of one of the oldest merchants in that city, Samuel Gerrard. He was at one time President of the Bank of Montreal.

CONSOLIDATION OF NEW YORK AND BROOKLIN CITIES.—This question has long been agitated among the people of the two communities interested but hitherto the affair has taken no definite shape. Now, however, we observe that a committee of the State Senate has reported favorably upon a bill consolidating not only these two cities but also with them the town of Flatbush, Flatlands, New Utrecht, Gravesend, and New Lots, into one municipality. These towns cover all the territory between New York Bay, at the Battery, and Coney Island, a distance of fourteen miles. In fact, the proposed limits would include the whole eastern end of Long Island.

Tecumseh Union School.

The Examination of the Union School in its various departments, occupied a considerable portion of the last week. The examinations were throughout well sustained, and indicated good drilling and a thorough course of instruction on the part of the teachers.

The attendance of the public upon the school examinations was not equal to the interest heretofore manifested in procuring suitable rooms and accomodations for the interest of the school, and did not do justice to the schools, nor to the reputation of the citizens themselves. We know that there were many things to interfere with this, and we further know that there is a very sincere and permanent interest in the success and efficiency of our schools in our midst, and we were therefore the more disappointed that it should not have more fully developed itself in that direction.

There is really no way is which parents can better subserve the true interests of their children, than by often visiting the schools, and thus encouraging them in their studies, and in the earnest and efficient development of these educational plans which their instructors have arranged for their benefit. Nor is there any more certain guarantee to teachers, of the reliable sympathy and co-operation of parents in their educational plans and labors in behalf of their children, than a disposition, thus manifested, to see and judge for themselves.

The moral support which this gives to the character and control of the instructor in the pupils mind is of important value nor is it of any less value in the encouragement which it affords directly to the teacher. We hope therefore that our parents will at all times feel that they have so direct an interest in the schools where their children are being educated, as to induce them to visit them more frequently, that when their children have exerted themselves in their studies, and in the cultivation of a refined and respectful deportment, they may feel that it is understood and appreciated.

The public exercises at the High School on Friday afternoon were well attended, and well sustained The New School Building is now nearly completed, and is much admired by all. Our citizens are, and may well be proud of it.

The next term of the schools will commence on Monday, April 13th 1857, giving a little over two weeks vacation, after which there will be no further interruption or noise, from the workmen engaged on or about the new school buildings. A full term is confidently anticapated.

LENAWEE CIRCUIT COURT.—The spring term will commence at Adrian, on Tuesday next at 10 oclock A. M. Judge Wilson, Presiding—Calendar light.

Narrow Escape from the Savages.

From the Springfield (Ill.) Republican.

Mr. William Baily, formerly of Lynaville, Ogle county, in this State, called upon us last evening, and related the following thrilling and remarkable narrative.

From his description of places and things which he saw, we are perfectly satisfied that his statement is correct in every respect. A gentleman of this city, who has travelled over the country described, assures us that no person except he, had visited these places, and witnessed what he describes, could ever have related truthfully what he related. He converses in several different Indian languages, and appears to have paid close attention to what he saw passing around him during his sojourn among the savages He looked well and hearty, and with the exception of his hands being torn by some wounds from a tomahawk he seems to have suffered no damage. He left on the cars last evening for Logan county, where his mother resides.

Mr. Baily left here some eighteen months ago with a party of nine persons to engage in driving teams from the gulf of Mexico to the Rio Grande. They landed at Indianola, and hired to a man named Ross to drive team for him. They drove to the Nueas river and camped — While asleep their mules were stolen by the Indians. They prepared the next day to follow them and came up with them at sunset. They saw six Indians, fired and killed them all, when they were attacked by about 300 who were secreted in the woods. They immediately fired on the white men killing all but Mr. Baily whom they took a prisoner They then took him back to the wagons, which they plundered of all the arms and ammunition in them They took two boxes of government Colt's revolvers, and twenty kegs of powder. The prisoner was stripped of all his clothing, and bound hand and foot upon a poney They then started for their encampment in the Witchataw Mountains, which they reached after eleven days hard riding.

They remained in camp about a week, and then started on a robbing expedition to attack a train on the Sante Fe road.—They remained about five days waiting, when a merchant train came along. They proceeded to surprise the train and killed every person with it, took the goods and mules belonging to the train, and started for the Kickapoo settlement, traded off the mules for ponies, and returned to the Witchataw Mountains.

The prisoner was kept strictly confied during the day, and was tied up every night with pieces of raw hide, by the hands to the limbs of a tree, as high up as he could reach and stand on the ground During the day he was allowed to lie down and sleep a few hours.

During the time Mr. Baily was with them, they went on five robbing expeditions, taking him always along with them. The last merchant train they robbed, they took two men prisoners, who had bravely defended themselves till their weapons were all discharged, and who had killed twelve Indians. These two were then taken and tied to a stake and skinned alive. Every time he would close his they would punch him with spears and bayonets until he would open them, and look on this picture of revolting horror. They then took the skin, reeking with warm blood, and slapped him around the face with it, covering him with blood, and telling him, if he tried to escape, this should be his fate.

One of their excursions was against the United States mail wagons. They killed the five men with them, tore open the letters got out the money, and after cutting out the pictures from the bank bills, threw them away. They kept all the newspapers that had any pictures in them—throwing everything away that was not embellished

For three nights after this, they did not tie him up, but kept guard over him. The third night they had a big war dance and in the excitement, forgot Mr. Baily. While dancing around their fire in front of the tent, he crawled out under the back of the tent, seized one of the ponies, and escaped. He was soon missed, and was followed for five days. At the expiration of that time, they came so close on him that they fired at him, which obliged him to leave his horse and take to the mountains. Fortunately he found a small cave just large enough to crawl into, in which place he remained a day and a half the Indians being so near him that he could hear their footsteps as they searched for him.

He remained in this position until he was assured his pursurers had left, when he emerged from his concealment and made a straight shoot for Kickapoo settlement, about 600 miles distant. In a month he reached the longed for point, where he hoped to find friends and assistance. Nor was he disappointed in this He was kindly furnished food and clothes by the Kickapoos. He had subsisted for the whole month previous to this on birch roots, which he dug with his hands on his lonely march. While with the Camanches he was fed on raw horse flesh. Not a very pleasant diet, truly. The Kickapoos treated him very kiaply, and showed him on his long journey to civilization

After leaving them, four day's journey brought him to the Chickasaw's camp, camp, from thence he proceeded to the Choctaw nation, who treated him in the most humane manner He journeyed on to the Shawnee nation, where he was welcomed to the best they had in their lodges Leaving them, he next reached the Cherokees, and then made for Missouri, which State he made some 20 miles north of the Neosho. From thence he came to St. Louis, and then to this city; having traveled constantly and steadily on foot for over two months.

As stated before, he left there last evening for Logan county, where he has a mother anxiously waiting his return Mr Bailey is a young man, about 22 years of age, and born on the 4th of July, our national day of Independence. He says he is an independent man, but did not feel so at the time he was witnessing the horrid murder of his fellow men, among the savages of the far West. After eighteen months' hardships and privations, he finds himself once more among civilized people, and in a land of peace and happiness. We should suppose by this time he would be glad to locate in Suckerdom, and roam no more.

New York, March 28.

The steamship Illinois arrived at eight o'clock this A. M, with California dates to 5th, and nearly $1,200,000 in specie. She connected with the Golden Age, and the latter passed March 10th, off Cape Corientes, steamer Sonora bound up

The steamer Panama, from San Juan, arrived at Panama, with twenty five deserters from Walker. They were in a most destitute condition. Their passage to the United States was paid by the Costa Rican government. One hundred left on the Granada. The number remaining came in the Illinois, which left Aspinwall March 19th.

The Costa Rican papers state that 500 troops are to be added to the allied forces. Gen. Canas would march with 1,500 on Rivas and 1,000 would march against San Juan del Sur. The intention is to surround Walker with 6,000 troops.

Nothing later from Walkers position. His case is considered desperate.

At latest dates from Bogota, the proposition of Mr Morse, our special Envoy to New Granada, were under secret consideration.

There seemed to be but little chance of an amicable arrangement The press and a majority of Congress is of the bitterest opposition.

The publication in El Tampo of what purported to be Morse's proposition had created great excitement on the Isthmus The natives are anxious that the government will refuse the proposition, although they expect the result will be the military occupation of the Isthmus by the U S

Some of the deserters from Walker state that his troops had unanimously refused to leave Rivas to fight, but were willing to defend their position.

Ned McGowan, the vigilance committee exile, had returned to Sacramento and demanded a trial. A resolution to fix his place of trial at Sacramento, was under debate.

A special election for Senator from San Francisco resulted in the election of the vigilance committee candidate.

The supreme court of California has decided that the Legislature has no authority to appropriate money to pay interest on the State debt, and that the court will join against levying a tax for that purpose.

The Senate had passed a resolution that the State's honor required the payment of the State debt. A resolution submitting the proposition to the people, was lost.

Bates, the late State Treasurer, was indicted for felony. His trial commenced the day the steamer left.

The deficit in his accounts is $34,000.

Estelle, keeper of the State Prison, was reported by the legislative committee as unworthy of his office, for various gross misdemeanors,

G F Waldron, book keeper of Wells, Fargo & Co., had been arrested for embezzling $8000.

Advices from Oregon and the Sandwich Island unimportant.

☛ A young man brought a suit against Isaac Kneepe, last week, for the recovery of the price of two seats at the Theatre. It seems that he went to the box office, and asked if there were any seats vacant in the dress circle. The answer was yes. He bought tickets for himself and a friend but on seeking for seats he could not find any, and he therefore demanded his money back. This was refused, and he brought suit to recover it. Tariff Modifications

The following are the leading features of the modifications which were made in the present tariff, at the close of the recent action of Congress. The design of these changes in the revenue policy, is to reduce the annual receipts of the Treasury, and the New York Tribune, from which we take the list of alterations, expresses the belief that they will accomplish that result:

1. A large extention of the Free List, placing thereon many articles scarcely produced or rivaled in this country which enter as raw materials into the composition of our Manufactures

2. A reduction of the present rates of duty on Iron, Cotton and Wooled Fabrics, Hemp, Sugar, Wool costing over twenty cents per pound, and most other articles now charged thirty, to twenty-five per cent.

3 Wool costing less than twenty cents per pound will henceforth be free.

4. Distilled Spirits, Liquors, &c. hitherto charged one hundred per cent., are reduced to seventy-five per cent.

5 Wines, Cut Glass, Meats, Raisins, Snuff, Cigars and all forms of manufactured Tobacco, all manufacures of Rosewood, Mahogany, &c., Sweetmeats, Prunes, &c., are reduced from forty per cent to thirty, if not to a lower figure.

6. A general reduction of twenty per cent. on all articles not carried to the Free List or reduced either to four or eight per cent.

The above changes were effected, by means of a compromise, between the iron, and other prominent interests.

They Shan't Come

The Richmond Enquirer announces that the proprietors of Virginia wild lands shall not sell their lands to Free State men. It says:

"We observe that Northern journals are quoting and commenting on Southern sentiment on this subject, which, so far as expressed, is somewhat contradictory and conflicting Some of our contemporaries have denounced the movement in unmeasured terms, while there are others who manifest a disposition to encourage rather than deter this immigration of Northern capitalists: provided, of course, that they come with a determination to become quietly incorporated into our society, and with a willingness to enlist under our institutions Without meaning to fling defiance in the face of abolitionism, disguised, as an enemy; too timid, too mean, and too mercenary to appreciate patriotism, or opposition arising from impulses, from pride, we have no hesitation in saying that we are inclined to concur with those of our contemporaries who have arrayed themselves in uncompromising antagonism to the scheme for the 'relief, resuscitation, and regeneration of Virginia,' not that we would offer any obstacle to the settlement in our midst of citizens from the North who come to us with feelings of fraternal friendship, with no secret animosities against our institutions, no sinister designs upon our domestic happiness and peace; but because we think we see the stiletto of the assassin under the garb of the shepherd—because we think this man of peace, this husbandman with his axe and plow, is an incendiary in disguise—because we think we detect the devil in the vestments of a friend"

WASHINGTON, March 28.

The jury in the case of Mr Lee, indicted for the murdes of Mr. Hume, in the Pension Office, in this city, returned into court this morning with a verdict of acquittal The Jury were governed by instructions of the court, given at the instance of the counsel for the accused.—Mr. Lee, it will be remembered, openly but erroneously, charged Hume at the last public reception given by President Pierce, with having picked his pocket—The next morning when Hume called upon him (Lee) at the Pension Office, to convince Lee that he was mistaken, Lee not only refused to retract the charge, but firmly reitarated it For this Hume caned Lee who shot him.

WASHINGTON, March 30.

Every exertion is being made by the Navy Department to enable the U S steam frigate Niagara to leave New York on the 10th of April. Owing to the weight of the submarine cable, she will not take her armament on board.

The Cabinet have had several night consultations in relation to the affairs of Kansas.

The new Secretary of Kansas, Mr Stanton, will leave next Monday, and will be acting Governor until the arrival of Mr Walker, whose private business will detain him here till early in May

CINCINNATI, March 28

The cause of the explosion at St Louis last night was the accidental discharge of a pistol into a canister of powder Three persons were killed, one severely injured and several slightly. The stores were entirely destroyed. Loss, probably $50,000.

A large fire occured at Liberty, Mo., about a week ago. Loss $25,000.

NEW YORK, March 30.

Information has been received here that on the 23d of December last, the National Nicaragua Government issued a decree revoking all the acts of the Walker Government, from Nov 4, 1855, to June 11, 1856, including the decree revoking the charter of the Accessory Transit Company.

It is also stated that a partition of Nicaragua has been arranged by a convention in session at San Miguel, in the Republic of San Salvador, and it has been determined to divide the State between Costa Rica, Honduras and San Salvador. The Nicaraguans it is said, consent to the arrangement This dismembered country will be garrisoned by the neighboring states, to preserve order; and after a specified time it will be re-united and and placed once more in the position of an independent Republic.

THE LATE MR. ZIMMERMAN'S WILL.—The Toronto Globe says that by the provisions of the late Mr. Zimerman's will, his entire property is left to his two sons, with the exception of some few comparatively small legacies to his other relatives Messrs Joseph Woodruff, Oswald Ranney and Richard Miller, are appointed executors. His widow, of course, receives in her right of dower, one third of the whole estate. The value of the property is variously estimated at from three hundred and fifty thousand, to seven hundred and fifty thousand pounds. Under the will the whole of the real estate is to be sold

EPIDEMIC.—The Oswego Times says that the extent of the new epidemic known by the name of "brain fever," is truly alarming thoughout Madison and Onondaga counties,

A gentleman who has lately visited the former county, informs us that, in some localities, the people are leaving in dismay. Persons are attacked with the remarkable malady very suddenly, soon become insane and die in a few hours.—We do not know that any have recovered when once attacked by the disease.—Duane Brown and Richard Thomas, Esqs., two prominent lawyers of Madison county, have fallen victims to it, and we are told in some of the villages, deaths occur daily. As yet there is no rational explanation of the disease

A HARD STRUGGLE FOR LIFE.—The Livingston (N Y) Republican announces the death of John McDonald, who resides in that town, and who was found in one of the coldest nights last winter, lying in the highway, nearly frozen to death. At that time both hands and feet were amputated Since that time his legs have been twice amputated. This was certainly a remarkable struggle for life.

☛ The steamer Wm. M Morrison lately arrived at St. Louis, brought five pieces of sculptured marble which were exhumed from the ruins of ancient Nineveh; and presented to the Mercantile Library Association of St. Louis by Mr Marsh.

ANN ARBOR, March 26.

MEDICAL COMMENCEMENT.—The Medical commencement came off this morning. A Thesis was read by W Parmenter, said by medical men to have been a fine production. The principal feature of the commencement, apart from conferring the degree on the graduates, some twenty-seven in number was the address of Dr. Andrews It was witty, pungent and practical

College life will now subside to its accustomed quietness and flow on as before, which is by all good students a consummation most devoutly to be wished. Respectfully, M.

Det. Adv.

☛ Two slaves—a yellow man and a black—owned by a Nashville hotel keeper, attempted to escape from bondage last week, by traveling together as master and servant One was sufficiently white to carry out the deception, until recognized by a Nashville merchant, Mr. Chas. Fox, who was on his way to New York. Levi, the yellow man, finding he was detected, drew a pistol and shot himself in the abdomen and afterwards cut his throat, preferring death than to return to Slavery.

THE RIGHTS OF THE PRESS.—Some time since Dr. Gibbes, the editor of the South Carolina, was forcibly ejected by the Mayor and Chief of Police from the Council Chamber, at a public meeting of the city Council of Columbia, S. C., in consequence of his refusal to submit to an inquisition whether he designed or not to an report their proceedings Dr G, subsequently brought an action against the parties for damages, and a few days ago the case was tried, resulting in the Mayor being muleted in $25 damages, and the Chief of Police in 6¼ cents, with cost against each.

Capt. James C Gibson, Superintendent of the Great Western Despatch, left Buffalo on the 13th inst., for Dunkirk and Cleveland, and has not since been heard from. His friends are very anxious about him.

No Family

Can afford to be without Mustang Liniment in their house. The many accidents we are liable to, may render it necessary any moment, and nothing is capable of performing such a certain cure. (Extract) "In lifting the kettle from the fire it caught and scalded my hands and person severely—one hand almost to a crisp. The torture was unbearable. It was an awful sight. * * * The Mustang Liniment appeared to extract the pain almost immediately. It healed rapidly and left no scar of account. Chas. Foster, 420 Broad street, Philadelphia." It is truly a wonderful article. It will cure any case of swelling, burns, stiff joints, Eruptions, or rheumatism. For Horses it should never be dispensed with. One Dollar's worth of Mustang has frequently saved a valuable horse. It cures galls, sprains, Ringbone, spavin and founders. Beware of imitations. Sold in all parts of the habitable globe.

A MEDICAL REVOLUTION.

THE WORLD UNANIMOUS.

Holloway's Ointment.

—OO—

THE GREAT COUNTER IRRITANT.

The virus of disease often makes its way to the internal organs through the pores of the skin. This penetrating Ointment, melting under the hand as it is rubbed in, is absorbed through the same channels, and, reaching the seat of inflamation promptly and invariably subdues it, whether located in the kidneys, the liver, the lungs, or any other important organ. It penetrates the surface of the interior, through the countless tubes that communicate with the skin as summer rain passes into the fevered earth, diffusing its cool and regenerating influence.

Skin Diseases and Glandular Swellings.

Every species of exterior irritation is quickly reduced by the anti-inflammatory action of this Ointment. Angry eruptions, such as Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Tetter, Ringworm, Scald head, Nettle Rash, Scabies (or Itch), &c., die out, to return no more, under its application. Hospital experience in all parts of the world proves its infallibility in diseases of the skin, the muscles, the joints and the glands.

ULCERS, SORES & TUMORS.

The effect of this unrivaled external remedy upon scrofula and other virulent ulcers and sores, is almost Miraculous. It first discharges the poison which produces suppuration and proud flesh, and thus the cures which its healing properties afterward complete are safe as well as permanent.

Wounds, Bruises, Burns and Scalds

In cases of the fracture of the bones, injuries caused by steam explosions, bruises, burns, scalds, rheumatism, stiffness of the joints, and contraction of the sinews, it is employed and warmly recommended by the faculty. This marvelous remedy has been introduced by its inventor in person into all the leading hospitals of Europe, and no private household should be without it.

UNDENIABLE TESTIMONY

The medical staff of the French and English Armies in the Crimea, have officially signed their approval of Holloway's Ointment, as the most reliable dressing for sabre cuts, stabs, and gun-shot wounds. It is also used by the surgeons of the Allied Navies.

Both the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following cases.

Bunions.	Lumbago	Sore Legs	Swelled Glands
Burns	Mercurial	Sore Breasts	Stiff Joints
Chapped Hands	Eruptions	Sore Heads	Ulcers
Chilblains	Piles.	Sore Throats	Venereal Sores
Fistulas	Rheumatism	Sores of all kinds	Wounds of all kinds
Gout	Salt Rheum	Sprains	Scalds

HEALTH OR SICKNESS.

CHOOSE BETWEEN THEM.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

The blood furnishes the material of every tissue, muscle, gland and fibre in the human frame. When pure, it secures health to every organ; when corrupt, it necessarily produces disease. Holloway's Pills operate directly upon the elements of the disease, neutralizing the principle of disease and thus radically curing the malady, whether located in the nerves, the stomach, the liver, the bowels, the muscles, the skin, the brain, or any other part of the system.

USED THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

Holloway's Pills are equally efficacious in complaints common to the whole human race, and in disorders peculiar to certain climates and localities.

ALARMING DISORDERS.

Dyspepsia and derangement of the liver, the source of infirmity and suffering, and the cause of innumerable deaths, yield to these curatives, in all cases, however aggravated, acting as a mild purgative alternative and tonic; they relieve the bowels, purify the fluids, and invigorate the system and the constitution at the same time.

General Weakness—Nervous Complaints.

When all stimulants fail, the renovating and bracing properties of these Pills give firmness to the shaking nerves and enfeebled muscles of the victim of general debility.

DELICATE FEMALES.

All irregularities and ailments incident to the delicate and sensitive organs of the sex are removed or prevented by a few doses of these mild but infallible alternatives. No mother who regards her own or her children's health should fail to have them within her reach.

Scientific Endorsements.

The London "Lancet," the London "Medical Review," and the most eminent of the faculty in Great Britain, France and Germany, have eulogised the Pills and their inventor.

Holloway's Pills are the best remedy known in the World for the following Diseases

Asthma.	Diarrhœa	Inflamation	Stone and
Bowel Complaints	Dropsy	Inward weakness	Gravel
Coughs	Debility	Liver Complaints	Secondary Symptoms
Colds	Fever & Ague.	Lowness of Spirits	Venerial affections
Chest Diseases	Female Complaints	Piles	Worms of all Kinds
Costiveness	Headaches	Rheumatism
Dyspepsia	Indigestion
	Influenza

DR. SANFORD'S

INVIGORATOR,

OR LIVER REMEDY.

IS REQUIRED TO CURE ANY ONE TROUBLED WITH LIVER Complaints, unless the most desperate of cases, and the second bottle will with scarce a single failure, restore the patient to health and vigor. We wish to call the attention of all to these facts, that the Invigorator is compounded by a physician who has used it in his practice for the past twenty years with a success almost incredulous and that it is entirely vegetable being composed wholly of gums.

Some idea of the strength of these gums may be formed when it is known one bottle of the Invigorator contains as much strength as one hundred doses of Calomel without any of its deleterious effects.

One bottle is the surest thing known to carry away the bad effects of mineral poison of any kind.

Only one bottle is needed to throw out of the system the effects of medicine after a long sickness.

One bottle Taken for Jaundice, removes all yellowness or unnatural color from the skin.

One dose after eating is sufficient to relieve the stomach and prevent the food from rising and sour-ing.

Only one dose taken before retiring prevents nightmare.

One dose taken at night loosens the bowels gently, and cures costiveness.

One dose taken after each meal will cure Dyspepsia.

One dose of two tea spoonsful will always relieve the Sick Headache.

One bottle taken for female obstruction removes the cause of the disease and makes a perfect cure.

Only one dose immediately relieves Cholic, while One dose often repeated is a sure cure for Cholera Morbus and a sure preventative of cholera.

One dose taken often will prevent the occurrence of bilious attacks while it relieves all painful feelings.

Eight or ten doses taken occasionally is one of the best remidies for a cold ever known.

Thousands of cases of inflamation and weakness of the lungs have been cured by the Invigorator

One dose taken a short time before eating gives vigor to the appetite and makes food digest well.

One dose often repeated cures Chronic Diarrhœa in its worst forms while summer and bowel complaints yield almost to the first dose.

One or two doses cures attacks caused by worms while for worms in children, there is no surer, safer and speedier remedy in the world as it never fails.

There is no exaggeration in these statements, they are plain and sober facts, that we can give evidence to prove, while all who use it are giving their unsolicited testimony in its favor.

We wish all who are sick and debilitated to try this remedy, and test it thoroughly and any who are not benefited by its use we should like to hear from, as we have yet to hear from the first person who has used a bottle of Invigorator without receiving benefit, for there are such astonishing medicinal properties in it, that all, no matter how long they have been affected, if their complaint arises from a deranged liver, will be benefited, if not entirely cured.

Proclamation to the People of the Realm.

Know all the People that J. K. Wellman have lately bought of Mr. T. Taylor his book Establishment, which I have consolidated with my mammoth Store near the Post Office. Know also that I have some $15,000 worth of stock. My establishment is much the largest of any Book Store between Cleveland and Chicago. Know also that I am doing a large Wholesale as well as Retail trade, and I am furnish Individuals, Town Libraries, Book Agents, Schools and Colleges on better terms than any other dealer on the line of the Michigan Southern Railroad. I am devoting much attention to the School Book Trade and have on hand and can furnish every variety of books used in our Common and High Schools. I keep on hand a variety of Writing Books, Paper, Ink, Pens Slates etc. My stock of Wall Paper is very large and varied—Cheap, large and small. For the benefit of those who live at a distance, I will, for the retail price, send with order, by mail at my risk, forward any number of books either by Mail or by Express at my own expense. Five dollars will buy six dollars worth of books. Ten dollars, twelve and twenty dollars twenty-five dollars worth of books. Letter paper and envelopes of every style in the same proportion

J. K. Wellman, whose rapid strides from his start on Main Street to his splendid mammoth Book Store in Lothrop's Block, three doors west of the Post Office, has been unprecedented in the history of the Book business in our city. Mr. Wellman, who has had a good experience in the business, has now probably the best and largest assortment of Books in the State, and we think a glance at his stock will satisfy any one of the truth of this remark. His great facilities for purchase at low rates, enable him to defy all competition, by selling at a very low figure. We congratulate the people of Southern Michigan upon the existence of this mammoth wholesale and retail Book Establishment, and the extensive part it is taking in furnishing books at low rates. We can assure our friends abroad, in this and other counties, that they can buy Books cheaper at Wellman's than at any other place in the west. Come and see.—[Adrian Expositor

WELLMAN'S LITTERARY EMPORIUM.—Devoted to a Sound, High-toned and healthy Literature, Religion, Freedom, Temperance, Education and all topics calculated to Expand and Elevate the Mind. J. K. Wellman, formerly of the Miscellany, Editor and Proprietor.

The Emporium is published Monthly, and will contain at least 40 pages in each number, making 500 pages in a year. TERMS—Single copy for a year in advance, $1; Six copies, $5; Thirteen copies, $10; Single number, 10 cents. Money may be sent by mail at the risk of the Publisher. Published by J. K. Wellman, Adrian Michigan. Emporium Office, in Wellman's Book Store, near the Post Office. Postage six cents a year if paid in advance.

We design to make this periodical what its name imports, an Emporium of Literature. It will be independent of party or sect. Free thought, and free expression will be its standing motto. To the extent of our ability we shall advocate the cause of Christianity, Temperance, Freedom, and other subjects which we think calculated to elevate mankind.

The Emporium will contain articles from men of various professions and opinions. We shall also present various styles; The bold, the original, the terse, the essayic, the sarcastic, the beautiful, sublime, the ideal, and the romantic shall make up its repast. We expect original articles from the following writers; Rev. T. C. Gardner, T. M. Cooley Esq., Rev. George C. Curtis, Andrew Howell Esq., Rev. Edward McClure, Lydia Jane Pierson, Rev. R. G. Green, M. N. Halsey, Seba Smith, Delphine Taylor, Rev. O. H. White, Rev. E. H. Pilcher, Professors Churchill, Whipple and Hubbard, Rev's. W. W. Crane, and Luther Lee, C. B. Stebbins, and President Tappan

☞ We want 100 Agents in every part of the west, for the Literary Emporium; to whom a liberal percentage will be given. J. K. WELLMAN.

Book Seller and Publisher, Adrian, Mich

☞ School Teachers who are about closing their winter schools, and will be looking for business, will do well to take an agency for this magazine.—With the Emporium, and a small stock of books, they can do a good business.

Wellman's Literary Emporium.

This new Magazine, J. K. Wellman Editor and Proprietor, has made its appearance. It certainly does great credit to the enterprise and literary taste of Mr. Wellman. It is printed by S P & A Jermain from stereotype plates, and contains an original and talented article from the pen of Rev. T. Gardner on "American Civilization" also an original article from the pen of Lydia Jane Pierson, together with others from the pens of G. W. Bethune and others. Mr. Wellman is determined to make this periodical every way of the character of merit, and worthy a liberal patronage. Terms, $1,00 in advance. Office at Wellman's mammoth Book Emporium.—[Adrian Expositor.

A NEW MAGAZINE—ADRIAN ENTERPRISE.—About the 5th of February, Mr J. K. Wellman, will issue the first number of his new monthly, The Literary Emporium, a magazine of forty pages of the choicest original and select matter. Mr. Wellman informs us that he designs the Emporium for a family magazine, a fireside companion, and nothing except the most unexceptionable matter will find its way into its columns.

This is a new era in the existance of our young city, and we trust it will be successful as, judging from Mr W's former experience we doubt not it will be. It will do much towards giving our town a reputation abroad.—Adrian Watchtower

Cathartic Pills,

(SUGAR COATED,)

ARE MADE TO

CLEANSE THE BLOOD AND CURE THE SICK.

Invalids, Farmers, Mothers, Physicians, Philanthropists, read their Merits, and judge of their Virtues.

Headache, Sick Headache, Foul Stomach,

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 1, 1856.

DR. J. C. AYER. Sir: I have been repeatedly cured of the worst headache ever suffered by man, by one or two of your Pills. Running instantly from my head, they check disease at once. If they will cure others as they do me, the fact is worth knowing.

Yours with great respect, ED. F. PRIBLE,

Clerk of Steamer Clarion.

Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints.

Testimonial of one Physician.

Washington, D. C., 7 Feb., 1856.

Dear Sir: I have used your Pills in my general and hospital practice, and find them the best cathartic we have. They operate efficiently, and leave the bowels in a healthful condition. Their regulating action on the liver is quick and decided, consequently they are an admirable remedy for derangements of that organ, and of the digestive apparatus. Their sugar coating renders them pleasant to take, and in all cases of biliousness that I have used them, they readily yield to their influence.

Professionally yours, ALONZO BALL, M. D.,

Physician of the Marine Hospital.

Dysentery, Rheumatism and Worms.

Post Office, Hartland, Lv. Co., Mich., Nov. 16, 1855.

Dr. Ayer: Your Pills are the perfection of medicine. They have done my wife more good than I can tell you. She had been sick and ailing every few months. Went off to be doctored at great expense, but got no better. Finally commenced taking your Pills, which soon cured her, by expelling large quantities of worms (dead) from her body. They afterwards cured her and our two children of bloody dysentery. One of our neighbors had it bad, and my wife cured him with two doses of your Pills, while others around us paid from five to twenty dollars doctors' bills, and lost much time, without being cured entirely even then. Such a medicine as yours, which is actually good and honest, will be prized here.

GEO. J. GRIFFIN, Postmaster.

Indigestion and Impurity of the Blood.

From Rev. J. V. Himes, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.

Dr. Ayer: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to visit in distress. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood they are the very best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends. Yours, J. V. HIMES.

Warsaw, Wyoming Co., N. Y., Oct. 24, 1855.

Dear Sir: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system, and purify the fountains of the blood.

JOHN G. MEACHAM, M. D.

From a Prominent Merchant of St. Louis, Feb. 4, 1856.

Dr. Ayer: Your Pills are the paragon of all that is great in medicine. They have cured my little daughter of ulcerous sores upon her hands and feet that had proved incurable for years. Her mother has been long grievously afflicted with blotches and pimples on her skin and in her hair. After our child was cured, she also tried your Pills: and they have cured her. ASA MORSEMAN.

Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and Gout.

From the Rev. Dr. Hewitt, of the Methodist Epis. Church.

Pulaski House, Savannah, Ga., Jan. 5, 1856.

Honored Sir: I should be ungrateful for the relief your skill has brought me if I did not report my case to you. A cold settled in my limbs and brought on excruciating neuralgic pains, which ended in chronic rheumatism. Notwithstanding I had the best of physicians, the disease grew worse and worse, until by the advice of your excellent agent in Baltimore, Dr. Blackerde, I tried your Pills. Their effects were slow, but sure. By persevering in the use of them I am now entirely well.

Senate Chamber, Baton Rouge, La., 5 Dec., 1855.

Dr. Ayer: I have been entirely cured by your Pills of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease that had afflicted me for years. VINCENT SLIDELL.

For Dropsy, Plethora, or kindred Complaints, requiring an active purge, they are an excellent remedy.

For Costiveness or Constipation, and as a Dinner Pill, they are agreeable and effectual.

Fits, Suppression, Paralysis, Inflammation, and even Deafness, and Partial Blindness, have been cured by the alterative action of these Pills.

Most of the pills in market contain Mercury, which, although a valuable remedy in skilful hands, is dangerous in a public pill, from the dreadful consequences that frequently follow its incautious use. These contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, INFLUENZA, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, INCIPIENT CONSUMPTION,

We need not speak to the public of its virtues. Throughout every town, and almost every hamlet of the American States, its wonderful cures of pulmonary complaints have made it already known. Nay, few are the families in any civilized country on this continent without some personal experience of its efficacy; and fewer yet the communities any where which have not among them some living trophy of its victory

DR. Everson's Great American Remedy for Ague, Chills and Fever, is the most popular and certain remedy now known. The people and the press speak of it in the highest terms of commendation. It is pleasant to take; does not purge, vomit or sweat, but leaves the system. It contains no Arsenic, Strychnine, Quinine, or any other poisonous or injurious drug, but it is an originality discovered Antidote to Malaria and is an Ague eater. If has no equals. CERTIFICATES

Almost without number, might here be added from Physicians, Clergymen, officers of State, and private individuals; but the following will suffice.

From our intimate knowledge of Dr Everson, and the extraordinary virtues of his Ague remedy—being apprized of its constituents, and knowing, as we do, that it contains neither Arsenic, Quinine, Strichnine, Mercury or any poisonous or injurious drugs, we heartily commend it, and also his Family Physic, or Cathartic Pills, as medicines deserving the approbation of an intelligent public.

AYER'S

CHERRY PECTORAL,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Colds, Coughs, and Hoarseness.

BRIDFIELD, Mass. 20th Dec. 1855.

DR. J. C. AYER: I do not hesitate to say the best remedy I have ever found for Coughs, Hoarseness, Influenza, and the commonest symptoms of a Cold, is your Cherry Pectoral. Its constant use in my practice and my family for the past ten years has shown it to possess superior virtues for the treatment of these complaints. JOHN KNIGHT, M.D.

A. B. MORTLEY, Esq., of Utica, N. Y., writes: "I have used your Pectoral myself and in my family ever since you invented it, and believe it the best medicine for its purpose ever put up. With a bad cold I should sooner pay twenty-five dollars for a bottle than go without it, or take any other remedy."

Croup, Whooping Cough, Influenza.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Feb. 7, 1856.

BROTHER AYER: I will cheerfully certify, from personal knowledge, that your Cherry Pectoral is the best remedy we possess for the cure of Whooping Cough, Croup, and the chest diseases of children. We of your fraternity in the South appreciate your skill, and commend your medicine to our people.

HIRAM CONKLIN, M. D.

ANGIS LEE, Esq., MONTEREY, Tn., writes, 31 Jan., 1858: "I had a bilious Influenza, which confined me in doors six weeks, took many medicines without relief, finally tried your Pectoral by the advice of our clergyman. The first dose relieved the soreness in my throat and lungs; less than one half the bottle made me completely well. Your medicines are the cheapest as well as the best we can buy, and we esteem you, Doctor, and your remedies, as the poor man's friend."

Asthma or Phthisic, and Bronchitis.

WEST MANCHESTER, Pa., Feb. 4, 1856.

SIR: Your CHERRY PECTORAL is performing marvellous cures in this section. It has relieved several from alarming symptoms of consumption, and is now curing a man who has labored under an affection of the lungs for the last forty years. HENRY L. PARKS, Merchant.

A. A. RAMSEY, M.D., ALBION, Monroe Co., Iowa, writes, Sept. 6, 1855. "During my practice of many years I have found nothing equal to your CHERRY PECTORAL for giving ease and relief to consumptive patients, or curing such as are curable."

We might add volumes of evidence, but the most convincing proof of the virtues of this remedy is found in its effects upon trial.

Consumption.

Probably no one remedy has ever been known which cured so many and such dangerous cases as this. Some no human aid can reach; but even to those the CHERRY PECTORAL affords relief and comfort.

ASTOR HOUSE, NEW YORK CITY, March 5, 1856

DOCTOR AYER, LOWELL: I feel it a duty and a pleasure to inform you what your CHERRY PECTORAL has done for my wife. She had been five months declining under the dangerous symptoms of Consumption, from which no aid we could procure gave her much relief. She was steadily failing, until Dr. Strong, of this city, where we have come for advice, recommended a trial of your medicine. We have since had the satisfaction of seeing her restored to health, by the blessing of God, through your skill, for she has recovered from that day. She is not yet as strong as she used to be, but is free from her cough, and calls herself well.

Yours with gratitude and regard,
ORLANDO SHELBY, of SHELBYVILLE.

Consumptives, do not despair till you have tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It is made by one of the best medical chemists in the world, and its cures all around us speak the high merits of its virtues.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills.

THE science of Chemistry and Medicine have been taxed their utmost to produce this best, most perfect purgative which is known to man. Innumerable proofs are shown that these Pills have virtues which surpass in excellence the ordinary medicines, and that they win unprecedentedly upon the esteem of all men. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. Their penetrating properties stimulate the vital activities of the body, remove the obstructions of its organs, purify the blood, and expel disease. They purge out the foul humors which breed and grow distemper, stimulate sluggish or disordered organs into their natural action, and impart healthy tone with strength to the whole system. Not only do they cure the every-day complaints of every body, but also formidable and dangerous diseases that have baffled the best of human skill. While they produce powerful effects, they are at the same time, in diminished doses, the safest and best physic that can be employed for children. Being sugar-coated, they are pleasant to take; and being purely vegetable, are free from any risk of harm. Cures have been made which surpass belief were they not substantiated by men of such exalted position and character as to forbid the suspicion of untruth. Many eminent clergymen and physicians have lent their names to certify to the public the reliability of my remedies, while others have sent me the assurance of their conviction that my Preparations contribute immensely to the relief of my afflicted, suffering fellow-men.

Costiveness, Bilious Complaints, Rheumatism, Dropsy, Heartburn, Headache arising from a foul stomach, Sick headache, Indigestion, Morbid inaction of the bowels and Piles arising therefrom, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, all diseases of the Kidneys, Gravel, Gout, Erysipelas, all cutaneous eruptions, Mercurial Diseases, Salt Rheum, Scurvy, Ringworm, Scrofula or King's Evil. They also by purifying the blood and stimulating the system, cure many complaints which it would not be supposed they could reach, such as Deafness, Partial Blindness, Neuralgia and Nervous Irritability, Derangements of the Liver and Kidneys, Gout and other kindred complaints arising from a low state of the body or obstruction of the fine tissues.

The Great Family Weekly Paper

THE NEW YORK LEDGER has now attained the extraordinary circulation of One Hundred and Ninety Thousand copies. The LEDGER is devoted to POLITE LITERATURE, ORIGINAL TALES, SKETCHES, POETRY, ESSAYS, GOSSIP, CURRENT NEWS and maintains a high moral tone in every where acknowledged to be the best family paper in the world! Hence its extraordinary and unheard of popularity. Mr. BONNER, the Proprietor of the LEDGER, employs the best talent in the country, and by so doing makes the best paper. Such writers as Fanny Fern, Sylvanus Cobb, Jr., and Emerson Bennett, are permanently engaged on it, and will write for no other paper hereafter. Mrs. Sigourney, also, constantly writes for it; so do a host of other popular authors, including Mrs. Emma D. E. N. Southworth, Alice Cary, Mrs. Vaughn, Mary W. Stanley Gibson, Clara Sydney, &c. &c.. The LEDGER is beautifully illustrated every week.

The N. Y. LEDGER is printed on beautiful white paper, and is composed of eight pages, making the handsomest weekly paper in the country. It is published every Saturday and sold at all the news offices in every city and town throughout the country; and is mailed for subscribers at two dollars per annum; two copies are sent for three dollars. Any person obtaining eight subscribers at $1 50 each, which is our lowest club rates, and sending us $12 will be entitled to one copy free. Terms invariably in advance. Address all letters to ROBERT BONNER,
Publisher of NEW YORK LEDGER, 44 Ann Street, New York.

N. B.—Now is a good time to subscribe as EMMERSON BENNETT'S Great Original Novel of Frontier Life will be commenced in the LEDGER on the first of January.

Proclamation to the People of the State.

Know all the People that J. K. Wellman has largely bought of Mr. [illegible] his entire stock of Books, Stationery, Wall Paper, &c., and has added to the same, some $10,000 worth of new goods, and has now one of the largest and best selected stocks of Books, Stationery, Wall Paper, &c., to be found in the State, outside of the large Western cities. He has also purchased the Book, Stationery and Wall Paper stock of [illegible] Railroad. [illegible] other dealer can sell goods cheaper than he can. [illegible] School Books, Writing Books, Paper, and State Cap, and a full stock of School Books generally, at the lowest prices. Those dollars will buy more goods at Wellman's than at any other store in the State. Those dollars will buy more theological books. Those dollars will buy more miscellaneous books. Those dollars will buy more paper and envelopes of every style in the same proportion.

J. K. Wellman, whose rapid strides from his start on Main Street to his splendid mammoth Book Store in Lothrop's Block three doors west of the Post Office, has been unprecedented in the history of the Book business in our city. Mr. Wellman, who has had a good experience in the business, has now probably the best and largest assortment of Books in the State, and we think a glance at his stock will satisfy any one of the truth of this remark. His great facilities for purchasing, low rates, enable him to defy all competition, by selling at a very low figure. We congratulate the people of Southern Michigan upon the existence of this mammoth wholesale and retail Book Establishment, and the extensive part it is taking in furnishing books at low rates. We can assure our friends abroad, in this and other counties, that they can buy Books cheaper at Wellman's than at any other place in the west. Come and see.—Adrian Expositor.

WELLMAN'S LITERARY EMPORIUM.

Devoted to a Sound, High-toned and Healthy Literature, Religion, Freedom, Temperance, Education and all topics calculated to Expand and Elevate the Mind. J. K. Wellman, formerly of the Miscellany, Editor and Proprietor.

The Emporium is published Monthly, and will contain about 40 pages in each number, making 480 pages in a year. Its size [illegible] Single copy [illegible] per annum, $2 50; six copies, $10; thirteen copies, $20; twenty copies, $30 cents. Always may be sent by mail at the risk of the Publisher. Published by J. K. Wellman, Adrian, Michigan. Emporium Office, in Wellman's Book Store, near the Post Office. Postage six cents a year if paid in advance.

We design to make this periodical what its name imports, an Emporium of Literature. It will be independent of party or sect. Free thought, and free expression will be its standing motto. To the extent of our ability we shall advocate the cause of Christianity, Temperance, Freedom and other subjects which we think calculated to elevate mankind.

The Emporium will contain articles from men of various professions and opinions. We shall also present various styles; The bold, the original, the terse, the essayic, the sarcastic, the beautiful, sublime, the ideal, and the romantic shall mingle up its reprint. We expect original articles from the following writers: Rev. J. C. Gardner, T. M. Cooley, Esq., Rev. George C. Curtis, Andrew Howell Esq., Rev. Edward McClure, Lydia Jane Pierson, Rev. R. G. Green, M. N. Halsey, Esq. Sophia Smith, Delphine Taylor, Rev. O. H. White, Rev. E. H. Pilcher, Professors Churchill, Whipple and Hubbard, Rev's W. W. Crane, and Luther Lee, C. B. Stebbins, and President Tappan.

We want 100 Agents in every part of the west, to sell the Literary Emporium; to whom a liberal percentage will be given. J. K. WELLMAN,
Book Seller and Publisher, Adrian, Mich.

School Teachers who are about closing their winter schools, and will be looking for business, will do well to take an agency for this magazine.—With the Emporium, and a small stock of books, they can do a good business.

Wellman's Literary Emporium.

This new Magazine, [illegible] editor and proprietor, has made its [illegible] number, and from specimen pages [illegible] we judge it will become the first number of this new monthly. The Literary Emporium, a magazine of [illegible] pages of the choicest original and [illegible] matter. Mr Wellman informs us that he designs the Emporium for a family magazine, a fireside companion, and nothing except the most unexceptionable matter will find its way into its columns.

This is a new era in the existance of our young city, and we trust it will be successful, judging from Mr. W's former experience we doubt not it will be. It will do much towards giving our town a reputation abroad.—Adrian Watchtower

THE NEW SPECIAL
Topographical Map of
Lenawee county, Mich.,

From original surveys and actual measurment throughout the whole county, by Bechler and Wenig, Surveyors and Civil Engineers, Authors of Maps of Allegany, Schoharie, and Broome County, N. Y., and Washtenaw Co., Mich.

The subscribers, who have been engaged in compiling a map of Lenawee County since 14 months, are about to review the whole work in order to correct even the slightest error, if any should have occured. The same time they will obtain subscribers for the enterprise, "which is connected with immense labor and expense."

The Map is about 9×5 feet in size, and contains every public road with all its variations, the localities of Dwellings, places of Worship, Post Offices, and School Houses, Stores, Mills, Shops, &c.; also, section and farm lines with the owner's name engraved to it. Views of Public Buildings. Plans of every village in the County on the margin, forming not only a correct and complete, but also an ornamental Map, and will be handsomely colored, mounted and furnished to subscribers for $5 per copy.

BECHLER, WENIG & CO.,
Adrian & Philadelphia

The undersigned having examined Messrs. Bechler & Wenig's Surveys of Lenawee Co., take pleasure in recommending their Map to the citizens of this County, as being in our opinion, a very accurate, reliable and practical Map, and complete County Directory, and well worthy their liberal patronage.—Considering the expense attending its survey procuring so accurately all the names, localities, distances, town plats, farm lines, views, etc., and the limited sale it must necessarily meet with "on account of its being entirely a local work" we think they offer it very reasonable, and have subscribed for the Map

The Path of Duty.

When through duty's pathway shaded,
Conscience points the way—
Where when tints of hope have faded,
Thousands go astray;
Though a sacrificial altar
Seems it to our view,
Shall our courage weakly falter,
To the right untrue?

Shall we wait when God hath spoken
Till he speaks in wrath?
Can he give a clearer token
Than to us he hath?
Sinai's thunder not more plainly
Sounded forth his will,
Than the "still small voice" which vainly
Warns us, oft, of ill.

Hopeless, to all human vision,
May the work appear,
Which hath scorning and derision
For its wages here,
Shall we cease a weak endeavor
In the cause of right?
Nay: by arm of weakness, ever,
God hath shown his might.

Were no blessed pillar given
Our frail steps to guide,
And the thunder-clouds were riven,
Should we turn aside?
Never; till, above us, flowers
Bloom from parted clods,
Be the path of duty ours—
Consequences, God's.

BAULINA.

A Sad Scene.

We have already given some account of the disasters during the storm of Wednesday, in the Lake at Chicago. The wreck of the David Smart, within a short distance of the shore, and in full view of an immense crowd who were incapable of rendering any assistance, created a deep sensation. The Press describes the thrilling scene which took place when the boat went out to its relief, as follows:

"Capt. Crary, of the brig Republic, had crossed the river in his boat to join the crowd on the north pier, when the cry came spontaneously from the crowd for a boat to go to the relief of the shipwrecked crew. A party of six sailors sprang into the Republic's boat, a long, stout, but clumsy yawl, and with considerable water in her at that, and pulled bravely down the river, and out into the breakers toward the wreck.

It was a noble and daring act, but it was a rash one. When, however, does a tar weigh personal peril in the scale, if a suffering sailor claims his aid? The thousands of spectators watched the boat with much anxiety. The more experienced in such matters were aware she could not live in such a sea only by the most skillful management. The six stout rowers soon brought the boat where she breasted the waves, the steersman keeping her head to the northward. She was rapidly nearing the wreck, to the mast of which, however, clung but one man, the last survivor. A thousand hearts were beating almost audibly at her peril. Now she would be lost to view as a heavy roller swept by her, and when it seemed that she would never rise again, she would appear on the crest of a wave. She was now amid the floating wreck. A few lengths, and that moment of peril passed, she might bear to the shore recusers and rescued. It was not to be. A wave hid her from view, and an agonizing cry from the crowd announced her fate. She had capsized. A moment of more thrilling sensation we never saw. Strong men about us wept like children. Could nothing be done for the six noble fellows now seen at intervals clinging to the capsized boat,—no, nothing. See, there are two left, one at either end—they have climbed upon her and are holding fast to her keel;—they are gone,—and the black line slowly drifting southward appearing and disappearing, is the keel of the ill-fated boat,—her noble and self-sacrificing crew, where are they?

The Press speaks of all as lost, but the Tribune says that one of them reached the shore and was rescued

HIGH PRICE FOR SLAVES.—The Central Organ published in the parish of Aveyolics, La., says that thirteen field hands were recently sold in that place at prices ranging from $1,365 to $2,360.—The lowest sum was paid for a lad ten years of age; the highest was paid for a man thirty one years of age. Four of the negroes were women, and nine of them under twenty years of age. Their aggregate value was $24,290.

Valuable mines of lead, copper and silver have been discovered, and, to some extent developed, in the Cherokee county, in Georgia.

Confession of Return J. M. Ward.

Through the politeness of our worthy Sheriff, S. J. Springer, we last evening paid a visit to R. J. M. Ward who gave us the following confession in relation to the murder of his wife. Ward seemed to be deeply affected, frequently interrupting his disclosure by exclamations of deep sorrow and regret for the crime he had committed and giving us a full and complete disclosure of the same. After taking down his confession, we read the same to him, when he pronounced it correct, and we give it to our readers as we had it from his own lips, in the presence of the sheriff and others.

CONFESSION.

On Tuesday evening, February 3d, Mrs. Ward and myself had some words during which Mrs. Ward struck me on the head with a fluid lamp, also on the right side of the nose, causing the same to bleed freely. I begged her not to strike me, took the lamp away from her and went to bed. We rose between six and seven o'clock on Wednesday morning. I spoke to her about the blow she had given me, showing her where she had struck me on the evening previous, also the blood on the bolster and tick. She said she wished I had bled to death, and, picking up a stick of hickory wood, she attempted to strike me. I warded off the blow, which fell upon my right thumb, laming it severely. The stick fell from her hand, and, as she stooped to pick it up, I seized a flat iron, and in the heat of passion struck her with it on the right side of the head, upon and under the ear, driving the ear ring into the flesh. She fell to the floor, exclaiming, "Oh! Ward, you have killed me!" I dropped the flat iron and went to her, she was lying on her side; I turned her over on her back, and placed a petticoat under her head supposed she was only stunned. I used all means in my power to restore her, but in half an hour she died, having only spoken once, 'O, my Nellie,' meaning, as I suppose, her little girl.

After she was dead, I wrapped her head in a petticoat and drew the body under the bed, to conceal it in case any one should come in. About half past eight o'clock, Wm. H. Nathan, a mulatto boy came to the door with some milk, came into the shop, took the milk from him and he left. I then went to Liba Allen's grocery; bought a pound of sugar; told him I was going away. I then returned to the house, and after a short time, commenced to cut up the body. I tore the clothes open from the throat down. I then took a small pocket knife and opened the body, took out the bowels first, and then put them in the stove upon the wood; they being filled with air would make a noise in exploding; so I took my knife and pricked holes through them to prevent the noise; then took out the liver and heart, and put them in the stove, found it very difficult to burn them; had to take the poker and frequently stir them before they could be destroyed; found the lungs very much decayed. I then took out the blood remaining in the cavity of the body by placing a copper kettle close to the same and scooping it out with my hands. I then dipped portions of her clothing in the same, and burnt it together, fearing if I put the blood in the stove alone that it might be discovered. I then made an incision through the flesh along down each side, broke off the ribs and took out the breast bone, and throwing it into a large boiler, unjointed the arms at the shoulders, doubled them up and placed them in the boiler, then severed the remaining portions of the body, by placing a stick of wood under the back and breaking the back bone over the same, cutting away the flesh and ligament with a knife. Then tried to sever the head from the body; it proving ineffectual, and I put the whole upper portion of the body into the boiler. Then took a large carving knife and severed the lower portion of the body, unjointed the legs at the knees, and again at the hip joint, cut the thighs open and took out the bones and burnt them up; they burnt very rapidly. On Thursday night I commenced burning the body, by placing the upper and back portions of the same, together with the head in the stove. On Friday morning, finding it had been consumed, I built a large fire by placing wood around and under it, and in a short time it was wholly consumed, except some small portions of the larger bones and of the skull. The remaining portions of the body were kept in the boiler and in tubs, under the bed, covered up with a corded petticoat and were there at the time that the first search was made on Saturday by constable Curtis. Hearing on Saturday evening that the citizens were not satisfied with the search made by Curtis, I proceeded on Sunday morning to destroy the remainder of the body, by burning the same in the stove, cutting the fleshy parts of the thighs in small strips, the more readily to dispose of them. On Monday morning I took up the ashes in a small keg, sifting out the larger pieces of bone with my hands, placing the same in my over coat pockets, which I scattered in various places in the fields, at different times. Also took the major portion of the trunk nails, together with the hinges, and scattered them in different places. I then burnt her trunk and every vistage of her clothing, disposing of small portions at a time, to prevent their creating to much smoke.

Dyspepsia vs. Cooks.

We have a few more considerations to submit to the wives and mothers of our country with regard to the preparation of food; and, in the hope that the tempest which was excited by some former strictures on rural cookery, has by this time subsided into calm, we proceed to propound them. They relate more immediately to the influence of cookery upon health.

1. That dyspepsia, chronic indigestion, is exceedingly prevalent in this country, is undeniable. We believe there are ten cases of it in every thousand inhabitants to one among a like number in Europe. All must realize that this disparity has a cause or causes; and few will deny that this cause or causes must be sought, at least in part, to our dietetic customs and habits. We appeal to our seniors in support of our assertion that the prevalence of dyspepsia among us is a modern phenomenon. Our revolutionary ancestors scarcely knew this disease even by name; and it was quite rare among our people in modern circumstances even forty years ago.—Need we say more on this head.

2. If we were required to indicate the causes of dyspepsia and other disorders of the organs of digestion, we should say they are—saleratus, saltpeter, and other alkaline preparations; hot food, especially hot bread, alcoholic liquors, late suppers, pork eternally, meat fried to chips, and bad cookery in general. We beg no one who is not hit by this enumeration, to insist on taking it to herself. We mean it only for those who naturally come in the way of it.

We cannot help reiterating that too many of our young women are deplorably miseducated. It is well to have accomplishments, but not at the cost of neglecting solid and necessary acquirements. The young lady who can play the piano fairly, yet cannot cook a good wholesome family dinner without assistance, has begun her education at the wrong end. The family, whose grown up daughters sit in the parlor and leave the cooking to the tender mercies of a green emigrant, may not realize that those daughters are missing opportunities which they will one day wish they had improved; but we dare whisper it loudly in their ears, at whatever risk to our own.—We are all getting a little above our business, and it is time we admonished each other to come down. Those who resent the admonition only demonstrate thereby their urgent need of it. [N. Y. Tribune.

CHURCH ANNALS.

MEMORIALS OF THE M. E. CHURCH.

To those whose affections enter in God and whose lives have been devoted to his service, there is a vast amount of pleasure derived from reflecting upon the past.—Whether they have been connected with the church as ministers of laics, their labors and their influences have not been without beneficial results; for, whilst they have often experienced, in answer to their fervent importunities, the grace of God moving upon their hearts and inspiring them with the full assurance of hope they have also been witness to the reformation and sanctification of more or less of those among whom they have labored, or with whom they have dwelt. Their reflections are identified with the rise, progress and termination of seasons of refreshing from the presence of the Lord, the prevalence of which was the subject of their most earnest desires, and elicited their most ardent prayers.

It is with much pleasure we sit down to sketch the memorials of the church as they can be gathered in the vicinity where we are now called to labor; and though we have not been personally identified with the events we are led to narrate, we can, nevertheless, image them in our mind and rejoice in what has been accomplished by others.

Owing to the length of time that has intervened since the publication of our first article, and of which this is the continuation, it will be necessary for us to state that in that communication we referred to the organizing of the first Methodist society in this delightful portion of Michigan. This was as far back as the year 1823. That society, we said, consisted of only six persons. The year after, this small band was strengthened by the addition, among others, of the Rev. Abel Warren and Calvin Davis. We alluded to these brethern as being valuable accessions to the church.

The brethren, conscious that they had a great work to perform in order to give, as instruments in the hand of God, a proper moral and intellectual impress to the rising community, bestirred themselves, in concert with the traveling preachers, with vigor, to meet the responsibilities under which they were placed. The heart of Bro Warren was fully stirred within him, and he went forth on the Sabbaths from one settlement to another preaching the unsearchable riches of Christ. His labors were not in vain. They seemed to be crowned with complete success. Very soon the indications of revival were both striking and abundant. The first work of this character occurred at what was then known as Indian Village, now the beautiful and thriving town of Romeo.—At that period there were probably a dozen families in that vicinity—not more than this number. The members of one of these families were connected with the M. E. Church.

Those who may read this communication, and who are acquainted with the history, the period and the place we have here mentioned, will readily remember to whom we allude in this one family. They cannot fail calling to mind the deeply bereaved and heart-broken Albert Finch and wife. Robbed by the Indians, of their child—a fond and intelligent boy—the calamity was greater than they could endure. The dejected and agonized looks of those fond parents will be called again to remembrance; and the mournful, and truly touching exclamation, then so often uttered by the father will again be heard for, until the hand of death sealed his lips, he was accustomed to say, "I should be relieved and comforted if I could only find the bones of my child in the woods, for then I should know he was dead."—It will readily be supposed that, as was the case, soon the bowed heads and crushed hearts of these parents obtained the quiet of the grave. The revival at Indian Village resulted in the conversion of nearly all the impenitent persons connected with that community.

GLASSES.—Sir David Brewster, in the North British Review, says that no opinion is more common, and certainly none is more incorrect, than that it is prudent to avoid the use of artificial helps to the eyes so long as they are absolutely indispensable. The human eye is too delicate a structure to bear continued strain without injury; and the true rule is to commence the use of glasses as soon as we can see better with them than without them, and always to employ such as will render vision most comfortable and pleasant.

The spectacles habitually used for ordinary purposes may not be adequate to certain occasional demands, such as reading very fine print, examining maps, &c. To meet these cases, a hand-reading glass two and a half inches in diameter, to be used in conjunction with the spectacles, and never without them, are strongly recommended. A similar use of the reading glass is also recommended to short sighted persons in conjunction with the concave spectacles, when examining minute objects.

How Watches are Made in Switzerland.

First, the rough part of the movement called blons, is made by water power, which costs little or nothing. A number of young people, of all ages, have a part assigned to each; others put the plates and wheels together, and when a great number are ready the master fills a couple of bags, and loads the back of a mule.—If he has not enough to counterbalance the weight, he puts on a large cheese, and so he goes to market in the village or small town and offers his goods to the master watch-makers, called escapement makers and finishers, who complete the movement.

Now these cottagers are almost all freeholders, and posses small plots of land attached to their houses, which they cultivate in the summer season, and in the winter they shut themselves up with their families, and work during the inclement season, with snow on the ground many feet deep, which lasts three or four month and when fine weather again appears the travelers go and buy the movements and case them in silver or gold.

A family of six children will keep themselves respectable at the same expense as a single workman in London. Not only the children work, nay, the dog turns a wheel, and puts in motion a lathe or a pair of bellows. For instance, at Geneva where everything is dearer than in the mountains, the labor is twenty-five per cent higher. Consequently in England, with heavy rent and taxes, and the dearness of the common necessaries, it is impossible to compete with the Swiss manufacturers.

Teaching the Eye.

Mankind do not, and cannot see one fraction of what they might see. None are so blind as those that will not see, is as true of physical as moral vision. By neglect and carelessness we have made ourselves unable to see hundreds of things which are before us to be seen.—Thomas Carlyle has summed this up in one pregnant sentence:—"The eye sees what it brings the power to see." How true is this! The sailor on the look-out can see a ship where the landsman sees nothing; the esquimaux can distinguish a white fox amidst the white snow; the American back-woodsman will fire a rifle ball so as to strike a nut out of the mouth of a squirrel without hurting it; the Indian boys hold their hands up as marks to each other, certain that the unerring arrow will be shot between the spread out fingers; the astronomer can see a star in the sky, when to others the blue expanse is unbroken; the shepherd can distinguish the face of every sheep in his flock; the mosaic worker can detect distinctions of colors where others see none; and multitudes of additional examples might be given of what education does for the eye.

IRISH POTATO PEELINGS.—Some time in March last, a negro boy of ours was sent from the kitchen to the pig-pen, to throw in some of the raw peelings of the Irish potato. The boy picked out these peelings containing the eyes, and planted them in a fence corner. When the frost cut ours down the little nigger chuckled at his tater patch—frost never touched him. A short time ago, we saw the little fellow staggering under a load of something in a large basket on his head. He approached, showing a set of ivory, and a knowing look, said: "Jist look here, massa Charles, see what I'se made from dem tater skins! beat your big taters all to smash." We looked in the basket, and to our astonishment saw near a bushel of as fine Irish potatoes as were ever raised in any country; they were of uncommon size and as mealy as a boiled chestnut.—"Massa?" says little wooly, "ain't you gwine to put in de noosepaper, how little nigger make big taters from peeling in de fence corner, and beat he old massa wid all his gwanner and gypsum?" We promised to put it in the "noosepaper," and here it is.—"White folks" may take a lesson from the little negro's economy. There is many a fence corner that might produce a good crop of Irish potatoes.—[Soil of the South.

Lines to E——

Not when all is gay around thee,
Not when mirth is smiling bright,
Not when pleasure's spell hath bound thee,
Nor on folly's festal night,
Not when hope is fresh as ever,
Not when thou art glad and free,
Not in such an hour—oh, never
Be this token traced by thee!

But if thou art sad and lonely
When the hour of mirth is past,
Or thy dreams of pleasure only
Wake to sink in gloom at last,
In an hour when none are round thee,
Should thy dark eye chance to stray,
Oh, when such an hour hath found thee,
Think of one that's far away!

The Confession of Ward

RETURN J. M. WARD, who has been convicted of Murdering his wife at Sylvania, seems to have copied the example of Webster, in the murder of Parkman, not only in his method of disposing of the body, but also in his mode of confession Webster, it will be remembered, set forth in his first confession, that he got into a quarrel with Parkman and killed him in the heat of a scuffle, in self defence. He afterwards, when all hope was extinguished, gave a very different version of the murder. The confession of Ward is made under circumstances equally interested and still more [illegible] According to the statement which we publish, the quarrel between Ward and his wife commenced on Tuesday evening, when he was struck by her with a fluid lamp on the head and on the nose; but Ward with a Christian meekness, contrasting strangely enough with the gross brutality which, according to his confession, afterwards marked his conduct, gently remonstrated with her, took the lamp from her hand and retired with her to the same bed, where they slept gently and quietly till morning. When they arose, Ward still in the possessions of his mark spirit, showed her his wounds, and remonstrated against her conduct. But she, instead of manifesting any sympathy for her wounded and saint-like husband, harshly intimated a wish that he had bled to death and renewed the assault upon him with a "stick of hickory wood." It is curious That Ward's meekness and forbearance, which were so marked the night before and which began so suspiciously on this eventful morning; should have so suddenly deserted him now. He tells us that he warded off the blow and then the stick fell, and she stooped down to pick it up, when he seized a flat iron, and, in the heat of passion struck her with it on the right side of the head." This, according to the statement, was the only blow. A death so extraordinary, we venture to say, can hardly be found in the annals of crime. People will, of course, do just as they please about believing this part of his story. Of the rest the probability is greater. The confession was made, we suppose, to modify the action of the court, by creating the impression that the jury had done injustice to the prisoner in their verdict of murder, when the fatal blow was given in the heat of passion, and the crime was therefore, only manslaughter. It will be seen that the court did not modify its sentence on account of this confession but sentenced him to be hung in June next.—Toledo Blade

A Washington correspondent of the Charleston (S. C.) News, writes as follows:

"A project is now on foot to start a Southern State Rights Pro slavery Journal in London. Mr. Slocum, of Mississippi, has initiated this singular enterprise The editor to be is Professor Alexander Dimitry, at present the translator in the State department, a native of Louisiana a man of rare accomplishments, and an unsurpassed linguist. The friends of the movement are sanguine of its success, and allege that it has already received sufficient encouragement, to justify its commencement. They propose that it shall be a true representative of Southern sentiment at the English metropolis, and a defender of Southern rights, devoted to the idea of direct trade with the South, and appreciative of the cotton interest generally."

Public Spirit

There are two views of the matter of public spirit very frequently indulged in by those immediately connected, with or affected by it. The one is that whatever is contributed to any other than individual interests and gains is for the most part, so much lost, or thrown away. The persons indulging in, and, acting upon, this view of the case, are as ready as any one to recognize the importance of various public improvements, and really wonder why they are not made, and very much hope that somebody will conclude to make them, but as for themselves, they have nothing to spend in that way. The fact is they would like to have the advantages of them at somebody else's expense, although, of course, they are ashamed to say it in just so many words.

The other view is the more enlarged and liberal one, which concedes that whatever is for the manifest interest of the community at large, is equally for the interest of every individual composing that community, and further, that towards the necessary expense of a common benefit, it is the honorable and bounden duty of every individual sharing that common benefit to contribute individually, in proportion to his enjoyment of that benefit.

Now the first view of the case is found ed upon a mistaken idea of real self-interest, for whatever is shown to be for the manifest interest of a community in the aggregate, is for the same reasons equally so to them individually; and if the entire could not deprive themselves of the proposed improvement without manifest loss, so neither can the individuals composing that community be deprived of it without a corresponding individual loss. A good illustration of this is the building of our new Union School Building in this village which has just been completed, or nearly so By our citizens at an expense of about $15,000. To do this has been a pretty severe pecuniary tax upon all the property holders in the village, and yet now that it is completed, there is not probably one among them all who is not gratified that it has been done. And more than this it is easily susceptible of proof that there is not one, now holding property here, who is not, in the value and availability of that property, pecuniarily benefited, to many times the amount contributed by him for the erection and furnishing of that edifice, by its influence in adding to the attractiveness and desirableness of our village as a place of residence, inviting the emigration of families here desiring educational advantages &c., and thus increasing facilities for sale of real estate, and at better prices. So also of Rail Roads, Plank Roads, a Printing Press, Hotels, Plank Walks, Shade Trees, and all these public improvements, which if attended to give an air of enterprise and thrift to a place and if neglected, an air of thriftlessness and decay. No place can cherish and practice an expanded and intelligent public spirit, without finding in the event a large pecuniary remuneration in it, and yet it is very difficult to sustain this any where, unless there is something like a common consent to share fairly and equally the obligations and responsibilities which it imposes. Anything like a general disposition to hold back and let others bear the expense, while we sit down and enjoy the benefit, will soon drive every liberal minded man from any place so cursed with a self-sacrificing selfishness, and leave it to dilapidation and contempt.

TREASON IN UTAH.—A correspondent of the San Francisco Herald, writing from Salt Lake City of the 7th of January, fully confirms the statement recently published respecting outrages committed by the Mormons, and the total destruction of the papers of the Supreme Court at the instance of Brigham Young, who is sole dictator in Utah. The reason given by the Mormons for the latter act was that Congress would not admit them as a State, and that they would not allow the Federal officers to remain in the Territory. Brigham says that what officers are now in the Territory must leave as soon as grass grows, or he will "send them to hell across lots."

☞ THE Indians of Kansas will soon be the richest community in the world.—The Delawares, numbering some 900 have received $470,000 from the government for the recent sales of their reserved lands and their Western reservation, near Lawrence, it is supposed, will yield them enough to make up a million dollars.—Their home reservation, 40 miles by 10, would now bring three millions, and will be constantly increasing in value. Thus their total wealth would now divide about $4,500 to each man, woman and child in the tribe. The Shawnees and other small tribes will be equally well off upon the sale of their lands.

☞ Holloway's Ointment and Pills.—External injuries, as well as external diseases, may be truly said to have lost half their terrors since the introduction of Holloway's Ointment. The first dressing subdues inflamation and relieves pain, and, these symptoms removed, the process of restoration is rapid almost beyond credibility. Eruptions of all kinds, asthma, mumphs, croup, and sores and ulcers of every kind, may be promptly relieved by the application of this unequalled remedy. The Pills are the standard specific for diseases of the stomach, liver, and bowels, throughout Europe and America.

Attempted Murder—Suicide of the Assailant.

The Auburn Daily American, of Thursday, has the following:

Near the inlet of Lake Owasco, in the town of Moravia, and some fourteen miles from this city, resides a farmer named William Clark. In his family has lived, for months past, a young man named Albert Wood, and a young woman named Shaw. They were employed as servants, in the house and farm. They have been very intimate with each other for some time past.

On Tuesday night last, Mr. Wood and Miss Shaw were in conversation with each other in Clark's house, as late as 11 o'clock, and parted with apparent good feeling. Yesterday morning they were again in company with each other, as late as 10 o'clock, and there was no manifestation made of ill feeling or misunderstanding. At this hour Wood entered the room where Mrs Clark and Miss Shaw were sitting. He had a pistol in his hand and commenced loading it. He tried a ball and found it too small; Miss Shaw volunteered to find a patch for it. She did so. The patch was not large enough, and she procured another, and then the pistol was loaded.

Wood then said, 'what shall I shoot?' Some one said 'shoot into the wood box;' he replied, 'I won't do that.' Mrs Clark exclaimed, 'don't fire in the house—if you are going to shoot, go out of doors and do it.' At this moment Mrs Shaw cried out, 'if you want to shoot me, and shoot me so that I won't kick more than once!'

He turned towards her deliberately, and placed the muzzle of the pistol against her breast, and fired! The ball entered her body just below the heart, and she fell to the floor with a shriek!

Mrs. Clark exclaimed in horror, 'you have shot that girl—go and call the neighbors!'

Wood then took two letters from his pocket, and throwing them upon the floor, directed Mrs. Clark to show them to the Coroner. He said nothing more, and paid no attention to his victim, who was lying upon the floor in an apparently dying state.

He then commenced re-loading his pistol, and Mrs. Clark rushed from the house to alarm the neighbors. After she had proceeded a few rods from the house, she heard another pistol shot, but ran on.—The neighbors turned out, and on reaching the house found Wood dead, he having shot himself directly through the heart. Miss Shaw had recovered sufficiently to converse. She said she heard Wood breathe several times after he shot himself. She produced one of the letters that Wood threw upon the floor, and directed that it should be read if she died—if she did not, that it should be burned.

A physician from Moravia probed the the wound, and extracted from it the ball and a hook and eye, that had entered it from the stays. The ball evidently glanced off, from contact with some resisting substance. Otherwise instant death must have been the result. Coroner Lombard left this city last evening, to hold an inquest and obtain all the facts in the case. At daylight this morning Miss Shaw was still alive, but it was not deemed possible for her to recover. She refused to converse in regard to the matter, or give any information relative to its cause. The incidents connected with this dreadful affair, would seem to indicate very clearly that it was the result of mutual determination on the part of both the actors in it. We learn that circumstances of a domestic nature, at present kept private, will, when promulgated, confirm this hypothesis.

NEW YORK TRIBUNE.—The circulation of the N. Y. WALKER.—It turns out that the 1,100 Costa Ricans mowed down by Walker were fancy men, and that the news was sent on to keep his cause afloat in the States. His army is pushed to the wall, and his men are deserting as fast as they can get away.

☞ The trials of Mrs. Cunningham and Eckel, have now been definitely fixed to take place in the Court of Oyer and Terminer on the third Monday in April.

☞ Two men have just been sentenced to be hung at Chicago; Wm Jackson, for killing Roman Morris, and Samuel Gilmore, for killing an illegitimate infant, of which he was the father.

New York, April 6th.

Private letters received here from Wilmington, N. C., mention disastrous fires in the woods in that neighborhood, and it is feared all the turpentine trees will be destroyed. One producer alone has lost 20,000 trees.

The Tribune publishes a statement, furnished by a passenger that arrived by the Texas, a native of Nicaragua, and formerly an adherant to Walker. He asserts that the report of Walker's victory on the 16th is entirely unfounded.—He was at the camp of General Canas just previous to the 18th, at which time Walker's whereabouts was unknown, having a few days previous abandoned the camp at Rivas with the intention of reaching the sea coast.

The Tribune's informant further states that the correspondence between Canas and Walker, which has been tortured into foundation for the statement that Canas was ready to join the filibusters, was in reality with reference to the surrender of the latter.

Walker having proposed to submit provided he and his men were permitted to leave the country.

Canas replied, offering passports for the whole force, excepting Walker, whom he expressed the determination of delivering up to the Costa Ricans.

The result of the correspondence was the refusal of the terms on the part of Walker's adherants and their subsequent flight to the sea coast.

The American naval officers at San Juan, appealed to Canas in behalf of Walker and his troops.

Canas replied that he would pay the expenses of the whole force to the United States, except Walker, who must be delivered up.

The Herald publishes the letters from Gen. Henningsen referred to yesterday.—They purport to give an account of Gen. Walker's recent victories, and dated March 14th, the day the steamer Texas left San Juan and professes to have been sent by express to the steamer.

The letters give but few details, but refer to letters previously written, which letters it is pretended by Walker's partizans, were purloined on the road.

There are no signatures to the documents and they are all addressed to Mr. Blank. They all contain unmistakable marks of fabrication.

At the Thames Police Court, London on the 10th ult., Alexander Harnett Clark an American and photographic artist, lately carrying on his profession in Langly place, commercial road east, was brought before Mr. Yardley for final examination charged with manslaughter in causing the death of Eliza Bann, a married woman aged 26 years, by fracturing her skull with a hammer.

The prisoner is a remarkable looking man, a cripple, and wears an enormous beard and moustach.

Police sergeant Ball, said a coroner's jury presided over by Mr Baker, had returned a verdict of manslaughter against the prisoner.

The prisoner, after receiving the usual caut on said he would reserve his defence.

Mr. Yardley said it was his duty to commit the prisoner for manslaughter but he would take bail for his appearance at the sessions, himself in £80 and two sureties at £40 each.

The prisoner could not obtain the required surities, and was sent away in the prison van.

There are occasions when even the healthiest people need medicines, the changes of diet, of the weather, and hundreds of other causes, produce a laxity in the system that needs correcting, or in other words, the liver becomes slightly deranged, and needs a stimulator. Half who find themselves in this situation will try Dr. Sanford's Invigorator, they may be sure of relief, as we can testify to its efficacy in curing headache, indigestion sour stomach, and other ills so common in a family. It acts, as a medicine, easier and better than any dose of pills we ever swallowed, and it is so mild that the smallest infant can take it.

We learn that the house of a gentleman residing at Stapleton, Staten Island, was entered by thieves while the family were at church last night, and robbed of $400 worth of silver plate. While search was being made for the thieves, the house was discovered on fire.

In a few moments another house was discovered in the same condition, and these dwellings with a large amount of other property, including a yard of lumber were destroyed. Another house caught fire, apparently from the same cause, at New Brighton, and was consumed. The loss at Stapleton is said to be over $20,000.

FRANCIS B. SNELL,
Dep'y Town. Clerk.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss. At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office in the city of Adrian, on Monday the 30th day of March, in the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty seven.

Present, Fernando C. Beaman, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of C W Miller, deceased. On reading and filing the petition duly verified, of Sarah J. Miller, widow of deceased, praying for the appointment of Flavius J. Hough, as administrator on the estate of said deceased, [illegible] therein set forth.

Thereupon it is ordered, That Monday, the 27th day of April next, at one o'clock in the afternoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs at law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court, there to be holden at the Probate Office in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Tecumseh Herald, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing. FERNANDO C. BEAMAN,

[A True Copy.] 333-3 Judge of Probate.

No Family

Can afford to be without Mustang Liniment in their house. The many accidents we are liable to, may render it necessary any moment, and nothing is capable of performing such a certain cure. (Extract) "In lifting the kettle from the fire it caught and scalded my hands and person severely—one hand almost too crisp. The torture was unbearable. It was an awful scald." The Mustang Liniment appeared to extract the pain almost immediately. It healed rapidly and left no scar of account. Chas Foster, 420 Broad street, Philadelphia." It is truly a wonderful article. It will cure any case of swelling, burns, stiff joints, Eruptions, or rheumatism. For Horses it should never be dispensed with. One Dollar's worth of Mustang has frequently saved a valuable horse. It cures galls, sprains, Ringbone, spavin and founders. Beware of imitations. Sold in all parts of the habitable globe.

A MEDICAL REVOLUTION.
THE WORLD UNANIMOUS.

Holloway's Ointment.

AND

THE GREAT COUNTER IRRITANT.

The cause of disease often make its way to the internal organs through the pores of the skin. This penetrating Ointment, melting under the heat as it is rubbed in, is absorbed through the fine capillaries, and, reaching the seat of all mutation promptly and invariably subdues it, whether located in the kidneys, the liver, the lungs, or any other important organ. If penetrates the surface of the interior, through the numerous tubes that communicate with the skin as summer rain passes into the fevered earth, diffusing its cool and regenerating influence.

Skin Diseases and Glandular Swellings.

Every species of exterior irritation is quickly relieved by the anti-inflammatory action of this Ointment. Angry eruptions, such as Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Fetter, Ringworm, Scald-head, Nettle Rash, Scabies (or Itch), &c., the out, to return no more, under its application. Hospital experience in all parts of the world proves its infallibility in diseases of the skin, the muscles, the joints and the glands.

ULCERS, SORES & TUMORS.

The effect of this unrivaled external remedy upon scrofula, and other virulent ulcers and sores, is almost miraculous. It first discharges the poison which produces the putrid and vitiated flesh, and then the cleansed wound heals up, regenerating the diseased parts with sound flesh. In cases of white swelling it is equally successful.

Wounds, Bruises, Burns and Scalds

In cases of the reduction of the bones, injuries caused by steam explosions, bruises, burns, scalds, rheumatism, stiffness of the joints, and contraction of the sinews, it is employed and warmly recommended by the faculty. This marvellous remedy has been introduced by its inventor to person into all the leading hospitals of Europe, and no private household should be without it.

UNDENIABLE TESTIMONY.

The medical staff of the French and English Armies in the Crimea, have officially signed their approval of Holloway's Ointment, as the most reliable dressing for sabre cuts, stabs, and gun-shot wounds. It is also used by the surgeons of the Allied Navies.

Both the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following cases.

Bunions	Lumbago	Sore Legs	Swelled Glands
Burns	Mercurial	Sore Breasts	Stiff Joints
Chapped	Fruptions	Sore Heads	Ulcers
Hands	Piles	Sore Throats	Venereal Sores
Chilblains	Rheumatism	Sore Eyes	Wounds of all
Chiltons	Salt Rheum	kinds
Corns	Skin Diseases	Sprains	Scalds

☞ Sold at the Manufactories of Professor Holloway, 80 Maiden Lane, New York, and 244 Strand, London, and by all respectable Druggists and Dealers of Medicines through out the United States, and the civilized world in Pots, at 25 cents, 62 1-2 cents, and $1 each.

DR. Everson's Great American Remedy for Ague, or Chills and Fever, is the most popular and certain remedy now known. The people and the press speak of it in the highest terms of commendation. It is pleasant to take, does not purge, vomit or sweat, but invigorates the system. It contains no Arsenic, Strichnine, Quinine, or any other poisonous or injurious drug, but it is an originally discovered Antidote to Malaria and as an Ague Killer it has no equal. Call and get a circular containing certificates from Professors, Physician, Clergymen and the press.

THE PEOPLE DEMAND IT AND WILL HAVE IT,

Unmistakable Evidence of its Work and Worth.

Messrs. W. W Roberts & Co., Druggists, of Indianapolis, sold over $10,000 worth during the great Ague season of 1855. CERTIFICATES

Almost without number, might here be adduced, from Physicians, Clergymen, officers of State, and private individuals; but the following will suffice:

From our intimate knowledge of Dr. Everson, and the extraordinary virtues of his Ague remedy—being apprized of its constituents, and knowing, as we do, that it contains neither Arsenic, Quininine, Strichnine, Mercury or any poisonous or injurious drugs, we heartily commend it, and also his Family Phisic, or Cathartic Pills, as medicines deserving the approbation of an intelligent public.

John T Walsh, M D, Prof. of Anatomy and Physiology, Richmond, Va.
Harvey R Benham, A. M. M. D., West Chester, O. Huntington, In., June 4, 1856.

GENTS:—Having last season, during the scarcity of Quinine, in this region, used in my practice some of your medicine in the treatment of Ague and Intermittents, and being pleased with their prompt operation in the cases in which they were tried I have concluded to use them in my practice. A. M. LEWIS, M. D.

Price 75 cents per Box.

DR. EVERSON'S HEALTH RESTORATIVE PILLS,

Is the Cheapest and Best Family Physic

Or Anti-Dyspeptic & Anti-Billious Medicine Now Known.

They combine power with mildness of action;
They do not gripe or debilitate the Patient;
They excite the stomach, liver and bowels to a healthy action;
They strengthen the digestive organs, and improve the appetite;
They remove obstructions from the liver, and thus cleans and purify the blood; remove Liver Complaints, Dyspepsia, Billious Disorders, Costiveness, Piles, Headache, Dizziness, Sour and Stomach Weariness, Sallow Complexion and Colic.

Their gentleness of action admits of their being used while traveling or attending to business. Females instead of getting Bled should use these Pills. They will give you the relief you desire, immediately and pleasantly. They are safe in all cases. They will remove those PAINS in the SIDE and BACK, and other difficulties and weaknesses—Cold Feet and hands, Palpitation of the Heart, Enlarged Veins and Swellings. No Lady will ever be Without them after a single trial.

They do not force, but assist, nature. Very eminent physicians use them, and testify that they give more satisfaction to them and their patients, than any physic they ever knew. They are, truly, a "FAMILY MEDICINE."

Highly esteemed for their rare virtues. They contain no Mercury,—are entirely Vegetable and are scientifically compounded from the best articles in the Materia Medica.

Only 25 cents per Box, or 5 Boxes for $1.00. For sale by Druggists and dealers generally. PROPRIETORS, EVERSON & CO., No. 7 South 6th st., Philadelphia.

AYER'S

CHERRY PECTORAL,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Colds, Coughs, and Hoarseness.

BRIDGETON, Mass., 20th Dec. 1854.

DR. J. C. AYER: I find it gives me pleasure to say the best remedy I have ever found for Coughs, Hoarseness, Influenza, and the concomitant symptoms of a Cold, is your CHERRY PECTORAL. It is constant use in my practice and my family for the last ten years has shown it to possess superior virtues for the treatment of those complaints. ERUS KNIGHT, M. D.

J. B. MORTLEY, Esq., of Utica, N. Y., writes: "I have used your PECTORAL myself and to my family ever since you invented it, and believe it the best medicine for the purpose ever put out. With a last gold I should sooner pay twenty-five dollars for a bottle than do without it, or take any other remedy."

Croup, Whooping Cough, Influenza.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Feb. 7, 1856.

HONORED AYER: I will cheerfully certify your PECTORAL is the best remedy we possess for the cure of Whooping Cough, Croup, and the chest diseases of children. We ask your fraternity in the South appreciate your skill, and commend your medicine to our people.

HIRAM CONKLIN, M. D.

AMOS LEE, Esq., MONTEREY, IA., writes, 24 Jan., 1856: "I had a tedious Influenza, which confined me in doors six weeks; took many medicines without relief; finally tried your PECTORAL by the advice of our clergyman. The first dose relieved the soreness in my throat and lungs; less than one half the bottle made me completely well. Your medicines are the cheapest as well as the best we can buy, and we esteem you, Doctor, and your remedies, as the poor man's friend."

Asthma or Phthisic, and Bronchitis.

WEST MANCHESTER, PA., Feb. 4, 1856.

SIR: Your CHERRY PECTORAL is performing marvelous cures in this section. It has relieved several from alarming symptoms of consumption, and is now curing a man who has labored under an affection of the lungs for the last forty years. HENRY L. PARKS, Merchant.

A. A. RAMSEY, M. D., ATHOL, MONROE CO., IOWA, writes, Sept. 6, 1855: "During my practice of many years I have found nothing equal to your CHERRY PECTORAL for giving ease and relief to consumptive patients, or curing such as are curable."

We might add volumes of evidence, but the most convincing proof of the virtues of this remedy is found in its effects upon trial.

Consumption.

Probably no one remedy has ever been known which cured so many and such dangerous cases as this. Some no human aid can reach; but even to those the CHERRY PECTORAL affords relief and comfort.

ASTOR HOUSE, NEW YORK CITY, March 5, 1856

DOCTOR AYER, LOWELL: I feel it a duty and a pleasure to inform you what your CHERRY PECTORAL has done for my wife. She had a fit of coughing for months laboring under the dangerous symptoms of Consumption, from which no aid we could procure gave her much relief. She was steadily failing, until Dr. STRONG of this city, where they have come for advice, recommended a trial of your medicine. We bless his kindness, as we do your skill, for she has recovered from that day. She is not yet so strong as she used to be, but is free from her cough, and calls herself well.

Yours with gratitude and regard,

ORLANDO SHELBY, of SHELBYVILLE.

Consumptives, do not despair till you have tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It is made by one of the best medical chemists in the world, and its cures all around us bespeak the high merits of its virtues.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills.

THE sciences of Chemistry and Medicine have been taxed their utmost to produce this best, most perfect purgative which is known to man. Innumerable proofs are shown that these Pills have virtues which surpass in excellence the ordinary medicines, and that they win an unprecedentedly open the esteem of all men. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. Their penetrating properties stimulate the vital activities of the body, remove the obstructions of its organs, purify the blood, and expel disease. They purge out the foul humors which breed and grow distempers; stimulate sluggish or disordered organs into healthful action, and impart healthy tone with strength to the whole system. Not only do they cure the every-day complaints of every body, but also formidable and dangerous diseases that have baffled the best of human skill. While they produce powerful effects, they are at the same time so diminished dose, the safest and best physic that can be employed for children. Being sugar-coated, they are pleasant to take; and being purely vegetable, are free from any risk of harm. Cures have been made which surpass belief were they not substantiated by men of such exalted position and character as to forbid the suspicion of untruth. Many eminent clergymen and physicians have lent their names to recommend to the public the reliability of my remedies, while others have sent me the assurance of their conviction that the Preparations contribute immensely to the relief of my afflicted, suffering fellow-men.

The Agent below named is pleased to furnish gratis my American Almanac, containing directions for their use and certificates of their cures, of the following complaints:—Costiveness, Bilious Complaints, Rheumatism, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Headache arising from a foul Stomach, Nausea, Indigestion, Mental inaction of the Mind and Pusillanimity, Languor, Lassitude, Loss of Appetite, all Ulcerous and Cutaneous Diseases which require an assistant to Sarsaparilla, Erysipelas, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter, Medicine, Scrofula or King's Evil. They do not prostrate the system, but stimulate it, and thus cure many complaints which it would not be suspected they could reach, such as Deafness, Partial Blindness, Neuralgia and Nervous Irritability, Derangements of the Liver and Kidneys, Gout, and other kindred complaints arising from a low state of the body or obstruction of its functions.

Do not be put off by unprincipled dealers with some other pill they make more profit on. Ask for AYER'S PILLS, and take nothing else. No other they can give you compares with this in its intrinsic value or curative powers. The sick want the best and there is for them and they should have it.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER,

Practical and Analytical Chemist, Lowell, Mass.

The Great Family Weekly Paper

THE NEW YORK LEDGER has now attained the extraordinary circulation of One Hundred and Ninety Thousand copies. The LEDGER is devoted to POLITE LITERATURE, ORIGINAL TALES, SKETCHES, POETRY, ESSAYS, GOSSIP, CURRENT NEWS and maintains a high moral tone. It is every where acknowledged to be the best family paper in the world! Hence its extraordinary and unheard of popularity. Mr. BONNER, the Proprietor of the LEDGER, employs the best talent in the country, and by so doing makes the best paper. Such writers as Fanny Fern, Sylvanus Cobb, Jr., and Emerson Bennett, are permanently engaged on it, and will write for no other paper hereafter. Mrs. Sigourney, also, constantly writes for it; so do a host of other popular authors, including Mrs. Emma D. E. N. Southworth, Alice Cary, Mrs. Vaughn, Mary W. Stanley Gibson, Clara Sydney, &c., &c., &c. The LEDGER is beautifully illustrated every week

The N. Y. LEDGER is printed on beautiful white paper, and is composed of eight pages, making the handsomest weekly paper in the country. It is published every Saturday and sold at all the news offices in every city and town throughout the country; and is mailed for subscribers at two dollars per annum; two copies are sent for three dollars. Any person obtaining eight subscribers at $1 50 each (which is our lowest club rates.) and sending us $12 will be entitled to one copy free. Terms invariably in advance. Address all letters to ROBERT BONNER,

Publisher of NEW YORK LEDGER, 44 Ann Street, New York

Proclamation to the People of the Realm

Know all the People that I J. K. Wellman have lately bought of Mr. T. Taylor his book establishment, which I have consolidated with my present Book Store near the Post Office. Know also that I have some $15,000 worth of stock. My establishment is much the largest of any Book Store between Cleveland and Chicago. Know also that I am doing a large Wholesale as well as Retail trade, and I can furnish individuals, Town Libraries, Books for Schools and Colleges on as favorable terms as any other dealer on the line of the Michigan Southern Railroad. I am devoting much attention to this Side of Book Trade and have on hand and can furnish every variety of books used in our Common and High Schools. I have on hand a variety of Writing Books, Pens, Pens Holders, Inks, &c. My stock of Wall Paper is very large and various. Ribbon large and small. For the benefit of those who live at a distance, I will for the retail price, sent with order, by mail at my risk, forward any number of books either by Mail or by Express at my own expense. Five dollars will buy six dollars worth of books. Ten dollars, twelve, and twenty dollars twenty-five dollars worth of books. Letter paper and envelopes of every style in the same proportion.

J. K. Wellman, whose rapid strides from his start on Main Street to his splendid mammoth Book Store in Lothrop's Block three doors west of the Post Office, has been unprecedented in the history of the Book business in our city. Mr. Wellman, who has had a good experience in the business, has now probably the best and largest assortment of Books in the State, and we think a glance at his stock will satisfy any one of the truth of this remark. His great facilities for purchase at low rates, enable him to defy all competition, by selling at a very low figure. We congratulate the people of Southern Michigan upon the existence of this mammoth wholesale and retail Book Establishment, and the extensive part it is taking in furnishing books at low rates. We can assure our friends abroad, in this and other counties, that they can buy Books cheaper at Wellman's than at any other place in the west. Come and see.—[Adrian Expositor.

WELLMAN'S LITTERARY EMPORIUM.—Devoted to a Sound, High-toned and healthy Literature; Religion, Freedom, Temperance, Education and all topics calculated to Expand and Elevate the Mind. J. K. Wellman, formerly of the Miscellany, Editor and Proprietor.

The Emporium is published Monthly, and will contain at least 40 pages in each number, making 500 pages in a year. TERMS—Single copy for a year in advance, $1; Six copies, $5; Thirteen copies, $10, Single number, 10 cents. Money may be sent by mail at the risk of the Publisher. Published by J. K. Wellman, Adrian Michigan. Emporium Office, in Wellman's Book Store, near the Post Office. Postage six cents a year if paid in advance.

We design to make this periodical what its name imports, an Emporium of Literature. It will be independent of party or sect. Free thought, and free expression will be its standing motto. To the extent of our ability we shall advocate the cause of Christianity, Temperance, Freedom, and other subjects which we think calculated to elevate mankind.

The Emporium will contain articles from men of various professions and opinions. We shall also present various styles; The bold, the original, the terse, the cosgyle, the sarcastic, the beautiful, sublime, the ideal, and the romantic shall make up its repast. We expect original articles from the following writers: Rev. T. C. Gardner, T. M. Cooley Esq., Rev. George C. Curtis, Andrew Jewell Esq., Rev. Edward M. Chase, Lydia Jane Pierson, Esq., B. G. Green, M. N. Bailey, Seth Smith, De Phing Taylor, Rev. O. H. White, Rev. E. H. Pilcher, Professors Churchill, Whipple and Highland, Rev's W. W. Craig, and Luther Lee, C. B. Stebbins, and President Tappan.

Agents.—We want 100 Agents in every part of the west, for the Literary Emporium; to whom a liberal premium will be given. J. K. WELLMAN,
Book Seller and Publisher, Adrian, Mich

School Teachers who are about closing their winter schools, and will be looking for business will do well to take an agency for this magazine. With the Emporium, and a small stock of books, they can do [illegible]

Wellman's [illegible] Emporium.

This new [illegible] J. K. Wellman Editor and Proprietor, [illegible] appearance. It certainly does great credit to the enterprise and literary taste of Mr. Wellman. It is printed by S. P. & A. Jermain from stereotype plates, and contains an original and valuable article from the pen of Rev. T. C. Gardner on "American Civilization," also an original tale from the pen of Lydia Jane Pierson, together with others from the pens of C. W. Bethune and others. Mr. Wellman is determined to make this periodical every way of the first order of merit, and with a liberal patronage To [illegible] $1,00 in advance. Office at Wellman's mammoth Book Emporium.—[Adrian Expositor.

A NEW MAGAZINE.—ADRIAN ENTERPRISE.—About the 5th of February, Mr J. K. Wellman, will issue the first number of his new monthly, The Literary Emporium, a magazine of forty pages of the choicest original and select matter. Mr Wellman informs us that by designs the Emporium, for a family magazine, a fireside companion, and nothing except the most unexceptionable matter will find its way into its columns.

This is a new era in the existance of our young city, and we trust it will be successful as, judging from Mr. W's former experience we doubt not it will be. It will do much towards giving our town a reputation abroad.—Adrian Watchtower

THE NEW SPECIAL

Topographical Map of

Lenawee county, Mich.,

From original surveys and actual measurment throughout the whole county, by Beehler and Wenig, Surveyors and Civil Engineers, Authors of Maps of Allegany, Schoharie, and Broome County, N. Y., and Washtenaw Co., Mich.

The subscribers, who have been engaged in compiling a map of Lenawee County since 11 months, are about to review the whole work in order to correct even the slightest error, if any should have occured. The same time they will obtain subscribers for the enterprise, "which is connected with immense labor and expense."

The Map is about 4x5 feet in size, and contains every public road with all its variations, the location of Dwellings, places of Worship, Post Offices, and School Houses, Stores, Mills, Shops, &c., also, section and farm lines with the owner's name engraved to it: Views of Public buildings, Plans of every village in the County on the margin forming not only a correct and complete, but also an ornamental Map, and will be handsomely colored, mounted and furnished to subscribers for $5 per copy.

BECHLER, WENIG & CO.,
Adrian & Philadelphia

The undersigned having examined Messrs. Beehler & Wenig's Surveys of Lenawee Co., take pleasure in recommending their Map to the citizens of this County, as being in our opinion, a very accurate, reliable and practical Map and complete County Directory, and well worthy their liberal patronage. Considering the expense attending its survey procuring so accurately all the names, localities, distances, town plats, farm lines, views, etc., and the limited sale it must necessarily meet with "on account of its being entirely a local work" we think they offer it very reasonable, and have subscribed for the Map.

OUT-ALL!

Mr. A.—Good morning, Sir! Where have you been this morning so early.

Mr. B.—Oh, look to my carriage and see if you can tell where I have been.

A.—Dear me! that looks like work compared with some I have had done within the last year. Have you had all this work done this morning?

B.—Certainly. He shall's himself in readiness at all times, to accommodate those who will pay, he keeps SHOES and NAILS and other Stock on hand. I think he is the best hand at all kinds of work that can be produced in the whole section of country around.

A.—Well, I shall call on him this very morning, for I want to get back to my work this forenoon. Oh! I liked to have forgot to ask you where he has opened his new shop!

B.—It is in the Brick Shop, near Anderson and Brewer's Furnace.

A.—What, right by the Railroad?

B.—Yes.

A.—Don't it scare the horses?

B.—No, not but a very little. Some do not notice it at all. STEARNS & CO.

"If I were a noble lady
And he a peasant born,
With nothing but his good right-hand
Between him and scorn—
Oh! I would speak so humble,
And I would stoop so meek,
And cool with tears this fierce hot flush,
He left upon my cheek.
Sing heigh, sing ho, my bonnie, bonnie boat,
Let's watch the anchor weighed—
For he is a great sea-captain,
And I a fisher maid.

If I were a royal princess
And he a captive poor,
I would cast down these steadfast eyes
Unbar his bolted door,
And walking in the whole world's sight
Lay at his feet would fall
Sceptre and crown and womanhood
My being should take them all!
Sing heigh, sing ho, my bonnie, bonnie boat,
Afloat with sea and sky—
For he is a bold sea-captain
A fisher-maiden I.

If I were a saint in heaven,
And he a sinner pale,
Whom good men passed with face avert,
And left him to his bale,
Mine eyes they should weep rivers,
My voice reach that great Throne,
Beseeching—Oh! be merciful!
Make Thou mine own, mine own!
Sing heigh, sing ho, my bonnie, bonnie boat
Love only cannot fade—
Though he is a bold sea-captain
And I a fisher-maid."

Close stood the young sea-captain,
His tears fell fast as rain,
"If I have sinned, I'll sin no more—
God judge between us twain!"
The gold ring flashed in sunshine,
The sunlit waves laughing curled—
"Our ship rocks at the harbor bar,
Away to the under world!"
"Farewell, farewell my bonnie, bonnie boat,
Now Heaven us bless and aid.
For my lord is a great sea-captain
And I am a fisher-maid."

The Young Tobacco Chewer Cured.

On board ship, one day when one of the boys came with his hammock on his shoulder, as he had a quid of tobacco in his mouth.

"What have you got there?" asked the lieutenant, "a gumboil? Your cheek is much swollen."

"No sir," replied the boy, "there's nothing the matter."

"Oh, there must be; perhaps it is a bad tooth. Open your mouth and let me see."

Very reluctantly the boy opened his mouth, which contained a large roll of tobacco leaf.

"I see," said the lieutenant, "poor fellow! you must suffer! your mouth wants overhauling and your teeth cleaning. I wish we had a dentist on board; but as we have not, I will operate as well as I can. Send the armorer up here with his tongs."

When the armorer made his appearance with his tongs, the boy was compelled to open his mouth while the tobacco was extracted with this rough treatment.

"There now!" said the lieutenant, "I'm sure that you must feel better already.—You never could have had an appetite with such stuff in your mouth. Now, captain of the afterguard, bring a piece of the old canvass and some sand, and clean his teeth nicely.

The captain of the afterguard came forward, and grinning from ear to ear, put the boy's head between his knees, and scrubbed his teeth well with canvass and sand for two three minutes.

"There, that will do," said the lieutenant. "Now, my little fellow, take some water and rinse your mouth, and you will enjoy your breakfast. It was impossible for you to have eaten anything with your mouth in such a filthy condition. When you are troubled in the same way again, come to me and I'll be your dentist."

ANOTHER INSANE CASE.—A good story is told of the wife of an Israelitish tradesman in Broadway, who greatly horrified her liege lord by her fearful extravagance. Although the mother of a large family, she squandered her husband's means with such reckless prodigality, that he was at length compelled to take a firm stand and cut off the supplies. Indignant at such treatment, the lady hired a carman and actually sent her piano to a pawnbroker, and raised a considerable sum of money upon it. The husband then applied to a lawyer, who very judiciously advised him to consult a physician. He did so. The necessary form was gone through with, and the wife quickly found herself the inmate of an insane asylum. The treatment there had a very beneficial effect; and a few weeks since she was again admitted to her home, thoroughly cured, it is believed, of her expensive propensities, and she conducts herself like a perfect model wife.

From the Detroit Advertiser.

A Good Story.

We heard a rich story, a day or two since, told by the victim himself, which we think too good to keep, and we therefore take the liberty of laying it before our readers. We give it, as near as may be, in our friend's own words.

"Speaking about this breach of promise case," said Smith, after some conversation had been carried on by the company, in regard to the Crane affair—"speaking of this breach of promise case, reminds me that I have had a little experience in that matter, myself. I don't mean to say that I was ever situated as this fellow is, but I have felt about as I should think he would, and if you would like to hear it, I will tell you how it was."

All having signified a wish to hear, he proceeded:

"Well as near as I can remember, it was fifteen years ago this last winter, that I attended a dancing school in Detroit, with a young lady then residing in the city. I had made up my mind some years before, that I would never get married, but it was such pleasant business, I could not find it in my heart to "let the girls alone,' altogether, so I paid her tuition fee, and attended the class in her company every night. About the middle of the term, several of the young people, ourselves included, were talking in the ballroom on the subject of matrimony, and I, of course, became interested, as well as the others. On going home that evening I told my companion that I had determined to get married in the spring, and asked her advice in regard to making a selection for a wife. She made no reply for a moment, and I told her if she did'nt know anybody better fitted for me, I would like to have her think the matter over, and tell me, by the last of school, what she thought of marrying me herself. I was joking all this time, you must understand and had no more thought of marrying her, than I have now of marrying Queen Vic. She promised to think of it, however, and I returned to my boarding house, and gave the subject no further thought, until some weeks later—and as luck would have it, on the last evening of the school, the subject was again brought up in the conversation, just as we were preparing to return to our home for the night. After leaving the hall, we talked and chatted of different matters, and of different subjects till we reached her residence. It was late and I did not enter the house, though she strongly urged me to do so. I had bid her good night, and was turning away, when I happened to recollect the promise she had made me, and I said:

"Helen, you promised to let me know, to night, whether you would marry me this spring. Have you made up your mind?"

"Yes," said she; "If have been thinking about it, but I guess I am a little too young. If it wasn't for that I would have no objection."

"Well, good night then," said I. "I did'nt expect you would do it—but I'm bound to marry some one, and this spring too."

"Before leaving her, I engaged to call again the following evening. That night I slept soundly, and the next morning had forgotten all about my night's adventures. During the day, I received an invitation to attend a ball to be held that evening, a few miles out of the city, and I made my arrangements accordingly.—Towards dark, I remembered my engagement to see Helen, and thought I would run over for a moment, and afterwards have time to attend the ball.

"Arrived at the house, I met the lady in the door-way, and I thought for an instant that she was rigged up in an extra style, which I was at a loss to account for though I concluded that she had company and I was therefore in hopes that I should not be detained long. Helen welcomed me into the parlor with a sweet smile, and took her place beside me on the sofa. I was expecting every moment to see some stranger enter the room, and I had not yet become satisfied that we are alone, when she said—"Henry, I've made up my mind to have you!"

"Had a thunder-clap struck me, I could not have been more surprised, and after an instant of hesitation, I stammered out—

"What did you say?"

"I have concluded to marry you!"

"Ooh, you have! Well, I suppose it's all right—when shall the event take place?"

"I thought if it would suit you, that you might drive round next Sunday, and we will go to mother's, at Dearborn, and be married there."

"Well," said I, "I'll see if I can," and as soon as possible I took my leave.

I didn't go to the ball that night—I forgot all about it, and sat over the stove till morning, thinking of what a scrape I had got myself into. I even forgot to keep the fire going, and almost froze in my seat. When day-light began to peep in at the windows, I had made up my mind what I would do. I would go over and tell Helen that we must be married immediately, or not at all, and if she agreed to that, I saw no other way but to submit to my fate.

"When I entered the gate, leading up to her house, I heard her singing a lively song, and my conscience almost smote me for deceiving the poor girl as I had; but I summoned up courage to ring the bell, and pulling up my collar and throwing my head back, I anxiously awaited an answer to my summons. She soon came to the door, and I was again shown into the parlor, and she took her place beside me on the sofa, as before.

"Helen," I commenced,"—I,

"Well, what?"

"I—, I—we must be married to-day, or I—, I—don't think I shall be able to be married at all!"

"It stuck in my throat as I said it, for I knew I was telling a whapper—but imagine my surprise when she replied:

"Well, just as you please, Henry. You may drive your carriage around about 12 o'clock and I will be ready."

"I gave up! Precisely at twelve I drew up before her door with my carriage and before night we were married."

Our friend added, after finishing the story—"Young men, that wife has been worth more than one hundred thousand dollars to me!"

Death of the High Priest of Japan

The Dairi, or High-priest of Japan, inhabits a splendid palace in the city of Miako, on the island of Nipon. His court is composed of 20,000 priests, who are entrusted with the charge of the 4,000 temples of this immense city. His costume is a long tunic, over which he wears a large red dress; a white, transparent vail, ornamented with golden fringe is worn upon his head, falling about half way down the body. His countenance remains always invisible.

On the 1st of July, 1856, the Dairi was taken ill. Immediately the chief priest, with his ghostly colleagues, 200 priests of the first rank, who are endowed with the religious power of the empire, were summoned to the palace. By the next day, the invalid's situation became more critical, and on the 3d his death was pronounced to be inevitable and close at hand. The priests repaired at once to the temple, and informed the populace that the Dairi had entered into a compact with the seven gods of heaven, and was upon the eve of juvenating his mind in the embrace of Ten-syo-dai-sin, the principal of these deities, who the Japanese believe to have created the world. She has been at the head of affairs for about 20,000 years, and from her sprung all the royal families of Japan. To her the inhabitants of the entire empire address their invocations as the protectress of the land.

At the conclusion of the first prayers, the priests declared the inhabitants could immediately enter the palace and regale their eyes with the sight of their highly-venerated high priest. At once the crowd streamed to the palace, where they beheld the Dairi lying stretched upon a bed of state. He was dressed in a white tunic, and his features covered with a very thin mask, were dimly perceptible through a vail spread over them. The priests prayed loudly, and wafted the sweet perfumes from their censers over the dying man.—At nine o'clock in the morning of the 5th of July, he breathed his last. As the last breath passed through his lips, the chief priest, raising his arm as a token of the departing life, assured the by-standers that the soul of the high-priest had ascended to the abodes of the gods, but that it would shortly return and resume its earthly habitation. Upon this announcement, a solemn silence pervaded the audience. After the lapse of ten minutes the chief priest, surrounded by a crowd of his religious companions, threw over the still warm corpse of the Dairi, a large white cloth, which he instantly withdrew, and in the place just before occupied by the body, there appeared another, similarly attired, but alive and strong, who, raising himself from his recumbent position, went to an altar standing near the bed-side, and bestowed upon the people his blessing. The crowd instantly broke out into exclamations of gladness, and rejoicing.

By a well-concerted stratagem, the priests had abstracted the body of the Dairi, supplying its place with his son, who inherits his father's station. The state bed being hung around with drapery, rendered it all the easier to perform the trick without arousing the suspicions of the credulous inhabitants. The corpse of the Dairi was carried in the night-time to the Ycie temple by the priests, where it was laid upon a pyre and burned to ashes. This being done, the temple is closed, and all persons are forbidden to enter it. A violation of this law is punished by burning to death.

The Ycie temple, the handsomest one in the city, contains several rows of earthen statues of the deity Ten syo-dai-sin.—These statues are about one yard high, are hollow, and have each a large opening at the back of the head. The ashes of each Dairi are preserved in one of these statues, the same as in an urn. The inhabitants are not permited to enter the portion of the temple where these figures stand. On the day after the death occurred, ceremonies of a very different character take place—the inauguration of the new high-priest, who, as the people suppose, has had his soul renewed in the residence of the great gods.

On the 7th of July, the new Dairi, surrounded by chosen priests, issued from his palace, and paraded the different portions of the city of Miako. The people threw themselves to the earth, and addressed prayers to him as to a god. Upon this day, all work was forbidden, all prisoners were set at liberty, and all criminal processes annulled.

On the next day, the procession proceeded to Nara, a short distance from Miako, which is considered as one of the most holy places of the empire. It contains a great number of temples of colossal dimensions. It is surrounded by a square portico, supported on each side by a hundred columns, each one yard in diameter. The statue of the god to whom this temple is dedicated, stands in the center. Its breadth across the shoulders is forty-eight yards. On the 10th of July, the Dairi, returning from Nara, held a grand celebration in his own capital. As soon as he had returned, the priests commanded public prayer to be held in all the temples in honor of the auspicious occasion.

These facts were related by an eye-witness, a Hollander, whose business in Japan gave him an opportunity of visiting the residence of the Dairi. He also states, that if the slightest incredulity is manifested by any of the bystanders, they are instantly felled to the earth and mercilessly slaughtered.—N. Y. Tribune.

"I'LL CALL AROUND AND PAY."—What a world of woe is contained in these few words to the artisan and mechanic! 'I'll call around and pay,' said the rich man, to avoid the trouble of going to his desk to get the necessary funds, and the poor mechanic is obliged to go home to disappoint his workmen and all that depend upon him for their due. It is an easy matter to work; the only real glory in this life is an independent idea of being able to sustain yourself by the labor of your own hands, and it may easily be imagined what crushing force there is in "I'll call around and pay," to the laboring man who depends upon that pay for subsistance. If those who could pay, would only pay at once, it would place hundreds and thousands in a condition to do likewise, and would prevent much misery and distress.

A Gem in the River.

A young mother, with tears of bereavement in her eyes, stood over the river of death, gazing wistfully into its black and sluggish waters, as if she would fain rest her gaze upon some object away down—down in its fathomless depths. She gazed long and wistfully, and the black waves rolled sullenly, sluggishly onward.

And the mother laid her hand submissively on her bosom, and said 'My gem! my gem!'

And a celestial being, like an angel, stood near the hidden door of her heart and whispered in a silvery voice, like music, 'What seekest thou, mourning sister?'

'Alas,' said the mourner, 'I once, even yesterday, wore a beautiful gem in my bosom. To me it was invaluable; it was no trivial gem, it was one which Kings and monarchs might well have been proud of. The riches of the East could not have purchased it from me. In an hour that was to me evil and miserable, the gem dropped from my bosom into the black night of this deep river. As I saw it floating away from me gently as the coming of an Eastern shower, I reached after it, but it was beyond my grasp; and my gem, my babe smiled upon me, as it was riding upon the waves further and further from me. It began to sink—to sink from my sight, and in a moment my gem was gone—and gone forever!' and she turned sorrowfully away.

And the angel voice whispered again, 'Stay, sister, grieve not; look again into the dark river.'

She looked as she was bid, and a cry of sweet and rapturous joy burst from her lips, 'Thanks to the Father! I see my gem floating in a great black wave. O, may I not wear it in my bosom again?'

'Stay, my sister, thou art deceived, what thou seest in the river is not thy gem; it is the shadow of what was given thee in trust. Look, sister, heavenward, and bid thy mourning heart rejoice.'

She looked aloft, and away up in the dark beclouded sky, she saw a single spot clear and blue, and in it a bright star was gleaming, and its silvery rays came down and danced on the gloomy river, giving the black wave a brightness, as if silvered thro' and through; and away down many fathoms the bright reflection rested, and this the mourner thought was her lost gem. She gazed silently upon the scene, and the star from heaven was shining.

And the voice of the angel came again, like unto the sweet song of many instruments of music, saying, 'Sister, the gloomy waves thou seest, though cold, and dark, and terrible, roll ceaselessly onward up the great gate of heaven, and thither they bore thy mourned for gem, which the good Father lent thee: the waves have borne it back to Him, and it shines forever near the throne, like yon brightly beaming star.'

The voice was hushed, and the sorrowing mother turned away with her eyes lifted from the earth and gloomy river, and fixed them hopefully and wistfully on heaven.

And the bright star she saw, when tears filled her eyes, mourning for her loss, yet beams brightly, and it shines on her little baby's grave.—[Youth's Companion.

Will Thou Call me Pet Names.

Will thou call me pet names dear,
When no more my voice thou hear,
When bright rays will not be beaming,
And thy poet with ties dreaming,
Lies dreaming and hears not thy words
Will thou then call me thy bird?

When shadows of the fire flies fall
As much rays on a cottage wall;
And other days than these shall come
And you will be my heart and home,
When sorrow leave its home afar
Will thou call me thy own bright star?

And when the angels downward come,
And step within our own loved home,
When spirit hands around my heart
Will guide the still unerring dart;
Will thou look up to Heaven and Him,
And whisper "there is my bright gem.

Terrible Calamity at Oswego, Three Children Burned in a Dwelling

On Sunday morning at Oswego, the dwelling of Antoine Plante was destroyed by fire, and three of his children perished in the flames! The Times gives the following account of the catastrophe:

The family consisted of Mr. and Mrs. P., five children, and the mother of Mrs. Plante, and one of the children, an infant, slept below on the ground floor, while the elder children and their grand mother occupied the chambers above.—At about half-past three o'clock on Sunday morning, Stephen, the eldest of the children, aged about seventeen, was awakened by a sense of suffocating smoke in the room. He says he got up and awakeded the others in the chambers, and then got down stairs, barely escaping with his life. He is now sick in consequence of the large quantities of smoke he inhaled. Mr. Plante was awakened and immediately rused up stairs in darkness and smoke. He heard the voice of his mother crying, "Help me down; for God's sake show me down" Mr. P got hold of the old lady, but blinded and suffocated by the dense smoke, they both fell down the stairs, and rolled to the bottom. Fortunately neither of them were seriously injured, and the old lady was saved.

Mr. Plante made another attempt to get up the stairs but found it impossible, on account of the flames cutting off access to the room. The whole building with all its contents, was then burned down, three children perishing in the flames, whose bodies were afterwards recovered from the ruins, burned to cinders!

Those who escaped had nothing on but their night clothes, but were kindly provided with garments by the neighbors. The cries and shrieks of Mr. and Mrs. Plante, as they saw the flames enwrapping the building which contained three of their little ones, are described as heart-rending, but no human power could give relief.

Southern papers chronicle the passage of the first train of cars the entire distance from Savanah and Charleston, on the Atlantic Ocean, to Memphis, on the Mississippi River. A gentleman, who has just passed over the line, having left Memphis last Sunday, says that on that day but six miles of staging were encountered between the Mississippi and Chatanooga. This gap was to be closed with iron bars immediately. Now for the first time there is uninterrupted railroad communication through Slaveholding States from the Atlantic to the Mississippi. Savannah is thus brought within 741 miles, or a little less than 40 hours' travel of Memphis.

Nulla Vestigia Retorsum.

Whatever men may say or feel, the progress of truth is never backwards.—And yet it oftentimes is not so rapidly forward as we could have desired, and perhaps had fondly hoped. There is nothing perhaps of which we are likely to form so erroneous an estimate, or in which our own impetuosity is so likely to lead us into mistake, as in calculating the influences and motives that are to control the moral and political acts of men.

There is in every community, a moral sentiment, a sort of universal conscience, that may ever be relied upon, in the event, to pronounce in favor of the right, but at the same time so often and so much under the sway of sensuous and disturbing elements, that it would sometimes seem scarcely to exist at all

Those therefore, who look for a popular decision founded only upon the demonstrative principles of abstract right, and the deductions of sound moral science, will for the most part find themselves sadly disappointed in their too sanguine conclusions, while those who having been thus disappointed, thence conclude the multitude devoid of public conscience, or of all allegiance to its dictates, alike do humanity wrong, and belie the brightest pages of human history.

Although in human progress, there is no backward step, yet we must not forget that that progress is at times so slow as to be scarcely appreciable. That which we may seek to overturn to-day may have come to be what it is only by the slow growth of centuries. We must not be disappointed then that at our simple 'press to, change" we should still find it scarcely changed at all: Be patient, and in the light of a better day, and in the triumph of undying truth and universal right, it will change at last.

When temperance was first announced, and intemperence which was already cursing and blighting the land, was sought to be brought under the ban of a sound social and popular sentiment, it was sneered at and despised. Those who could not gainsay its searching and benevolent appeals, still practically derided and disregarded it Good men who in simple justice and consistency towards professed principle, should have been its friends, opposed and retarded it Yet founded in eternal right, and true benevolence, inch by inch it won its way into the church, the social circle, and the Legislative Hall, until he who now rejects its better principal, and disregards its universal law, is held to be a common enemy.

So too, when Wilberforce first raised his voice across the water for negro Emancipation. It was like the voice of one crying in the wilderness The commerce of the nation, the peerage and the throne were against it. But the voice of eternal truth, and the conscience of the nation, no matter how hid and smothered by selfish and party purpose and pride, still leaned listening forward to hear that voice, and after years of rebuke and scorn, the statesmen of the land were glad to claim its prestige, and own its justice—and it triumphed.

So too, we believe of American Slavery. It was forced upon us at the first, ere England had learned to feel the enormity of the wrong Like the skeleton at the Egyptian feasts, it was veiled, at the commencement of our national existence, so odious and disconsonant was it felt to be, in contrast with that universal liberty and equality, which was then laid down as the broad foundation of our bill of rights.

With the growth of the nation it has grown also in importance and deformity, until no veil can longer cover it, but strong local and commercial, and, worse than all, supposed partizan and political interest are clamoring for its support Place and power have hitherto been arrayed in its behalf, and it has seemed to triumph.—But like the triumph of the peerage and the crown, over the weak voice of Wilberforce, it will prove in the end delusive.—Seemingly defeated as it is and has been, yet the foes of freedom well know that amidst it all, it has taken no backward step. Outrage upon outrage, in places high or low, many spring up in behalf of the loathsome unveiled skeleton of slavery to startle the fears, and shock the sensibilities of the nation, but instead of strengthening its support, they are only hastening its fall. This may seem like declamation, but as God is just, the time is coming which shall make it history. It was Jefferson who said that as between slavery or freedom 'God has no attribute which can take sides with the oppressor' The long unheeded voice of truth and right is winding its slow way up into the hearts and minds of men, and however discouraging its progress may seem to be, it will be heard at last. It is patient perseverence, not fitful impulse that must win the day.

Ward.

A great many stories have suddenly obtained currency with regard to Ward, during his residence at Plankton, in Richland county. A young man by the name of Hall, who boarded with him, suddenly disappeared, and suspicions were entertained that Ward murdered him. Mrs. Ward became deranged soon after, and it is said that she often made dark and mysterious allusions to the circumstance in her ravings. We also find in the Plymouth paper, a statement that a young woman, now resident near Shelby, but then in the employ of Ward, as help, says, that sometime previous to the murder of Hall, a pedlar stopped at Ward's. He was afoot, and carried his packs with him. Early in the evening, Ward told the girl to go home as she would not be needed that night. She did so, and on returning next morning, Ward and his wife were at breakfast, inquired where the pedlar was? Ward said he had gone long ago. The girl then started to go up stairs to make the beds, and was told by Mrs. W. that she need not make them; she proceeded up stairs, and went into the room the pedlar had occupied, and was alarmed by the sight of blood upon the floor and upon the bed. She quickly descended the stairs, put on her bonnet and shawl and left the premises. She told the story to her mother, but it was never divulged until since Ward's arrest for the murder of his wife at Sylvania, for fear of incurring the malignity of Ward She, it seems, was feared and dreaded by almost all who knew him. The pedlar was never seen afterwards, and it is thought his body was secreted in a cistern, which was subsequently filled up by Ward.—[Tolodo Blade.

Holloway's Pills.—Among the triumphs of this wonderful medicine over confirmed disease of the stomach and epigastrium, the following is not the least remarkable. Edward Stillman, aged 51, residing at Hagerstown, Md. had been for eleven years a sufferer from indigestion and its painful concomitants. His appetite was irregular, his frame emancisated, his skin of a livid, unhealthy hue, and he had a constant feeling of constriction at the pit of the stomach, as if a cord were being drawn tightly around it. He was continually in a state of great mental as well as bodily distress, and to use his own expression, 'life had become irksome to him.' In the month of December last he commenced taking Holloway's Pills. Within 3 weeks thereafter all the above symptoms had vanished. No relapse has since occurred, and he is now as robust and active as any man of his years in all Maryland. For disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels, the Pills are the only reliable remedy in existence.

Summerfield—His Appearance.

Before I ever saw Mr. S., I felt an interest in him, occasioned by fragmentary notices of his preaching in the secular newspapers. That interest had been strengthened by verbal rumors that met me on my journey eastward, especially in the District of Columbia, where I met with some who had heard him. But on reaching Baltimore where he had frequently held forth the word of life before vast multitudes, every one appeared to be led captive, without distinction of classes. Passing groups of colored people engaged in earnest conversation, I overheard them say, with apparent delight, "The great Mr Summerfield!" A little beyond these, I passed companies of merry children, who even amid their street gambols, often repeated with evident complaisance, "Mr. Summerfield!"

Members of the Church, in several instances, said to me, that they would rather go where Mr Summerfield preached, although unable to get into the church, or enjoy anything more than to see him pass in and out, without hearing a word, than to hear any other minister preach his best sermon When asked why they could not explain it, only such was their feeling

All this to me appered to evince an extravagant partiality. Of Mr. Summerfield's personal appearances I had forgotten to seek information, and had formed a most erroneous idea. Having learned that he had been some years a field missionary in Ireland, I had conceived a notion that he was a portly Irishman of imposing person, about the middle age of life, and whose stentorian oratory could, at his command, reach and control the multitudes of people that thronged around him.

My mistake was soon corrected. The General Conference of 1824 was holding its session in Eutaw church. My seat was next to the now lamented Doctor M'Cann, who, calling my attention, by a gentle pressure of his elbow, inquired, "Would you like to see Summerfield?" "Yes," said I, following the direction of his eye. But in my anxiety to see the lion I overlooked him, untill the Doctor whispered, "Look at that little boy on the seat near the side door," who by the way, was only a few feet from me. Wonder of wonder! that youth the great Mr. Summerfield? astonishing! With the youthful appearance peculiar to young Englishmen, though twenty six years old, he seemed to be only twenty, and not fully developed, for his form, naturally slender was wasted by pulmonary disease. Tho' of nearly medium hight, his weight was probably not over onehundred and twenty pounds The lower part of his face indicated wasting disease; for his cheeks were thin and his mouth prominent But his forehead was smooth, elevated, and well proportioned. His hair was nearly the color of mole, and of a soft, silky appearance. His eye sparkled with intelligence, but was softened with gentleness His person, as a whole, was symmetrical, and his movements were graceful, but not pompous. So much as to personal appearance The engraved portraits in circulatation were probably correct when he was in health, but are too full for him as I saw him.—[Bishop Morris.

Tragedy in Kentucky

A fearful tragedy was enacted near Mount Washington, in Bullet County, on Thursday evening, at the residence of Julius Bukey, an old gentleman, who first took the life of his daughter Bettie, and then his own. The particulars of this bloody deed, from what we can learn are these: A young man named John Roby a neighbor, had been paying his addresses to the daughter, who was partial to him but the match was strenuously opposed by the father of the girl. He had an intimation or impression that they were about to elope to get married, and on the fatal evening the young lady, who was about 17 years of age, told her father, who had but the moment before entered the room, that she would pay a visit to a neighbor This excited the suspicions of the father, who remonstrated with her and refused to let her leave the house. Angry words ensued, and in the heat of passion, he first struck her, and then drew a revolver and shot her twice, both shots taking effect.—The unfortunate girl fell dead at his feet, in the presence of the horror-stricken wife and mother.

The wretched man on the instant of committing the deed, rushed from the house with the fatal weapon in his hand, pursued by a son, who had been hastily attracted to the scene by the report of the pistol. He tried to seize his father's arm to prevent further bloodshed, and to wrench the pistol from him, but he eluded his grasp, and, after retreating a few steps placed the pistol to his own head, and blew his brains out. Mr Bukey was a man of some property, and much respected by his neighbors, and was over fifty years of age.—Louisville Observer.

Bodily Carriage.

Instead of giving all sorts of rules about turning out the toes, and straightening up the body, and holding the shoulders back, all of which are impracticable to the many, because soon forgotten or of a feeling of awkwardness and discomfort wich procures a willing omission, all that is necessary to secure the object is to hold up the head and move on!—letting the toes and shoulders take care of themselves. Walk with the chin but slightly above a horizontal line, nor with your eye directed to things a little higher than your own head. In this way you walk properly, pleasurably, and without any feeling of restraint or awkwardness

If any one wishes to be aided in securing this habitual carriage of body, accustom yourself to carry the hands behind you, one hand grasping the opposite wrist

Englishmen are admired the world over for their full chests, and broad shoulders, and sturdy frames, and manly bearing—This position of body is a favorite with them, in the simple promenade in the garden or gallery, in attending ladies along a crowded street, in standing on the street or in public worship.

Many persons spend a large part of their walking existence in a sitting position. A single rule, well attended to, in this connection, would be of incalculable value to multitudes—use chairs with the old fashioned straight backs, a little inclining backwards! and sit with the lower portion of the body close against the back of the chair at the seat; any one who tries it will observe in a moment a grateful support to the whole spine. And we see no reason why children should not be taught from the beginning to write, and sew and knit, in a position requiring the lower portion of the body and the shoulders to touch the back of the chair all the time.

A very common position in istinguishes especially among men, is with the shoulders against the chair back, with a space of several inches between the chair back and the lower portion of the spine giving the body the shape of a half hoop; it is the instantaneous, instinctive and almost universal position assumed by any consumptive on sitting down, unless counteracted by an effort of the will; hence parents should regard such a position in their children with apprehension, and should rectify it at once.

The best position after eating a regular meal is, to have the hands behind the back, the head erect, in moderate locomotion, and in the open air, if the weather is not chilly. Half an hour spent in this way after meals, at least after breakfast and dinner, would add health and length of days to women in easy life, and to all sedentary—men It is a thought which richly merits attention.—[Hall's Journal of Health.

The Washington Epidemic.

From all the symptoms of the case, in connection with other facts, we have no doubt, that the disease which led to Mr. Lane's death had its origin in the "National epidemic," and that was the effect of poison. On this point the Philadelphia Times says an eminent physician of that city, who had several persons under his care, seeking relief from the effects of the mysterious sickness contracted at the Federal Capital, maintains the theory that it resulted from a premeditated attempt to poison the inmates of the National Hotel. He bases his opinion upon the fact that none but those who dined at the public table were attacked; and, as to the story of the rat-poisoned water it is refuted, because, the tank is only used for washing, while the drinking water is brought through from pipes from a distance. The sickness originally broke out during Mr. Buchanan's first visit to the hotel; it ceased when he left for Wheatland, and upon his return, after a fortnight's absence, it became again more violent than ever. The president elect was warned, by anonymous letters, not to eat or drink in that house, and under the advice of friends, although he returned to the hotel form a feeling of regard for its worthy proprietors, he never broke bread nor emptied a glass in it, until he took up his residence in the Presidential mansion Occasional visitors, who did not board there, but used the bar, were not afflicted while nearly all the occupants of the dining room were more or less prostrated.—The unfortunate girl fell dead at his feet, It is a revolting idea that such depravity could find a place in a human breast as thus to imperil life, without regard to who would be the victims; but the medical gentlemen who has laid down this theory has examined the whole subject most carefully, and his deduction seems almost irresistible.

A special agent of the Post office Department, Thos. McKinstrey, has rooted out the robber of the Post-office at Plymouth, Indiana. The culprit was a young man named Robert C. Corbely, alias Cass, who turns out to be a great scamp, though only 19 years of age. He is celebrated for being one of the most expert finggers and burglars in the Union He is placed in charge of the United States Marshal at Indianapolis. The property stolen was a package of 30 letters, one letter containing $60.

☞ There is nothing in the whole list of medicine creating such a stir among invalids as Dr. Sanford's Invigorator or liver remedy. It gives such quick relief as to convince the patient of receiving benefit almost as soon as the medicine is taken. We do not know of a single instance where it has been taken without benefit, and in nearly all cases a complete cure is effected by its use. It has acquired its wide popularity simply because it does what it is recommended to do. It is constantly enlarging its circle of friends, carrying healing on its wings, and joy to the hearts of those suffering from Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Dyspepsia or general debility

Can afford to be without Mustang Liniment in their house. The many accidents we are liable to, may render it necessary any moment, and nothing is capable of performing such a certain cure. (Extract) "In lifting the kettle from the fire it caught and scalded my hands and person severely—one hand almost to a crisp. The torture was unbearable. It was an awful night. * * * The Mustang Liniment appeared to extract the pain almost immediately. It healed rapidly and left no scar of account." Chas. Foster, 420 Broad street, Philadelphia." It is truly a wonderful article. It will cure any case of swelling, burns, stiff joints, Eruptions, or rheumatism. For Horses it should never be dispensed with. One Dollar's worth of Mustang has frequently saved a valuable horse. It cures galds, specins, Ringbone, spavin and founder. Beware of imitations. Sold in all parts of the habitable globe.

A MEDICAL REVOLUTION. THE WORLD UNANIMOUS.

Holloway's Ointment.

THE GREAT COUNTER IRRITANT.

The virus of disease often makes its way to the internal organs through the pores of the skin. This penetrating Ointment, melting under the hand as it is rubbed in, is absorbed through the same channels, and, reaching the seat of inflammation promptly and invariably subdues it, whether located in the kidneys, the liver, the lungs, or any other important organ. It penetrates the surface of the interior, through the countless tubes that communicate with the skin as summer rain passes into the fevered earth, diffusing its cool and regenerating influence.

Skin Diseases and Glandular Swellings.

Every species of exterior irritation is quickly reduced by the anti-inflammatory action of this Ointment. Angry eruptions, such as Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Tetter, Ringworm, Scald-head, Nettle Rash, Scabies (or Itch), &c., die out, to return no more, under its application. Hospital experience in all parts of the world proves its infallibility in diseases of the skin, the muscles, the joints and the glands.

ULCERS, SORES & TUMORS.

The effect of this unrivaled external remedy upon scrofula, and other virulent ulcers and sores, is almost Miraculous. It first discharges the poison which produces suppuration and proud flesh, and thus the cure which its healing properties afterward complete are safe as well as permanent.

Wounds, Bruises, Burns and Scalds

In cases of the fracture of the bones, injuries caused by steam explosions, bruises, burns, scalds, rheumatism, stiffness of the joints, and contraction of the sinews, it is employed and warmly recommended by the faculty. This marvelous remedy has been introduced by its inventor in person into all the leading hospitals of Europe, and no private household should be without it.

UNDENIABLE TESTIMONY

The medical staff of the French and English Armies in the Crimea, have officially signed their approval of Holloway's Ointment, as the most reliable dressing for sabre cuts, stabs, and gun-shot wounds. It is also used by the surgeons of the Allied Navies.

Both the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following cases.

Bunions.	Lumbago.	Sore Legs.	Swelled Glands
Burns	Mercurial	Sore Breasts	Stiff Joints
Chapped Hands	Eruptions	Sore Heads	Ulcers
	Piles.	Sore Throats	Venereal Sores
Chilblains	Rheumatism	Sore of all kinds	Wounds of all kinds
Fistulas	Salt Rheum.
Gout	Skin Diseases	Sprains	Scalds

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss. At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office in the city of Adrian, on Monday the 30th day of March, in the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-seven.

Present, Fernando C. Beaman, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of George W Miller, deceased. On reading and filing the petition duly verified, of Sarah J Miller widow of deceased, praying for the appointment of Flavius J Hough, as administrator on the estate of said deceased, for reasons therein set forth.

Thereupon it is ordered, That Monday, the 27th day of April next, at one o'clock in the afternoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs at law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court, there to be holden at the Probate Office in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Tecumseh Herald, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

HEALTH OR SICKNESS. CHOOSE BETWEEN THEM.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

The blood furnishes the materials of every tissue, fluid and solid from the human frame. When pure it repairs health to every organ; when corrupt it necessarily produces disease. Holloway's Pills operate directly upon the elements of the stream of life, neutralizing the principle of disease and thus radically curing the malady, whether located in the nerves, the stomach, the liver, the bowels, the muscles, the skin, the brain, or any other part of the system.

USED THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

Holloway's Pills are equally efficacious in complaints common to the whole human race, and in disorders peculiar to certain climates and localities.

ALARMING DISORDERS.

Dyspepsia and derangement of the liver, the source of infirmity and suffering, and the cause of innumerable deaths, yield to these curatives in all cases, however aggravated, acting as a mild purgative alternative and tonic: they relieve the bowels, purify the fluids and invigorate the system and the constitution at the same time.

General Weakness—Nervous Complaints.

When all stimulants fail, the renovating and bracing properties of these Pills give firmness to the shaking nerves and enfeebled muscles of the victim of general debility.

DELICATE FEMALES.

All irregularities and ailments incident to the delicate and sensitive organs of the sex are removed or prevented by a few doses of these mild but infallible alteratives. No mother who regards her own or her children's health should fail to have them within her reach.

Scientific Endorsements.

The London "Lancet" the London "Medical Review," and the most eminent of the faculty in Great Britain, France and Germany, have eulogized the Pills and their inventor.

Holloway's Pills are the best remedy known in the World for the following Diseases

Asthma.	Diarrhœa	Inflamation	Stone and
Bowel Complaints	Dropsy	Inward weakness	Gravel
Colds	Debility	Jaundice	Secondary
Coughs	Fever's Ague	Liver Complaints	Symptoms
Chest Disease	Female Complaints	Lowness of Spirits	Venerial affections
Costiveness	Headaches	Piles	Worms of all Kinds
Dyspepsia	Indigestion	Influenza

ONLY ONE BOTTLE OF DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR, OR LIVER REMEDY.

IS REQUIRED TO CURE ANY KIND OF TROUBLES with Liver Complaints, unless the most desperate of cases, and the Second bottle will with scarce a single failure, restore the patient to health and vigor. We wish to call the attention of all to these facts that the Invigorator is compounded by a physician who has used it in his practice for the past twenty years with a success almost incredulous, and that it is entirely vegetable being composed wholly of gums.

Some idea of the strength of these gums may be formed when it is known one bottle of the Invigorator contains as much strength as one hundred doses of Calomel without any of its deleterious effects.

One bottle is the surest thing known to carry away the bad effects of mineral poison of any kind.

Only one bottle is needed to throw out of the system the effects of medicine after a long sickness.

One bottle taken for Jaundice removes all yellowness or unnatural color from the skin.

One dose after eating is sufficient to relieve the stomach and prevent the food from rising and souring.

Only one dose taken before retiring prevents nightmare.

One dose taken at night loosens the bowels gently and cures costiveness.

One dose taken after each meal will cure Dyspepsia.

One dose of two tea spoonsful will always relieve the Sick Headache.

One bottle taken for female obstruction removes the cause of the disease and makes a perfect cure.

Only one dose immediately relieves Cholic, while One dose often repeated is a sure cure for Cholera Morbus and a sure preventative of cholera.

One dose taken often will prevent the re-currence of bilious attacks, while it relieves all painful feelings.

One or two doses taken occasionally is one of the best remedies for a cold ever known.

Thousands of cases of inflamation and weakness of the lungs have been cured by the Invigorator.

One dose taken a short time before eating gives vigor to the appetite and makes food digest well.

One dose often repeated cures Chronic Diarrhœa in its worst forms, while summer and bowel complaints yield almost to the first dose.

One or two doses cure attacks caused by worms, while for worms in children there is no surer, safer and speedier remedy in the world as it never fails.

There is no exaggeration in these statements, they are plain and sober facts, that we can give evidence to prove, while all who use it are giving their unanimous testimony in its favor.

We wish all who are sick and debilitated to try this remedy and test it thoroughly, and any who are not benefitted by its use we should like to hear from, as we have yet to hear from the first person who has used a bottle of the Invigorator without receiving benefit, for there are such astonishing medicinal virtues in it, that all, no matter how long they have been affected, if their complaint arises from a deranged liver, will be benefited, if not entirely cured.

AYER'S Cathartic Pills, (SUGAR COATED,) ARE MADE TO CLEANSE THE BLOOD AND CURE THE SICK

Invalids, Patients, Mothers, Physicians, Philanthropists, read their Effects, and Judge of their Virtues.

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 1, 1855.

DR. J. C. AYER: Sir: I have been requested by one of the worst headache any body can have for a few cents of your Pills. It seems to arise from a disordered stomach, and they soon relieve it. If they will cure others as they do me, the sale is worth knowing.

Yours with great respect, ED. W. PEPPER, Cash. of Mononga. Citizen.

Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & Co., Lowell, Mass., and sold by Agents everywhere.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 7, 1856.

SIR: I have used your Pills in my general and hospital practice ever since you made them, and cannot hesitate to say they are the best purgative we employ. Their regulating action on the liver is quick and decided, consequently they are an admirable remedy for derangements of that organ. Indeed, I have seldom found a case of bilious disease so obstinate that it did not readily yield to them.

Fraternally yours, ALONZO BALL, M. D., Physician of the Marine Hospital.

Dysentery, Relax, and Worms.

POST OFFICE, HARTLAND, LIV. CO., MICH., Nov. 16, 1855.

DR. AYER: Your Pills are the perfection of medicine. They have done my wife more good than I can tell you. She had been sick and pining away for months. Went off to be doctored at great expense, but got no better. She then commenced taking your Pills, which soon cured her by expelling large quantities of worms (dead) from her body. They afterwards cured her and our two children of bloody dysentery. One of our neighbors had it bad, and my wife cured him with two doses of your Pills. While others around us paid from five to twenty dollars doctors' bills, and lost much time, without being cured entirely even then. Such a medicine as yours, which is actually good and honest, will be prized here.

GEO. J. GRIFFIN, Postmaster.

Indigestion and Impurity of the Blood

From Rev. J. V. Himes, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston

DR. AYER: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to visit in distress. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood they are the very best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends. Yours, J. V. HIMES.

WARSAW, WYOMING CO., N. Y., Sept. 24, 1855.

DEAR SIR: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system, and purify the fountains of the blood.

JOHN G. MEACHAM, M. D.

From a Forwarding Merchant of St. Louis, Feb. 4, 1856.

DR. AYER: Your Pills are the paragon of all that is great in medicine. They have cured my little daughter of ulcerous sores upon her hands and feet that had proved incurable for years. Her mother has been long grievously afflicted with blotches and pimples on her skin and in her hair. After our child was cured, she also tried your Pills, and they have cured her. ASA MORGRIDGE.

Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and Gout.

PULASKI HOUSE, SAVANNAH, GA., Jan. 6, 1856.

HONORED SIR: I should be ungrateful for the relief your skill has brought me if I did not report my case to you. A cold settled in my limbs, and brought on excruciating neuralgic pains, which ended in chronic rheumatism. Notwithstanding I had the best of physicians, the disease grew worse and worse, until, by the advice of your excellent agent in Baltimore, Dr. McKenzie, I tried your Pills. Their effects were slow, but sure. By persevering in the use of them I am now entirely well.

Yours, &c., BENJ. F. STEVENS.

SENATE CHAMBER, BATON ROUGE, La., 6 Dec., 1856.

DR. AYER: I have been entirely cured by your Pills of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease that had afflicted me for years. VINCENT SLIDELL.

For Dropsy, Plethora, or kindred Complaints, requiring an active purge, they are an excellent remedy.

For Costiveness or Constipation, and as a Dinner Pill, they are agreeable and effectual.

Fits, Suppression, Paralysis, Inflammation, and even Deafness, and Partial Blindness, have been cured by the alterative action of these Pills.

Most of the pills in market contain Mercury, which, although a valuable remedy in skilful hands, is dangerous in a public pill, from the dreadful consequences that frequently follow its incautious use. These contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

and for the relief of consumptive patients in advanced stages of the disease.

We need not speak to the public of its virtues throughout every town and almost every hamlet of the American States. Its wonderful cures of pulmonary complaints have made it already known. Nay, few are the families in any civilized portion of this continent without some personal experience of its effects; and fewer yet the communities any where which have not among them some living trophy of its victory over the subtle and dangerous diseases of the throat and lungs. While it is the most powerful antidote yet known to man for the formidable and dangerous diseases of the pulmonary organs, it is also the pleasantest and safest remedy that can be employed for infants and young persons. Parents should have it in store against the insidious enemy that steals upon them unprepared. We have abundant grounds to believe the CHERRY PECTORAL saves more lives by the consumptions it prevents than those it cures. Keep it by you, and cure your colds while they are curable, but neglect them until no human skill can master the inexorable canker that, fastened on the vitals, eats you life away. All know the dreadful fatality of lung disorders, and as they know too the virtues of this remedy, we need not assure them to assure them it is still made the best it can be. We spare no cost, no care, no toil to produce it the most perfect possible, and thus afford those who rely on it the best agent which our skill can furnish for their cure.

TECUMSEH HERALD.

An Editor's Trials.

As said a poet once:

How often we chuckle when reading the verse
An editor's sanctum should always possess;
But such wishes as these, if of course we express
These rhymes and their lovers come to our mind.
That one editor's sanctum is often a place
And but few private rooms in the country are found,
We'll give you a sound of how things go round.

First, a pretty young couple—newly married, that is,
With a paper in hand, were all of a twitter
And hastily glancing it over, just the way
She thrusts it under with a mutter—

No marriages here,
I think it is clear,
Why there's ne'er so many
They don't publish any.

Here's poetry, And here's prose,
Sketches, And essays,
And tales, And the like
Without ending, A pending!

But no plenics or concerts, or parties for me,
Such trash upon paper, I never did see.

Then a nice young man, with a cane and mou tache
Who certainly thinks he is getting a dash
Looks over the list of plays and soirees,
As if vainly trying his fancy to please.

In theaters, In races,
Circuses, And dinners,
Operas, In banquets,
Balls, And calls.

And finally, wonders what editors mean
By printing a paper not fit to be seen

Sentimental young lady next picks up the paper,
And reads by the light of a dim burning taper,
And wonders if lines addressed to Miss Rose
Were not written to her by some clever young fellow,
Who's pretty and witty, learned and wise
But she stops in alarm at the "dark hazel eyes!"

For her's are blue,
What a pity "the true"
And now, Mr. Editor,
'Tis all blamed on you.

What speeches, And lectures,
What sermons, And jawing
And news, And clawings
By dispatch, To match.

But no sketches or tales that I can see—
What kind of a man must the editor be?

Next a grave politician who with dignity glows,
Adjusts his gold spectacles over his nose,
Takes a huge pinch of snuff before he proceeds,
Then opens the paper and leisurely reads.

Of bucches, Of Senate,
And speeches, Of House—
And foreign Of railways,
Reports, And courts;

And says as he reads the last column of war,
What a strange kind of people these editors are.
These rhymes and their love-stories to print!
It would do any good, I would give them a hint.

Now a prim old maid the paper espies
And holding it carefully off from her eyes,
And frequently muttering "sir," and "indeed!"
She impinges some way to read very well.

The marriages, The robberies
Accidents, And murders,
Suicides, All in
Deaths, A breath.

And finishing, wonders what sort of a blunder
The whole of the community is under,
To support a paper whose print is so small,
She wonders how some people read it at all

Next, an angry contributor eager for fame
Rushes into the sanctum, to loudly complain—
"I'm ruined, sir, ruined—my success, sir is o'er,
So many mistakes were ne'er heard of before!
Look here at this Sonnet addressed to my Lady
You've made it A Bonnet and Dress for a baby
Don't talk of my writing and say it was this—
You're an editor, sir, but no—not that "

The farmer complains that his crop is neglected,
While so much time is spent in guessing who is elected,
The minister says it should be more sedate,
And not so much wasted in matters of state;
And thousands of other complaints are made known
Which the editor's back has to bear all alone;
But the worst of it is that they all join in saying
Such a paper as this he can print without paying.

—Henry Seaver.

AGRICULTURAL.

Important to Pomologists

An article which appeared in a former number of your excellent paper, intimated that the last of February or forepart of March is the proper time to prune orchards. I think I can convince any person of thought and observation, that this is wrong, almost ruinous, especially to apple trees. When apple trees are pruned before the sap rises in the spring, there are too many roots in proportion to the amount of top; there are not limbs enough to receive the superabundance of sap, and the result is, the production of hundreds of water sprouts on the remaining limbs, and they being of much more luxuriant growth, take away nearly all the support from the fruit bearing limbs, and the result is, towards autumn, the old limbs are covered with moss, fruit small and indifferent, and leaves give indication of premature decay.

To prevent this, and have a thrifty orchard, and good large fruit, prune your trees when the leaves are fully out; and the young apples are as large as a full grown plumb, or when it is too late for tanners to peal bark. By all means wait until the first great rush of sap goes up, and the bark adheres again.

For some years past, in the Western States, the apple fruit has been greatly affected with bitter-rot, especially the grafted fruits The process is somewhat slow to prevent this. An old settler in Wayne county, Indiana, Mr. John Hanwood, has quite an old orchard of seedling fruit, raised from the seed of the most choice grafted fruit. He says the fruit born by these trees, is perfectly free from prevailing disease. He showed me a number of kinds, say golden pippin, Rhode Island greening, and other varieties, perfectly smooth and sound until the first of June, and all put up in the ordinary way. Is it not worth the trial? The difference in size and flavor is scarcely discernable from the graft fruit.

DR. Everson's Great American Remedy for Ague, or Chills and Fever, is the most popular and certain remedy now known. The people and the press speak of it in the highest terms of commendation. It is pleasant to take, does not purge, vomit or sweat, but invigorates the system. It contains no Arsenic, Strichnine, Quinine, or any other poisonous or injurious drug, but it is an originally discovered Antidote to Malaria and as an Ague Either it has no equal. Call and get a circular containing certificates from Professors, Physician, Clergymen and the press.

Almost without number, might here be adduced, from Physicians, Clergymen, officers of State, and private individuals; but the following will suffice?

From our intimate knowledge of Dr. Everson, and the extraordinary virtues of his Ague remedy—being apprized of its constituents, and knowing, as we do, that it contains neither Arsenic, Quinine, Strichnine, Mercury or any poisonous or injurious drugs, we heartily commend it, and also his Family Phisic, or Cathartic Pills, as medicines deserving the approbation of an Intelligent public.

MORE BOUNTY LAND.

THE ACT OF CONGRESS passed March 3d, 1855, gives

160 Acres of Land,

To every Officer, Soldier, Musician, in the Army; or man, Marine, Clerk, or Landsman in the Navy, who served fourteen days, or was in any battle in any war since 1790, or to their widows or minor children—embracing officers and soldiers of

WAYNE'S WAR,
WAR OF 1812,
BLACK HAWK WAR,
PATRIOT WAR,
FLORIDA WAR,

MEXICAN WAR.

ALSO, the Revolutionary Soldiers or their Widows. In cases where 160 acres have been received under former Acts of Congress, no more can be drawn; but those who have been allowed a Warrant for 40 or 80 acres are now entitled to a Warrant for enough more to make up 160 acres.

P.S. We have faithful and experienced Agents in Washington, and we make no charge in any case unless we obtain the land.

Note. The second, third or fourth marriage of a widow, does not impair her claim under this act, if she is a widow at the time of her application.

Persons under the age of 21 years on the 3d of March, 1855, are regarded minors by this act.

Those having claims, will have them promptly attended to by calling on or writing (post paid,) to BILLS & BAXTER, Tecumseh.

AYER'S
CHERRY PECTORAL,
FOR THE RAPID CURE OF
Colds, Coughs, and Hoarseness.

Edgerton, Mass., Nov. 17th, 1855.
DR. J. C. AYER—Sir: I have used your CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for the last twelve months, and have found it the best remedy for Coughs, Hoarseness, Influenza, and the consumptive complaints of children, that I have ever known. Indeed, I have come to rely upon it entirely for the cure of all diseases of the throat and lungs, and feel safe in saying that, in my opinion, it is the best medicine before the people. KIRBY KNIGHT, M. D.

L. B. MOSELEY, Esq., Chicago, Ill., writes: "I have used your CHERRY PECTORAL myself, and in my family for some years, and am satisfied it is the best medicine for its purposes ever offered to the public. Even a bad cold is broken up by twenty-five cents' worth for a bottle, than do without it, or take any other remedy."

Croup, Whooping Cough, Influenza.

STARKSBORO, Miss., Feb. 7, 1856.
BROTHER AYER: I will cheerfully certify you PECTORAL is the best remedy we possess for the cure of Whooping Cough, Croup, and the other diseases of children. We of your fraternity in the South appreciate your skill, and commend your medicine to our people.
HIRAM CONKLIN, M. D.

AMOS LEE, Esq., MONTERY, Ia., writes, 31 Jan., 1856: "I had a tedious Influenza, which confined me in doors six weeks; took many medicines without relief, finally tried your PECTORAL by the advice of our clergyman. The first dose relieved the soreness in my throat and lungs; less than one half the bottle made me completely well. Your medicines are the deepest as well as the best we can buy, and we esteem you, Doctor, and your remedies, as the poor man's friend."

Asthma or Phthisic, and Bronchitis.

WEST MANCHESTER, PA., Feb. 4, 1856.
SIR: Your CHERRY PECTORAL is performing marvellous cures in this section. It has relieved several from alarming symptoms of consumption, and is now curing a man who has labored under an affection of the lungs for the last forty years. HENRY L. PARKS, Merchant.

A. A. RAMSEY, M. D., AMSON, Monroe Co., Iowa, writes, Sept. 6, 1856: "During my practice of many years I have found nothing equal to your CHERRY PECTORAL for giving ease and relief to consumptive patients, or curing such as are curable."

We might add volumes of evidence, but the most convincing proof of the virtues of this remedy is found in its effects upon trial.

Consumption.

Probably no one remedy has ever been known which cured so many and such dangerous cases as this. Scarcely a human aid can reach; but even to these the CHERRY PECTORAL affords relief and comfort.

Aaron Brown, New York City, March 5, 1856
Doctor Ayer: Dear Sir: I feel it a duty and a pleasure to inform you what your CHERRY PECTORAL has done for my wife. She had been five months laboring under the dangerous symptoms of Consumption, from which no aid we could procure gave her much relief. She was steadily failing, until Dr. Strong, of this city, where we have come for advice, recommended a trial of your medicine. We soon had confidence, as we do your skill, for it has recovered her from that day. She is not yet so strong as she used to be, but is free from her cough, and calls herself well.
Yours with gratitude and respect,
ORLANDO SHELBY, of Smithville.

Consumptives, do not despair till you have tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It is made by one of the best medical chemists in the world, and its cures all around us testify the high merits of its virtues.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills.

THE wide area of country over which Ayer's Pills have been used, and the uniform success which has attended their introduction, are the best evidence of their value. Innumerable proofs are shown that these Pills have virtues which surpass in excellence the ordinary medicines, and that they win unprecedentedly upon the esteem of all men. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. Their penetrating properties stimulate the vital activities of the body, remove the obstructions of its organs, purify the blood, and expel disease. They purge out the foul humors which breed and grow distemper, stimulate sluggish or disordered organs into healthy action, and impart healthy tone with strength to the whole system. Not only do they cure the every-day complaints of every body, but also furnish the most powerful antidote for other diseases that has baffled the best of human skill. While they produce powerful effects, they are at the same time so diminished doses, the safest and best physic that can be employed for children. Being sugar-coated, they are pleasant to take, and being purely vegetable, no harm from any use of them. Cures have been made which prostrated the sufferer to all appearance beyond the power of medicine, and which were regarded as incurable by those of such exalted position and character as to forbid the suspicion of untruth. Many eminent clergymen and physicians have lent their aid to certify to the public the reliability of my remedies, which otherwise have only the assurance of their own merits that my Preparations contribute inestimably to the relief of my afflicted, suffering fellow-men.

The Agent below named is pleased to furnish gratis my American Almanac, containing directions for their use and certificates of their cures of the following complaints:—Costiveness, Bilious complaints, Bilious fevers, Dysentery, Heartburn, Headache arising from a foul stomach, Nausea, Indigestion, Want of appetite of the bowels and pain, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Gravel, Ulcerous and Cutaneous diseases which require an evacuant Medicine, Scrofula or King's Evil, Tumors, caused by purifying the blood and stimulating the system, cure many complaints which it would not be supposed they could reach, such as Deafness, Partial Blindness, Hemiralgia and Nervous Irritability, Derangements of the Liver and Kidneys, Gout, and other kindred complaints arising from a low state of the body or obstruction of its functions.

Do not be put off by unprincipled dealers with some other pill they make more profit on, Ask for AYER'S Pills, and take nothing else. No other they can give you compares with this in its intrinsic value or curative powers. The sick want the best and there is for them and they should have it.

EXPRESS!

Tuesday and Friday.

The subscriber has established a semi-weekly of Express between Tecumseh and Adrian, leaving Tecumseh at 8 1-2 o'clock A. M., and Adrian at 4 o'clock P. M. As he runs a good carriage, passengers will find it a pleasant ride, and it gives our citizens a better chance to attend to business than if they went by railroad, as it will give them some six hours time, and then return the same day. He will also do all errands that may be entrusted to him with promptness.

AND
BOOTS & SHOES

With the experience of sixteen years in Cash and credit business, I have come to the conclusion (for reasons too numerous to mention) that the only true system of selling goods is to sell Low for Ready Pay. I now offer goods at better bargains for Cash and Ready Pay than can be found in the State.—Bonnets, Lawns, Molls and Barages at prime NEW YORK COST, to close up the stock. The goods are bought and

MUST BE SOLD.

What I say I mean to do. There is no question but what goods can be sold from 15 to 25 per cent lower for Cash than on long credit. I invite all to call, examine, be convinced, and—buy of course. More next week.

THE NEW SPECIAL

Topographical Map of

Lenawee county, Mich.,

From original surveys and actual measurment throughout the whole county, by Bechler and Wenig, Surveyors and Civil Engineers, Authors of Maps of Allegany, Schoharie, and Broome County, N. Y., and Washtenaw Co., Mich.

The subscribers, who have been engaged in compiling a map of Lenawee County since 14 months, are about to review the whole work in order to correct even the slightest error, if any should have occured. The same time they will obtain subscribers for the enterprise, "which is connected with immense labor and expense."

The Map is about 4×5 feet in size, and contains every public road with all its variations, the localities of Dwellings, places of Worship, Post Offices, and School Houses, Stores, Mills, Shops, &c.; also, section and farm lines with the owner's name engraved to it; Views of Public buildings, Plans of every village in the County on the margin, forming not only a correct and complete, but also an ornamental Map, and will be handsomely colored, mounted and furnished to subscribers for $5 per copy.

BECHLER, WENIG & CO.,
Adrian & Philadelphia

The undersigned having examined Messrs. Bechler & Wenig's Surveys of Lenawee Co., take pleasure in recommending their Map to the citizens of this County, as being in our opinion, a very accurate, reliable and practical Map, and complete County Directory, and well worthy their liberal patronage.—Considering the expense attending its survey procuring so accurately all the names, localities, distances, town plats, farm lines, views, etc., and the limited sale it must necessarily meet with "on account of its being entirely a local work" we think they offer it very reasonable, and have subscribed for the Map

OH!—AH!

Mr. A.—Good morning, Sir! Where have you been this morning so early.

Mr. B.—Oh, look in my carriage and see if you can tell where I have been.

A.—Dear me! that looks like work compared with some I have had done within the last year. Have you had all this work done this morning?

B.—Certainly. He holds himself in readiness at all times, to accommodate those who will pay; he keeps SHOES and NAILS and other Stock on hand. I think he is the best hand at all kinds of work that can be produced in the whole section of country around.

A.—Well, I shall call on him this very morning, for I want to get back to my work this forenoon. Oh! I liked to have forgot to ask you where he has opened his new shop!

B.—It is in the Brick Shop, near Anderson and Brewer's Furnace.

A.—What, right by the Railroad?

B.—Yes.

A.—Don't it scare the horses?

B.—No, not but a very little. Some do not notice it at all. STEARNS & CO.

"There are no Tears in Heaven."

I met a child, his feet were bare,
His weak frame shivered with the cold;
His youthful brow was knit with care,
His flashing eye his sorrow told.
Said I, "Poor boy, why weepest thou?"
"My parents both are dead," he said;
"I have not where to lay my head;
O, I am lone and friendless now."
Not friendless, child; a friend on high—
For you his precious blood was given;
Cheer up and bid each tear be dry—
"There are no tears in heaven."

I saw a man in life's gay noon,
Stand weeping o'er his young bride's bier;
"And must we part," he cried, "so soon?"
As down his cheeks there rolled a tear;
"Heart-stricken one," said I, weep not!"
"Weep not!" in accents wild he cried,
"But yesterday my loved one died;
And shall she be so soon forgot?"
Forgotten? No! still let her love
Sustain thy heart, with anguish riven;
Strive thou to meet thy bride above,
And dry your tears in heaven.

I saw a gentle mother weep,
As to her throbbing heart she press'd
An infant sweetly asleep,
On its kind mother's sheltering breast.
"Fair one," said I, "pray weep no more!"
Sobbed she, "The idol of my hope
I now am called to render up;
My babe has reached deaths gloomy shore."
Young mothers yield no more to grief,
Nor be by passion's tempest driven,
But find in these sweet words relief,
"There are no tears in heaven."

Poor traveler o'er life's troubled wave—
Cast down by grief, o'erwhelmed by care—
There is an arm above can save,
Then yield thou not to fell despair.
Look upward, mourners! look above!
What though the thunders echo loud;
The sun shines bright beyond the cloud!
Then trust to thy Redeemer's love.
Wherever thy lot in life be cast,
Whate'er of toil or woe be given—
Be firm—remember to the last,
"There are no tears in heaven."

TRUTH AND LOVE.

"Well, Ellen, it may be so, but it is ——," and the speaker turned from her companion, unable to say more, and walking hastily away, flung herself down at the foot of an old, moss covered tree, striving so to conceal her emotion from her companion. The other slowly followed, and stood leaning against the trunk of the old tree, gazing at her, as though coolly calculating the amount of agony her words had produced

At last Alice raised her head, and drew back the waving hair from her temples that the soft winds might cool her aching brow, showing a face fair but not beautiful. She was young—scarcely sixteen, and the golden brown hair, that fell in floating curls from her finely shaped head swept over her graceful shoulders and swayed lightly around her tiny form.

For a few moments Ellen stood regarding her with the same searching look, then seating herself beside her, spoke rapidly to her a few words. "No, Ellen, never!" cried her companion, springing to her feet, "No! he may leave me, and forget me, and my heart may break for him, but it shall never be said that Alice Grey deceived any human being."

"But then," plead Ellen earnestly, "if you will only just this once make Allen think you love Frank Moulton, you may succeed, and you know you never will if he thinks your heart is still ready to break for him" Do, Alice, consent for once to put away your foolish scruples, and be a woman."

"Ah, Ellen," said Alice with a half sigh, "if to be a woman one must do as you counsel, and consent to sacrifice truth for love, I fear I shall never be a woman But let us return, it is growing late."—The two girls rose, and drawing the small fair hand of Alice within her own, Ellen strove to persuade her to pursue the course she wished till they reached the outskirts of the village, where Alice entered the neatly kept grounds surrounding a pleasant little cottage, leaving Ellen to pursue her walk alone.

She walked rapidly on through the principal street, and entered a handsome house, nodding familiarly to the servant who opened the door, as she passed up the staircase, and entered a richly furnished room, the private room of Miss Maud Langford. As she entered the room Maud rose from the luxurious easy-chair in which she was reclining, and came eagerly forward as though expecting her. She was a queenly beauty, with a tall, fully rounded figure, her heavy raven hair, her great flashing black eyes, and that small, exquisitely shaped mouth, from which her low, musical voice gushed forth with witching melody.

But now let us take a rapid survey of the characters we have mentioned.

Alice was the daughter of a rich but plain farmer, who having amassed a considerable fortune by industry and economy had spared no pains or expense in educating his daughter.

From her earliest childhood she had been a general favorite, but of all her boyish lovers, none seemed so devoted as Allan Lee, the son of the village pastor. It was he who brought her the first wild flowers in Spring, who sought out and called for her the last lingering blue violets, and it was he who was ever at her side as she skipped home from school, through the dark pine grove, along by the babbling brook, across the green meadow, even to her very door. And so they grew up, till he must leave his native village to complete his studies abroad; and she too must finish her education in some higher institution than the village afforded.

Thus it happened that several years passed without their meeting, and when they did meet again, the laughing school girl had given away to the blushing maiden, and the roguish school boy to the noble man. But while these changes had been wrought in the young playmates, other changes had taken place in the village. A wealthy gentleman, by the name of Langford, had moved into its neighborhood, and disturbed the peaceful quiet of its streets by the sound of the workman's trowel and hammer upon the handsome house he caused to be built in the most conspicuous portion of the village.

Laud Langford, his only child, was very beautiful, and it was not long after Allens return, before rumor was busy talking over his frequent visits to Langford Hall, as the new place was called.

Many a before envious maiden now called on Alice to express her sympathy and to expatiate upon the wealth and beauty of her fortunate rival. Alice heard all in silence, or with quiet politeness and concealed her true feeling within her own heart.

To Maud, also, she was very polite and courteous, but she shrank from the proffered friendship and confidence of the dark eyed beauty, with an inward shudder.—Still Maud pressed it on her, and seemed so frank and loving that the pure minded Alice reproached herself with wronging an innocent heart, and strove to return the love which seemed poured out so profusely on her. How different were the feelings within Maud's heart! She loved Allan with the wild, reckless love of her nature, and having ascertained that Alice was her only possible rival, she had laid a deep plan, and far carried it out as to feel confident of success. She had accidentally heard that Ellen Rivers had once hoped to supplant Alice, and therefore owed her a deep grudge, and working upon this she had succeeded in bringing Ellen over to her plan. Repeatedly did Ellen assail Alice with innocent questions or quiet hints, or friendly advice; but it was not till the walk we have described that she succeeded in forcing her to betray herself. Then following Maud's directions, see endeavored to persuade her to make a last effort to regain Allan's love by receiving the attentions of a young man, who upon all occasions manifested a deep interest in her. Alice's pure nature shrank from the thought, and she retired to her room that night with mingled feelings of sorrow and distress. Meanwhile, Maud and Ellen were busily engaged in talking over their scheme.

There was to be an excursion to a pretty little lake a few miles distant during the ensuing week, and Maud was looking forward to it as the crowning-point of her success, when Allan Lee should take his place as her attendent, instead of his accustomed place by Alice's side. Let us listen for a moment. Maud is speaking.

"How did the little fool take it when when you told her Allan and I wore engaged?"

"O, she believed it, and rather betrayed herself, and then I advised her to try Frank Moulton."

"What did she say to that?"

"Why, she talked most affectingly to me about 'sacrificing truth for love,' but I fear she won't do it."

"Well, well, wait till next Wednesday, and if she does not accept him as an escort when she hears I have got Allan myself."

"But suppose Allan should not invite you to the excursion," suggested Ellen.

"O, there is no danger of that," said the proud beauty with a disdainful toss of her head, "he will be on hand long before the day arrives, but stop! Why should I not make it doubly sure by giving him to understand that Alice has accepted Frank as her escort."

"That would be well," said Ellen, 'but when shall you see him.

"When he comes here to bring that book to-morrow evening, I shall bring it in very quietly, you know."

"O, yes, I know," said Ellen laughing, "I know just how smoothly you do such things; I only wish I might hear you."

"Well, come early to-morrow evening, and we'll fix it so you can," and the two friends separated.

The next morning Ellen was shown into the room in which Maud expected to entertain her visitor, at an early hour.—The room was silent and unoccupied, but in the next appartment she heard Maud giving orders in no very musical tone. Passing through the half opened door with the licence of a familiar friend, she found Maud addressing a pale, meek-looking seamstress, who was employed in fitting a riding dress of the most costly becoming materials.

After a lengthy discussion upon the most fashionable method of trimming the sleeves, the seamstress left, and the friends began to talk upon other matters.

"Have you heard anything about Allans intentions yet?" asked Maud.

"No," said Ellen, "but this afternoon Frank Moulton's sister was speaking about Allan's attentions to you, and she imagined Miss Grey would begin to look more favorably upon her brother, now Allan Lee had deserted her."

"Very likely, think myself;" said Maud with a hateful laugh, "Indeed I think Miss Gray ought to consider herself under obligations to me for leaving her even him. She was very much afraid of me from the first; doubtless she feared I might contaminate her with my wickedness. She is so scrupulous about trifles, it will be a good thing for her to find tha it is sometimes best to "sacrifice truth for love," and the sneer upon her face rendered her handsome features positively ugly

Reader, just look into the parlor!

Seated where he could hear every word sat Allan Lee, listening intently. When the seamstress passed out, he came in at the door, and walked into the parlor, expecting to find Miss Langford, but the sound of voices in the next room arrested his attention, and hearing his own name he listened for the next word, and became too intensely interested to consider his ungallant position.

He had come much earlier than usual, and so the two friends rattled on, thinking they had yet an abundance of time to make their arrangements.

"I know Alice better than you, Nelly" resumed Maud

"I know her better though you have known her longer, and I am convinced that it would be useless to attempt to deceive her in regard to Allan's character, or I would endeavor to persuade her that he was a flirt, but there is no use in attempting it, she won't believe it."

"What a pity!" thought Allan.

"O, well don't let her trouble you, Maud, you are sure of your game now, just stuff Allan a little to night about Frank Moulton, and he will forget her, and that without breaking his heart either, I imagine, and you may rest assured he will never live through next Wednesday without laying it safely at your feet."

Maud laughed complacently, and said without a blush, "I have been thinking over that myself; what would you have for a wedding dress?"

"Black crape," thought Allan, who began to consider how he should extricate himself from his present dishonorable position. After a few moments thought, he rose and walked noiselessly across the carpet into the hall. Here he contrived to slam a door, and stamp his feet, and our two friends rose with a start. 'There he is, I declare," exclaimed Maud. 'Sit here, Ellen, and you can here us without being seen,' and she swept out of the room into the parlor, with her most witching smile and winning tone.

That evening Maud thought Allan extremely interesting, uncommonly witty, pathetic, eloquent—in short everything but what she wanted, for even her broadest hint in regard to the excursion failed to draw forth the desired invitation. He took his leave rather early, and the discomfitted Maud returned to Ellen. 'What can he mean by not inviting me?' said she.

"O, he wants some excuse for coming again," said Ellen soothingly. "Never fear but what all will come out well, I half expected to hear him offer himself to night, he was so evidently on the point of it several times"

"Well, wait till Wednesday," said Maud, with a quiet smile, and the two friends parted.

When Allan heard the door close behind him, he stood for a few moments as if in doubt which way to proceed, and then, turning quietly, exclaimed "I will do it to night," and walked away in the direction of Alice Grey's cottage, with a speed that showed him to be in good earnest. Just as he reached the gate, the bright moon plunged into a small drifting cloud, and left him in darkness, but he laid hand upon the gate with the readiness of an old acquaintance, and passed rapidly up the gravel walk. The old house dog raised himself from his comfortable nap, and came bounding forward to meet him, but he soon recognized him as an old visitor and welcomed him with a friendly barke. Alice sat down in the litle back parlor, her parents being absent on a visit to a sick friend.

She had remained in the same position since they left her, thinking over the past and striving to realize that the bright dream of her girlhood must now be abandoned forever, till the last ray of twilight left her, and she sat in darkness. When she heard Allan's footsteps, accompanied by the dog's friendly bark, she supposed her parents had returned, and hastened to open the door for them without a light.—Opening it, to her utter astonishment, she found herself confronted by a tall manly figure. It bowed without speaking, and she was consicering what to do, when the moon rode out from behind the cloud, and poured a flood of light upon the stranger, revealing the face of Allan Lee.

"Why, Mr. Lee, this is quite an unexpected pleasure," she said pleasantly, and led the way into the room she had left.—While she was procuring a light, Allan was revolving in his mind how he should proceed with the business of his call.—When she had taken her seat opposite to him in a corner of the old fashioned sofa, he led the conversation for some time on light trifling topics, and common place affairs, in which she joined with a calm, quiet grace, when he jumped carelessly, "Are you going to join us in our excursion to Dimple Lake." "I have not yet decided," said Alice.

Another question was waiting to be asked. He looked at her a moment, and then inquired, "Have you accepted Frank Moulton as your escort?"

A quick flush passed over her face, but she quietly answered, "Mr. Moulton has not spoken to me me on the subject at all."

"I hope you will excuse me for asking. I was informed this evening that such was the fact, but as I had good reasons for not believing it, I came to ask to be allowed the pleasure of escorting you myself"

Alice raised her blue eyes to his face with such a reproachful look, but he did not quail beneath it, or seek to avoid it; he only sat gazing back into her eyes, as if he were willing she should read his very heart.

At last he rose, crossed the room, seated himself beside her, and taking one of her small hands in his, said—

"Let me tell you all about it, Alice."

When the gate again opened, at a very late hour in the evening, to admit Farmer Grey and his wife, they were still sitting together in one corner of the old sofa, her hand still in his, but her blue eyes looking into his with an expression so loving, so trusting, as to prove how successfully, if not eloquently, Allan had told her "all about it."

The sound of the gate aroused them, and Alice started to her feet, exclaiming, 'There! Father and Mother are coming already."

It is needless to say that the proud Maud waited in vain for the Wednesday that was to witness her triumph, but perhaps our readers would like to know that there was no gayer, happier heart than Allice Grey's on that bright Wednesday, and that the first roses of the next Spring were woven into the bridal wreath of Alice Grey—now Alice Lee.

INSTABILITY OF THE EARTH.—Not far from Naples, near Puzzuoli, there are parts of the ancient temple of the Egyptian god Serapis still standing; three beautiful columns especially speak of its former splendor. At a considerable hight they present the curious sight of being worm eaten; and recent careful researches leave no doubt that the water of the Mediterranean once covered them so high as to bring these their upper parts within reach of the sea worms. Since then the land has risen high; but, stranger still, they are, by a mysterious force, once more to be submerged Already, the floor of the temple is again covered with water, and a century hence new generations of molluscs may dwell in the same abandoned homes of their fathers, which are now beyond the reach of the highest waves.—Scientific American.

Going Down in the First Car.

One of the passengers who took the terrible plunge into the Des Jardines Canal, in the first car, and was still miraculously preserved, thus describes his sensations:

"I preceived quite a consternation in the cars, passengers running to and fro, apparently much excited. At the same time I felt a strange sensation, as if caused by something impeding the motion of the train. It was not a shock, but at the same time every one seemed to think that something was wrong. As I was not aware of the dangerous character of the place we were approaching, I retained my seat, and advised others to do the same. A slight pause ensued, myself and those sitting with me, remaining still, but anxiously waiting the result, when, with one jerk, we were precipitated into the yawning abyss below. While descending, I retained perfect consciousnes, and felt we were going down some awful precipice; not a voice was heard in the descent.—On reaching the bottom there was one general crash, after which I found myself in total darkness, hemmed in on every side, and crushed almost to suffocation by human bodies and broken seats.—

The blood oozed from my mouth, and seemed that every breath I drew would be my last. The next few minutes were the most awful I ever witnessed—oh! that it may be my lot never to experience the like again. Some prayed, others called upon the saints, others swore fearful oaths, and all writhing in the deepest agony. I can only liken the place to a slaughter house. The blood streamed down over my face and clothes as if some huge beast had been slain above me. In this fearful situation were placed 80 or 90 human beings, who, a few moments before, rejoiced in excellent health and spirts, their minds occupied with worldly care or pleasures,—little thinking they would be so soon called into the presence of their Eternal Judge.

"We remained in the position above described about ten minutes, during which time I spoke to several around me, advising them to be patient and wait for help. The top of the car was then knocked in, giving us light and air, and enabling us to breathe more freely. At this instance a crowbar, or something of the kind, from without, grazed my temple, and the blow was about to be repeated, when, by a sudden effort, I grasped the instrument, and called upon the person holding it to desist or he would kill me. Immediately afterwards, a hand (from the size, I should think it was a woman's) was placed completely over my mouth, so as to nearly suffocate me. With great exertion I removed it, and shortly after, being relieved from the pressure above, I succeeded in dragging myself from the wreck, and reaching the side of the canal, whence I was raised to the top by a chain fastened under my shoulders."

ONLY ONE O'CLOCK.—Mr.——coming home late one night from "meeting," was met at the door by his wife"

"Pretty time of night, Mr.——for you to come home—pretty time, three o'clock in the morning; you, a respectable man in the community, and the father of a family!"

"'Tisn't three—its only one, I heard it strike. Council always sits till one o'clock."

"My soul! Mr.——, you're drunk—as true as I'm alive, you're drunk—it's three in the morning."

"I say Mrs.——, its one. I heard it strike one, as I came round the corner, two or three times!"

Brown went to bed then.

The question of the location of the seat of Goverment of Minnesota has been brought before the Attorney General at Warshington, through an application from the Marshal of the Territory. The Territorial Attorney General has ruled that the act removing the capital to St. Peter,s conflicts with the origanic law of the Territory and is therefore, of no effect. Hence the appeal.

For the Tecumseh Herald.

Onward, Upward.

Onward, upward, soul of mine,
Sit not idly down and pine.
Earth goes onward to fulfill
High behest of maker's will;
Streams flow onward to the sea,
Time speeds to eternity,—
Sun is ever moving on,
Giving light and hope to some
Flowers with closing eyes looking up,
Trembling lingering dews each cup,
Tree-tops gazing toward the sky,
Song-birds on their way by,
Jealous forest keeping step
Rising from dense fulness pure,
Ocean's anthem hurtles free
On, and up, resistlessly;
Air, and sky, and sea, and earth
Bid thee, soul, be soul be something worth.
Onward, upward, souls of ours,
Constant speed the hasting hours,
Years move on with painted wing
Summer, Autumn, Winter Spring,
Each a soul that calls its bard,
Surely for the promise heed—
Up, and on—there's work to do.
Angel hearts might envy you—
Up ye laggards, seek to save
Cry from every passing wave—
Strive with weary, tempted feet,
Light's unfailing, unto bless'd—
Souls of men yet suffering wrong
Cry unbreaten, O, God, how long!
Broken hearts are breaking still
Moaning 'neath oppression's will.
Brothers spill a brother's blood
Earth is drunk with crimson flood.
Millions starve for Bread of Life—
While we wage unwearied strife
For a pile of senseless gold—
Souls to death are growing cold—
Brothers, on a crown to win,
Golden gate to enter in,
Harp new-strung to song of Love,
Robe of purity above,
Rose, as sweet as Seraph's song,
Friends among an angel throng
King once crowned with thorns of hate
Shining now neath glory's weight,
Only law of love to obey,
Night turned to eternal day,
Robed and crowned, anointed we
Kings and Priests of Christ to be.
Shall we Brothers, strife for these?
Or like one who coward flees
From the war-plain, and sits down
Nothing striving for his crown
Slumbereth till the day is dead
And his cogard crouching head
Sinks in night's unwaking gloom
Without hope or light or bloom!
Never, while a spark of God
Glows above earth's trembling sod—
Never, He who made forbid—
He who made and spares amid
Sin and danger—souls accurse.
Ghosts of sin unbidd'n to a
Haunt this dominion—to be laid
But by power of love obeyed—
Let us struggle for the Prize
Proffered from the starry skies.

A Bear Adventure.— A few weeks ago, Thomas Evans, of Chest Creek, Clearfield County, Pa., while out on a hunting excursion, observed a ledge of rocks, which his experienced eye detected as being the haunt of a bear. It being late in the evening, he went home, but returned the next morning, accompanied by his brother. They soon found a narrow passage between the rocks that led into a dark and dismal cave. On arriving at the mouth of the cavern, Thomas, after throwing down his gun and divesting himself of his hunting accoutrements, crawled in through the narrow entrence, and, after grouping about in the dark for some time, had the pleasure of laying his hand upon Bruin's back. Having ascertained the position of the animal, he returned to the cave, and got his gun, then went back into the cavern to visit his new acquaintance, while his brother remained outside to act as sentry, providing the animal attempted to escape.— Having come to the bear again, he placed the muzzle of the gun against the animal and fired. A furious growl from the beast accompanied the report of the gun, and young Evans hurried out of the cave as soon as possible.— He, however, put another load into his gun and scrambled back into the cave again. This time he succeeded in putting a ball through the vital part of the animal's body. It was dragged out and weighed over three hundred pounds. Young Tom in this engagement, displayed almost as much courage as young Putman did in his adventure with the wolf.

☞ There is nothing in the whole list of medicine creating such a stir among invalids as Dr. Sanford's Invigorator or liver remedy. It gives such quick relief as to convince the patient of receiving benefit almost as soon as the medicine is taken. We do not know of a single instance where it has been taken without benefit, and in nearly all cases a complete cure is effected by its use. It has acquired its wide popularity simply because it does what it is recommended to do. Fillibusterism in Nicaragua.

The career of William Walker, in Nicaragua seems to be near its close. We are glad of this, and will not pretend to deny, that it seems to us only a just retribution for the continuous course of oppression, outrage and wrong, which almost from the first, he has continued to impose upon that ignorant, and unhappy people. But not only has he been guilty of outrage and violence towards the natives, taking advantage of a restless spirit of unscrupulous enterprise on the part of a portion of the American population, he has by false and fraudulent pretenses allured to almost certain graves, ship load after ship load of unsuspecting American citizens.

There has been at times a disposition to complain of our federal authorities for attempting to interrupt this tide of quasi military emigration, but for our part if we had any complaint to make, it would be, that knowing the great deception and wrong imposed upon these misguided, and uninformed victims of a criminal ambition they have not interfered more efficiently and preremptorily to arrest it.

The law of nations should interfere to arrest and punish any such flagrant attempt at wholesale piracy and buccaneering, even though it may be upon a helpless and semi-barbarous neighbor, for every legitimate government has a right to feel that such a wrong done to any nation no matter how feeble, is a wrong alike to the whole brotherhood of nations, and that when once permitted with impunity, a consciousness of strength successfully to resist, is ever after their only security against a like attack upon themselves.

Walkers first attempt upon lower California, was of a like character, and should have subjected him to the extreme penalty of law as soon as he should again come within the pale of civilized society, but this was innocence itself, compared with the high crimes that have marked his course for the past few months.

*There seems however to be now but little pro spect that he will be able to es*cape from the hordes of Costa Ricans that surround him, to cut off his retreat, and we confess that looking upon him, and the misery and crime already involved in his career as we do, we should hear of his escape with regret.

His attempt to secure Southern sympathy by repealing the laws against slavery in Nicaragua was very well calculated to succeed, and in fact has to a certain extent done so, but it was too late.

Another thing has also been pretty thoroughly demonstrated by this enterprise, and that is that such is the climate of most of the country there, that it must ever prove to be a land of graves, to almost any northern colonization, whether accompanied by slaves or not, so that a diversion in this direction, while it must necessarily weaken the forces of slavery at the north, would scarcely secure to it any permanent foothold there.

The intention however we suppose, to have been, to legalize the importation of slaves there, and thus make it a sort of factory for the supply of the south, but it will be a long time before any government either upon the isthmus, or further south will be able to stand aginst the purpose of the civilized nations of the world to hold and to punish such a traffic as piracy upon the high seas.

Obtaining Goods Under False Pretenses.

Moses Bateman, a well known and extensive dry-goods importer, doing business in Liberty Street was arrested on Monday last and taken before Justice Davies, of the Supreme Court on a charge of committing extensive frauds upon his creditors. The complaint was made by Messrs. Mitchell & Pott, importers at No 56 Broadway, who alleged that Bateman obtained upwards of $90,000 worth of goods on time, within the past three months, for which he never intended to pay, and that he disposed of these goods to parties at a price below that for which he agreed to pay for them himself; and that some of them he forwarded in the original packages to Philadelphia, where they were sold at auction at prices much less than their original cost.

It is further charged that the defendant caused fictitious entries of sales to be made in his books, with a view to deceive, and that on the 26th of March he removed from his shelves between 8 and $9,000 worth of goods, and hid the same in a hardware store. All these things, it appears, he did with a view to failing and defrauding his creditors. This intention, it is charged, he more than once averred to a certain party whom also he detailed his plans of proceeding.

The accused was ordered by the Justice to find bail, to appear, in the sum of $50000, and failing to do this, he was committed to Eldridge street jail, where he remained over night. Next day Messrs Hernheimer, Brothers, furnished the necessary security, and he was thereupon liberated. An injunction was granted, restraining him from removing or disposing of, in any way, such of the stock as yet remains in his store.

Bateman, it appears, is indebted to Mitchell & Pott in the sum of $31,000 and largely also to Bowen & McNamee, and other firms. He has heretofore stood well with business men. The whole affair has greatly exercised the dry goods importers.

The Dalton Divorce.

This case will probably come up in the Supreme Judicial Court to-morrow morning. It is the suit of B Franklin Dalton, for a divorce from his wife, on the ground of adultery. And now we shall have another chapter in that serious drama which commenced with flirtation and ended in blood and the grave. The community are doubtless familiar with the details of the tragedy; of the arrest of Coburn and Dalton for chastising Porter Sumner, on the suspicion of undue familiarity with their wives; of the death of Sumner; of the trial of Coburn and Dalton, and their condemnation to the common jail. Their terms of imprisonment having expired some time since, of course they are both at liberty. Mr. Coburn reconciled matters with his wife, forgave her indiscretions, if any, and both are now living together, we trust happily. Mr Dalton, on his release from confinement, commenced a suit for divorce from his wife, whether on the grounds of her criminality with either of the parties punished or other persons, we are not informed; but at any rate, there is the suit. We learn that Mrs Dalton does not object to a separation, but to the cause which her husband alleges as entitling him to a divorce. She is willing to separate, but would save herself and her friends the unpleasantness of a trial, in which the most trivial and unmeaning incidents of a rather gay and girlish life may be magnified into something unwarranted and unjust. Mr. Dalton presists in having the trial and in exposing to the public gaze the frivolities, or if it be a better term in his view, the frailties of his wife—to present to vulgar eyes the horrid picture of his own disgrace, if she be guilty, and if not, of his complication in an effort to blast the reputation of a being he had sworn to protect.—Boston Times.

Singular Incident.—An instance of the peculiar reverses liable to traders, is afforded by the recent experience of a large establishment in this city. During the past season this house shipped a quantity of goods to a South American market at what was generally deemed a hazardous venture. A few weeks since, owing to the depression of trade, the firm was compelled to stop payment and the street said it was a bad failure. While they were looking over their affairs, letters were received in the city from the consignee of the goods in South America, stating he had favorably disposed of the consignment, and invested the proceeds in skins, &c, which were then being shipped, and on which insurance was desired to be effected. The firm, to their surprise and gratification, have found that the rise in this description of imports, has been so great since the period of shipment that on the safe arrival of the vessel, they will be enabled to pay off their liabilities, and possibly have a little something over, in the way of surplus.

New York, April 16th

The steamship Tennessee arrived this morning from Aspinwall on the P M of April 4th, landed her passengers and left for San Juan on the same evening.

Col. Lockridge advanced to Castillo on March 18th, with 400 men on board the steamer S N. Scott and Rescue. He found the enemy who were 500 strong, had fortified Nelson's Hill 25 yards in the rear of the Castle with strong breast works of ditches and several large guns. He returned without making an attack and destroyed all the fortifications below Castello, having abandoned all hope of the river.

He disbanded the battalions of recruits, and subsequently formed a new one who were willing to go to Walker via Panama.

The boiler of the steamer S S N. Scott exploded near Serapiqui during the retreat, killing and wounding about 60 officers and men.

The Tennessee brought away all that were able to be removed.

Col. Lockridge still remains up the river with his forces, and is very well supplied with provisions.

Scratcher, as alleged, has been endeavoring to obtain money from various parties to carry out this object. The affair, which is involved in considerable mystery, is to be further investigated.

The Tragedy at Louisville.

The telegraph has already mentioned that Thomas Travers had been arrested at Louisville, Ky., charged with the murder of his wife, Mary Travers, on Thursday night last. The Courier states that Travers had been intoxicated for several days, and that the neighbors heard him when he came home about 12 o'clock at night.

It then proceeds: They heard no unusual noise in the room during the night, and in the morning their curiosity was first aroused by the unusual stillness that prevailed in the room. As the day wore away suspicion was aroused, and about noon a hole was punched through the partition wall, and the man and wife appeared to be asleep on the bed. They were called, and the man replied, saying that his wife had gone out to attend to some sewing. This was known to be false and information was conveyed to the police of the suspicion that some foul play had been enacted, as the unfortunate woman had previously told her neighbors that her husband had threatened her life. The door was burst open by the officers, when a horrid sight was revealed. The unfortunate woman was found dead in her bed, a mass of gore.

The man, all covered with blood, had been lying quietly beside his murdered wife, apparently sleeping, until disturbed by the police. Like an infuriated beast he aroused himself from his lair, and seizing a razor-that lay beside his bed made a desperate effort to cut his own throat. He was seized, and though struggling desperately was overcome and his hands tied. He at once admitted that he had committed the murder, and that he had done it for reasons best known to himself. He said he killed her about four o'clock in the morning. The body was yet warm, though life was extinct. The bed and bed clothes were completely saturated with blood. On an examination it appeared that she had received two stabs, one in the right breast, severing the lungs, and the other on the left side, glancing from the shoulder blade. The wound on the right side was mortal.

Travers is an awning maker by trade, and had been married but eight months to his wife. She was a young woman, not over 24 years of age, and said to be very prepossessing in appearance. Every thing in the room bore traces of neatness and careful house-keeping, as far as she was concerned, but on the table near the bed was a bottle of liquor half-drained of its contents. This fact reveals at least one incentive to the horrid murder, as it would be but charitable to suppose the man partially insane from drink, or how could he commit such a deed? The instrument of death, a large pocket knife, was found in his possession. He was lodged in jail, and will be arraigned for murder.

A Washing Fluid.

The "washing fluid" sold for 12 and 25 cents—according to their size in stores is an erior to borax for washing purposes. A gallon of it can be manufactured for four cents. Take one pound of common sal soda and dissolve it in half a gallon of warm soft water, then stir into a seperate vessel containing half a gallon of soft water half a pound of fresh slacked lime, and allow it to settle for fifteen minutes.—Now pour off the clear lime water into the vessel containing the dissolved soda; stir all up and allow it to settle; the clear liquor so formed is the famous washing fluid. Common sal soda containes carbonic acid; the lime has a greater affinity for it than the soda has, therefore the acid unites with the lime, forming solid, fine white chalk which falls to the bottom, leaving a clear, caustic lye, capable of uniting with grease and oil in cloth rendering them soluble in water. This washing fluid must be used very sparingly in washing, because, if used in excess, it eats the skin of the hands, rendering it very thin and tender. This washing fluid forms the basis of all the labor saving soap recipes hawked about the country for sale. About a quart of this fluid mixed with five gallons of rain water, is an excellent liquid in which to boil unbleached cotton cloths for two hours, prior to putting them out on the grass to bleach. The cloth should be rinsed in soft water before laying it down on the grass.

This simple process, by assisting to remove the natural oil from the cloth, greatly facilitates the bleaching process.

This information will be very useful to many persons living in the country because it is applicable to the bleaching of both home made linen and cotton cloth.—Scientific American.

A Man in the Rapids of Niagara! His Rescue!—Yesterday morning a man named E. C. Taylor, a resident of West Winfield, Herkimer County, descended the bank near the Suspension Bridge, probably for the purpose of viewing the bridge. On reaching the bottom, he slipped, and fell into the water, just above the bridge, and when discovered was thirty or forty rods below the bridge, near the shore, rolling over and over, borne along by the restless current, until he caught hold of a large rock, and after some fruitless struggles succeeded in reaching the top. The alarm was immediately given in the neighborhood, and it was soon decided there was no way of reaching him but by means of a rope ladder. This was immediately procured, and the man was in due time rescued, after having climed up the ladder which was three hundred feet long.

The excited multitude bore him on their shoulders when he reached the top.—Roch. Dem.

☞ The monotony of college life at Havard University has recently been interrupted by the expultion of one of the students. It appears that a student of divinity, professing to be a spiritual medium and who had succeeded in duping large "circles" in this city and the neighboring towns, ventured to invite several members of the faculty to witness his surprising feats which is said to have surpassed any similar performance of the kind. At this sitting, however, his career was suddenly checked by the discovery made by a professor of the Scientific School, that the tables were moved and the music of the spirits produced by a trick of his feet. A meeting of the faculty has been convened, and the matter thoroughly investigated, which has resulted in the expulsion of the delinquent, who has hitherto sustained an unblemished reputation among his fellow students who mainly believe him to be self-deceived.—Boston Journal.

Mrs. Emma Rowcroft, aged 42 of St. Paul's, Minnesota Territory, suffered severely from a radical attacks of erysipelas in the face, to which she appeared to have a constitutional predisposition. In July last she had a return of the complaint, with unusually violent and dangerous symtoms, and under the advice of a friend from New York, obtained a lot of Holloway's Ointment, and applied it according to directions. The result amazed as well as delighted the unfortunate sufferer and her family. The inflammatory symptoms subsided; the redness faded in the course of a few days to a yellowish hew, and the cuticle, or scarf skin, on the parts affected, came off in the form of a whitish scurf. A second box completed the cure, leaving neither scar nor blemish on the face. The pills are as efficacious in subduing internal disease, as the Ointment is in removing all external disorders.

OH!--AH!

Mr. A.—Good morning, Sir! Where have you been this morning so early

Mr. B.—Oh, look in my carriage and see if you can tell where I have been.

Mr. A.—Dear me! what looks like work completed with some I have had done within the last year. Have you had all this work done this morning?

Mr. B.—Certainly. He holds himself in readiness at all times, to accommodate those who pay; he keeps SHOES and NAILS and Leather Stock on hand. I think he is the best hand at all kinds of work that can be produced in the whole section of country around.

Mr. A.—Well, I shall call on him this very morning, for I want to get back to my work this forenoon. Oh! I liked to have forgot to ask you where he has opened his new shop?

Mr. B.—It is in the Brick Shop near Anderson and Brewer's Furnace.

Mr. A.—What, right by the Railroad?

Mr. B.—Yes.

Mr. A.—Don't it scare the horses?

Mr. B.—No, not but a very little. Some do not notice it at all. STEARNS & CO.

No Family

Can afford to be without Mustang Liniment in their house. The many accidents we are liable to, may render it necessary any moment, and nothing is capable of performing such a certain cure. (Extract.) "In lifting the kettle from the fire it caught and scalded my hands and person severely—one hand almost to a crisp. The torture was unbearable. It was an awful sight. * * * The Mustang Liniment appeared to extract the pain almost immediately. It healed rapidly and left no scar of account. Chas. Foster, 429 Broad street, Philadelphia." It is truly a wonderful article. It will cure any case of swelling, burns, stiff joints, Eruptions, or rheumatism. For Horses it should never be dispensed with. One Dollar's worth of Mustang has frequently saved a valuable horse. It cures galls, sprains, Ringbone, spavin and founders. Beware of imitations. Sold in all parts of the habitable globe.

A MEDICAL REVOLUTION. THE WORLD UNANIMOUS.

Holloway's Ointment.

—OR—

THE GREAT COUNTER IRRITANT.

The virus of disease often makes its way to the internal organs through the pores of the skin. This penetrating Ointment, melting under the hand as it is rubbed in, is absorbed through the same channels, and, reaching the seat of inflamation promptly and invariably subdues it, whether located in the kidneys, the liver, the lungs, or any other important organ. It penetrates the surface of the interior, through the countless tubes that communicate with the skin as summer rain passes into the fevered earth, diffusing its cool and regenerating influence.

Skin Diseases and Glandular Swellings.

Every species of exterior irritation is quickly reduced by the anti-inflammatory action of this Ointment. Angry eruptions, such as Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Tetter, Ringworm, Scald head, Nettle Rash, Scabies (or Itch), &c., die out, to return no more, under its application. Hospital experience in all parts of the world proves its infallibility in diseases of the skin, the muscles, the joints and the glands.

ULCERS, SORES & TUMORS.

The effect of this unrivaled external remedy upon scrofula, and other virulent ulcers and sores, is almost Miraculous. It first discharges the poison which produces inflamation and proud flesh, and thus the cures which its healing properties afterward complete are safe as well as permanent.

Wounds, Bruises, Burns and Scalds.

In cases of the fracture of the bones, injuries caused by steam explosions, bruises, burns, scalds, rheumatism, stiffness of the joints, and contraction of the sinews, it is employed and warmly recommended by the faculty. This marvelous remedy has been introduced by its inventor in person into all the leading hospitals of Europe, and no private household should be without it.

UNDENIABLE TESTIMONY.

The medical staff of the French and English Armies in the Crimea, have officially signed their approval of Holloway's Ointment, as the most reliable dressing for sabre cuts, stabs, and gun-shot wounds. It is also used by the surgeons of the Allied Navies.

Both the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following cases.

Bunions	Lumbago	Sore Legs	Swelled Glands
Burns	Mercurial	Sore Breasts	Stiff Joints
Chapped Hands	Erysipelas	Sore Heads	Ulcers
Chilblains	Piles	Sore Throats	Venereal Sores
Coco Bay	Rheumatism	Sores of all Kinds	Wounds of all kinds
Corns	Salt Rheum	Scalds

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee ss. At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office in the city of Adrian, on Monday the 30th day of March, in the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-seven.

Present, Fernando C. Beaman, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of George W. Miller, deceased. On reading and filing the petition duly verified, of Sarah J. Miller widow of deceased, praying for the appointment of Flavius J. Hough, as administrator on the estate of said deceased, for reasons therein set forth.

Thereupon it is ordered, That Monday, the 27th day of April next at one o'clock in the afternoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs at law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court, there to be holden at the Probate Office in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Tecumseh Herald, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

HEALTH OR SICKNESS. CHOOSE BETWEEN THEM.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

The blood purified, the motions of every muscle, gland and fluid in the human frame. When pure, it secures health to every organ. When corrupt, it necessarily produces disease. Holloway's Pills operate directly upon the elements of the stream of life, neutralizing the principle of disease, and thus radically curing them. Any lady, whether located in the nerves, the stomach, the liver, the bowels, the muscles, the skin, the brain, or any other part of the system.

USED THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

Holloway's Pills are equally efficacious in complaints common to the whole human race, and in disorders peculiar to certain climates and localities.

AGAINST ALL DISORDERS.

Dyspepsia and derangement of the liver, the source of infirmity and suffering and the cause of innumerable deaths, yield to these curatives in ill cases. Inveterate ulcers, which have defied all other remedies, are rapidly healed by the use of this searching ointment. Even the most aggravated setting as a mild purgative alterative and tonic, they relieve the bowels, purify the fluids, and invigorate the system and the constitution at the same time.

General Weakness—Nervous Complaints.

When all stimulants fail, the renovating and healing properties of these Pills give firmness to the shaking nerves and enfeebled muscles of the victim of general debility.

DELICATE FEMALES.

All irregularities and ailments incident to the delicate and sensitive organs of the sex are removed or prevented by a few doses of these mild but infallible alternatives. No mother who regards her own or her children's health should fail to have them within her reach.

Scientific Endorsements.

The London "Lancet" the London "Medical Review," and the most eminent of the faculty in Great Britain, France and Germany, have eulogized the Pills and their inventor.

Holloway's Pills are the best remedy known in the World for the following Diseases

Asthma.	Diarrhœa	Inflamation	Stone and
Bowel Com- plaints	Dropsy	Inward wks	Gravel
Coughs	Debility	Jaundice	Secondary
Colds	Fever	Liver Com-	Symptoms
Chest Diseases	Female Com- plaints	Low nerves	Venereal affections
Costiveness	Headaches	Spirits	Worms of all Kinds
Dysepsia	Indigestion	Piles

ONLY ONE BOTTLE OF

DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR, OR LIVER REMEDY.

IS Required to cure any one head with Liver complaints unless the most desperate of cases, and the Second bottle will, with scarcely a single failure, restore the patient to health and vigor. We wish to call the attention of all to these facts, that the Invigorator is compounded by a physician who has used it in his practice for the past twenty years with a success almost unprecedented, and that it is entirely vegetable being composed wholly of gums.

Some idea of the strength of these gums may be formed when it is known one bottle of the Invigorator contains as much strength as one hundred doses of Calomel without any of its deleterious effects.

One bottle is the surest thing known to carry away the bad effects of mineral poison of any kind.

Only one bottle is needed to throw out of the system the effects of medicine after a long sickness.

One bottle taken for Jaundice removes all yellowness or unnatural color from the skin.

One dose after eating is sufficient to relieve the stomach and prevent the food from rising and souring.

Only one dose taken before retiring prevents nightmare.

One dose taken at night loosens the bowels gently and cures costiveness.

One dose taken after each meal will cure Dyspepsia.

One dose of two tea spoonfuls will always relieve the Sick Headache.

One bottle taken for female obstruction removes the cause of the disease and makes a perfect cure.

Only one dose immediately relieves Colic, while One dose often repeated is a sure cure for Cholera Morbus and a sure preventative of Cholera.

One dose taken off in mid present the recurrence of bilious attacks, while it relieves all painful feelings.

☞ One or two doses taken occasionally is one of the best remedies for a cold ever known.

Thousands of cases of inflamation, sickness and weakness of the lungs, have been cured by the Invigorator.

One dose taken a short time before eating gives vigor to the appetite and makes food digest well.

One dose often repeated cures Chronic Diarrhœa in its worst forms, while summer and bowel complaints yield almost to the first dose.

One or two doses cure attacks caused by worms, while for worms in children there is no surer, safer and speedier remedy in the world as it never fails.

There is no exaggeration in these statements they are plain and sober facts, that we can give evidence to prove while all who use it are giving their unanimous testimony in its favor.

We wish all who are sick and debilitated to try this remedy and test it thoroughly and any who are not benefited by its use we should like to hear from as we have yet to hear from the first person who has used a bottle of invigorator without receiving benefit, for there are such astonishing medicinal virtues to it, that all, no matter how long they have been affected, if their complaint arises from a deranged liver, will be benefited, if not entirely cured.

Rx AYER'S Cathartic Pills,

(SUGAR COATED,)

ARE NOW SO

CLEANSE THE BLOOD AND CURE THE SICK

Invalids, Fathers, Mothers, Physicians, Philanthropists, read these LETTERS, and judge of their Virtues.

SEE THE CURE OF

Headache, Sick Headache, Foul Stomach.

DR. J. C. AYER: Sir: I have used your Pills in my practice, and in the family, for years, and believe them the best cathartic we employ. Their regulating action on the liver is quick and decisive, and by this they cleanse the blood, and remove many complaints, which, if left to themselves, would become serious. I feel that I am only doing justice to your Pills, when I say they are the best cathartic we employ.

Yours with great respect, W. W. FREER, M. D.
Clerk of Common Council.

Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 1, 1855.

SIR: I have used your Pills in my family and in my practice, ever since you made them, and cannot hesitate to say they are the best cathartic we employ. Their regulating action on the liver is quick and decisive, and by this they cleanse the blood, and remove many complaints, which, if left to themselves, would become serious. Indeed, I have seldom found a case of bilious disease so obstinate that it did not readily yield to them.

Fraternally yours, ALONZO HALL, M. D.,
Physician of the Marine Hospital

Dysentery, Relax, and Worms.

POST OFFICE, HAMELAND, LIV. CO., MICH., Nov. 16, 1855.

DR. AYER: Your Pills are the perfection of vegetable physic. They have done my wife more good than I can tell you. She had been sick and pining away for months. Went off to be doctored at great expense, but got no better. She then commenced taking your Pills, which soon cured her, by expelling large quantities of worms (dead) from her body. They afterwards cured her and our two children of bloody dysentery. One of our neighbors had it bad, and my wife cured him with two doses of your Pills, while others around us paid from five to twenty dollars doctors' bills, and lost much time, without being cured entirely even then. Such a medicine as yours, which is actually good and honest, will be prized here.

GEO. J. GRIFFIN, Postmaster.

Indigestion and Impurity of the Blood

From Rev. J. V. Himes, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.

DR. AYER: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to visit in distress. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood they are the very best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends. Yours, J. V. HIMES.

WARSAW, Wyoming Co., N. Y., Oct. 24, 1855.

DEAR SIR: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system, and purify the fountains of the blood.

JOHN G. MEACHAM, M. D.

Erysipelas, Scrofula, King's Evil, Tetter, Tumors, and Salt Rheum.

From the Rev. Dr. Hinds, of the Methodist Ep. Church.

PLEASANT HOUSE, SAVANNAH, GA., Jan. 5, 1856.

HONORED SIR: I should be negligent if for the relief your skill has brought me if I did not report my case to you. A cold settled in my hands and brought on excruciating neuralgic pains, which ended in chronic rheumatism. Notwithstanding I had the best of physicians, the disease grew worse and worse, until by the advice of your excellent agents in Petersburg, Dr. Buckingle, I tried your Pills. Their effects were slow, but sure. To persevering in the use of them I am now entirely well.

SEVERN CRAWFIS, Ruling Elder Meth. Ep. Ch. South.

DR. AYER: I have been entirely cured by your Pills of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease that I had afflicted me for years. VINCENT SCOLLY.

For Dropsy, Plethora, or Kindred Complaints, requiring an active purge, they are an excellent remedy.

For Costiveness or Constipation, and as a Dinner Pill, they are agreeable and effectual.

Fits, Suppression, Paralysis, Inflammation, and even Deafness, and Partial Blindness, have been cured by the alterative action of these Pills.

Most of the pills in market contain Mercury, which, although a valuable remedy in skilful hands, is dangerous in a public pill, from the dreadful consequences that frequently follow its incautious use. These contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

and for the relief of consumptive patients in advanced stages of the disease.

We need not speak to the public of its virtues. Throughout every State and almost every hamlet of the American States, its wonderful cures of pulmonary complaints have made it already known. Nay, few are the families in any civilized country in the world that are without some personal experience of its effects. So far, yet the communities are where which have not among them some living trophy of its victory over the subtle and dangerous diseases of the throat and lungs. While it is the most powerful antidote yet known to man for the formidable and dangerous diseases of the pulmonary organs, it is also the pleasantest and safest remedy that can be employed for infants and young persons. Parents should have it in store against the insidious attacks that steals upon them unprepared. We have abundant grounds to believe the Cherry Pectoral saves more lives by the consumptions it prevents than disease it cures. Keep it by you and cure your colds while they are curable, for neglect them until no human skill can master the inexorable canker that, fastened on the vitals, sets even life away. All know the dreadful fatality of lung disorders, and as they know, for the victims of this remedy so rarely need more than to assure themselves it still made the relief it can be. We spare no cost, no care, no toil to produce it the most perfect possible, and thus afford those who rely on it the best agent which human skill can furnish for their cure.

WAYNE'S WAR,
WAR OF 1812,
BLACK HAWK WAR,
PATRIOT WAR,
FLORIDA WAR,
AROOSTOOK WAR,
MEXICAN WAR.

ALSO—the Revolutionary Soldiers or their Widows. In cases where 160 acres have been received under former Acts of Congress, no more can be drawn; but those who have been allowed a Warrant for 40 or 80 acres are now entitled to a Warrant for enough more to make up 160 acres.

N. B. We have faithful and experienced Agents in Washington, and we make no charge in any case unless we obtain the land.

☞ The second, third or fourth marriage of a widow, does not impair her claim under this act, if she is a widow at the time of her application.

Persons under the age of 21 years on the 3d of March, 1855, are regarded minors by this act.

Those having claims, will have them promptly attended to by calling on or writing (post paid) to BILLS & BAXTER, Tecumseh.

FOR SALE CHEAP.

The beautiful Cottage residence, belonging to the subscriber, upon Chicago street in the village of Tecumseh, owing to a change in my business arrangements, I am now prepared to dispose of, upon terms that cannot fail to be satisfactory to any one desiring to purchase. The building and grounds have recently been put into thorough repair, making it one of the most beautiful and desirable residences to be found in this beautiful village; and by those acquainted with Tecumseh, situated as it is upon the River Raisin, and the Jackson Branch of the Mich. S. R. R., with its fine natural and healthful location, its excellent water, its schools and churches, it is admitted to be one of the most desirable points of village residence in the West. For terms apply to Messrs. Bills and Baxter, at their office in the village of Tecumseh. A. S. ERION.

AGRICULTURAL.

Eggs for Hatching.

It is not certainly known how long the vitality of eggs will last. We have had those of healthy young hens hatched that were twenty-eight days old before they were set. But the chickens were feeble, and they all died before they were three months old. There is reason to conclude that an egg remains pretty nearly perfect for two weeks after it is laid if it be properly kept, and that after that time it depreciates rapidly, unless put under a hen. It is, therefore, best to set the freshest eggs you can get.

All the talk about dark-colored eggs producing dark colored chickens, long eggs producing male birds, and roundish eggs female birds, is innocent little nonsense, which makers of poultry books ought to be ashamed of. It will perhaps be found that, as a general rule, black hens lay the whitest eggs, (look at the black Spanish, for instance,) and that a hen nearly always lays the same shaped egg, one day with another. There is however, no, unchangeable rule about it: we have a perfectly black game hen, which, for two years after she began to lay, produced a round, glossy white egg, but now lays a large, long yellowish egg, without any gloss.

The best way to preserve eggs for hatching, is, to have a box of wheat bran: stand the eggs on the small end, a layer of eggs and a layer of bran, till the box is full. Be careful not to shake them much, nor crack them. It is a very bad plan to put them in a drawer, where they will roll about every time the drawer is opened.

It is as unwise to make a summer nest to warm as to make a winter nest too cold. In hot weather, never put a sitting hen where the sun can touch her, or where the heat would be oppressive to yourself. And do not allow her to make choice of such a place, or of a place that is liable to get wet. The instincts of domestic fowls have been so much interfered with, that they are not always wise about such things, as wild birds are.

As to the food of the young brood, let them have anything which is not absolutely poisonous. Sloppy matters are better avoided till the little things are old enough to eat a few grains of good wheat of the best sample, which will then not be thrown away upon them. Meat and insect diet are almost necessary; but raw vegetables chopped small, or Indian meal dough containing no salt, so grateful to young turkeys, are caviare to chickens. But whatever be the bill of fare, the meals must be given at short intervals; as much as they can swallow, as often as they can eat. The reader will please remember that when she sees [illegible] that was expected of her [illegible] be good natured. The [illegible] her long clothes cut at [illegible] nor to elaborate pinafores [illegible] soaked biscuit, but for [illegible] chickens, the only known baby-linen warehouse is situated in their own stomachs. And with all their industry, they scarcely half clad, till flesh and blood stop growing for awhile, and allow down and feathers to overtake them.—Hens Circle.

SALT FOR SHEEP.—The first thing the shepherd in Spain does when his flocks return from the south, the summer downs, or pastures, is to give them as much salt as they will eat. Every owner allows to each thousand sheep, two thousand five hundred lbs. of salt, which they consume in about five months. They eat none in their journeys, nor are they allowed any in winter, as it is thought to produce abortion when given to ewes forward with young. This has been the custom, and it is thought to be the true reason why the kings of Spain could never raise the price of salt to the height it has maintained in France; for it would tempt the shepherds to stint their sheep, which, it is believed, would weaken their constitutions, and deteriorate their wool. The shepherd places fifty or sixty flat stones at the distance of about five paces apart, straws salt upon each, leads the sheep slowly among them, and every one is allowed to eat it at pleasure. But when they are feeding on limestone lands, they eat no salt; and if they meet with a spot of mixed formation, they are said to partake of it in proportion as the soil is mingled with [illegible].—Wool-Grower.

DR. Everson's Great American Remedy for Ague, or Chills and Fever, is the most popular and certain remedy now known. The people and the press speak of it in the highest terms of commendation. It is pleasant to take, does not purge, vomit or sweat, but invigorates the system. It contains no Arsenic, Strichnine, Quinine, or any other poisonous or injurious drug, but it is an originally discovered Antidote to Malaria and as an Ague Killer it has no equal. Call and get a circular containing certificates from Professors, Physician, Clergymen and the press.

CERTIFICATES

Almost without number, might here be adduced, from Physicians, Clergymen, officers of State, and private individuals; but the following will suffice:

From our intimate knowledge of Dr. Everson, and the extraordinary virtues of his Ague remedy—being apprized of its constituents, and knowing, as we do, that it contains neither Arsenic, Quininine, Strichnine, Mercury or any poisonous or injurious drugs, we heartily commend it, and also his Family Physic, or Cathartic Pills, as medicines deserving the approbation of an inteligent public.

AYER'S

CHERRY PECTORAL,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Colds, Coughs, and Hoarseness.

REMINGTON, MASS., 20th Dec., 1855.

DR J. C. AYER: I do not hesitate to say the best remedy I have ever found for Coughs, Hoarseness, Influenza, and the concomitant symptoms of a Cold, is your CHERRY PECTORAL. Its constant use in my practice and my family for the last ten years, has shown it to possess superior virtues for the treatment of those complaints. JOHN KINGSLEY, M. D.

A. B. MORTLEY, Esq., of Rock, N. Y., writes: "I have used your PECTORAL myself and in my family ever since you furnished it, and believe it the best medicine for its purposes ever put out. With a bad cold I should scarcely pay twenty-five dollars for a bottle than do without it, or take any other remedy."

Croup, Whooping Cough, Influenza.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., Feb. 7, 1856.

BROTHER AYER: I will cheerfully certify your PECTORAL is the best remedy we possess for the cure of Whooping Cough, Croup, and the chest diseases of children. We of your fraternity in the South appreciate your skill, and commend your medicine to our people.

MIRAM CONKLIN, M. D.

AMOS LEE, Esq., MONTERY, Ia., writes, 31 Jan., 1856: "I had a terrible Influenza, which confined me to doors six weeks; took many medicines without relief; finally tried your PECTORAL by the advice of our clergyman. The first dose relieved the soreness in my throat and lungs; less than one half the bottle made me completely well. Your medicines are the cheapest as well as the best we can buy, and we esteem you, Doctor, and your remedies, as the poor man's friend."

Asthma or Phthisic, and Bronchitis.

WEST MANCHESTER, Pa., Feb. 4, 1856.

SIR: Your CHERRY PECTORAL is performing marvellous cures in this section. It has relieved several from alarming symptoms of consumption, and is now curing a man who has labored under an affection of the lungs for the last forty years. HENRY L. PARKS, Merchant.

A. A. RAMSEY, M. D., ALTON, MONROE Co., IOWA, writes, Sept. 6, 1855: "During my practice of many years I have found nothing equal to your CHERRY PECTORAL for giving ease and relief to consumptive patients, or curing such as are curable."

We might add volumes of evidence, but the most convincing proof of the virtues of this remedy is found in its effects upon trial.

Consumption.

Probably no one remedy has ever been known which cured so many and such dangerous cases as this. Some no human aid can reach; but even to those the CHERRY PECTORAL affords relief and comfort.

ASTOR HOUSE, NEW YORK CITY, March 5, 1856.

DOCTOR AYER, Lowell: I feel it a duty and a pleasure to inform you what your CHERRY PECTORAL has done for my wife. She had been five months laboring under the dangerous symptoms of Consumption, from which no aid we could procure gave her much relief. She was steadily failing, until Dr. Strong, of this city, where we have come for advice, recommended a trial of your medicine. We bless his kindness, as we do your skill, for she has recovered from that day. She is not yet as strong as she used to be, but is free from her cough, and calls herself well.

Yours with gratitude and respect,
ORLANDO SHELBY, of SHELBYVILLE.

Consumptives, do not despair till you have tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It is made by one of the best medical chemists in the world, and its cures all around us bespeak the high merits of its virtues.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills.

THE sciences of Chemistry and Medicine have been taxed their utmost to produce this best, most perfect purgative which is known to man. Innumerable proofs are shown that these Pills have virtues which surpass in excellence the ordinary medicines, and that they win on precedentedly upon the esteem of all men. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. Their penetrating properties stimulate the vital activities of the body, remove the obstructions of its organs, purify the blood, and expel disease. They purge out the foul humors which breed and grow distemper, stimulate sluggish or disordered organs into their natural action, and impart healthy tone with strength to the whole system. Not only do they cure the every-day complaints of every body, but also formidable and dangerous diseases that have baffled the best of human skill. While they produce powerful effects they are at the same time, in diminished doses, the safest and best physic that can be employed for children. Being sugar-coated, they are pleasant to take; and being purely vegetable, are free from any risk of harm. Cures have been made which surpass belief were they not substantiated by men of such exalted position and character as to forbid the suspicion of untruth. Many eminent clergymen and physicians have lent their names to certify to the public the reliability of my remedies, while others have sent me the assurance of their conviction that my Preparations contribute immensely to the relief of my afflicted, suffering fellow-men.

The [illegible] is pleased to furnish gratis my American Almanac, containing directions for the use and certificates of their cures, of the following complaints:—

Costiveness, Billious Complaints, Rheumatism, Dropsy, Heartburn, Headache arising from a foul Stomach, Nausea, Indigestion, Morbid Inaction of the Bowels and Pain arising therefrom, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, all Cutaneous and Cutaneous Diseases which require an efficacious Medicine, Scrofula or King's Evil. They also, by purifying the blood and stimulating the system, cure many complaints which it would not be supposed they could reach, such as Deafness, Partial Blindness, Neuralgia and Nervous Irritability, Derangements of the Liver and Kidneys, Gout, and other kindred complaints arising from a low state of the body or obstruction of its functions.

Do not be put off by unprincipled dealers with some other pill they make more profit on. Ask for AYER'S PILLS, and take nothing else. No other they can give you compares with this in its painless value or curative powers. The sick want the best and there is for them, and they should have it.

The Great Family Weekly Paper

THE NEW YORK LEDGER has now attained the extraordinary circulation of One Hundred and Ninety Thousand copies. The LEDGER is devoted to POLITE LITERATURE, ORIGINAL TALES, SKETCHES, POETRY, ESSAYS, GOSSIP, CURRENT NEWS and maintains a high moral tone. It is every where acknowledged to be the best family paper in the world! Hence its extraordinary and unheard of popularity. Mr BONNER, the Proprietor of the LEDGER, employs the best talent in the country, and by so doing makes the best paper. Such writers as Fanny Fern, Sylvanus Cobb, Jr., and Emerson Bennett, are permanently engaged on it, and will write for no other paper hereafter. Mrs. Sigourney, also, constantly writes for it; so do a host of other popular authors, including Mrs. Emma D. E. N. Southworth, Alice Cary, Mrs. Vaughn, Mary W. Stanley Gibson, Clara Sydney, &c. &c., The LEDGER is beautifully illustrated every week

The N Y. LEDGER is printed on beautiful white paper, and is composed of eight pages, by the handsomest weekly paper in the country. It is published every Saturday and sold at all the news offices in every city and town throughout the country; and is mailed for subscribers at two dollars per annum; two copies are sent for three dollars. Any person obtaining eight subscribers at $1 50 each (which is our lowest club rates,) and sending us $12 will be entitled to one copy free. Terms invariably in advance. Address all letters to ROBERT BONNER,
Publisher of NEW YORK LEDGER, 44 Ann Street, New York

N B.—Now is a good time to subscribe as EMMESON BENNET'S Great Original Novel of Frontier Lise will be commenced in the LEDGER on the first of January.

MORE BOUNTY LAND.

THE ACT OF CONGRESS passed March 3d, 1855, gives

160 Acres of Land,

To every Officer, Soldier, Musician, in the Army, or man, Marine, Clerk, or Landsman in the Navy, who served fourteen days, or was in any battle in any war since 1790, or to their widows or minor children—embracing officers and soldiers of

WAYNE'S WAR,
WAR OF 1812,
BLACK HAWK WAR,
PATRIOT WAR,
FLORIDA WAR,
AROOSTOOK WAR,
MEXICAN WAR

ALSO, the Revolutionary Soldiers or their Widows. In cases where 160 acres have been received under former Acts of Congress, no more can be drawn; but those who have been allowed a Warrant for 40 or 80 acres are now entitled to a Warrant for enough more to make up 160 acres.

P. S. We have faithful and experienced Agents in Washington, and we make no charge in any case unless we obtain the land.

The second, third or fourth marriage of a widow, does not impair her claim under this act, if she is a widow at the time of her application.

Persons under the age of 21 years on the 3d of March, 1855, are regarded minors by this act.

Those having claims, will have them promptly attended to by calling on or writing (post paid,) to BILLS & BAXTER, Tecumseh.

THE NEW SPECIAL
Topographical Map of
Lenawee county Mich.,

From original surveys and actual measurement throughout the whole county by Bechler and Wenig, Surveyors and Civil Engineers, Authors of Maps of Allegany, Schoharie and Broome County, N. Y., and Washtenaw Co., Mich.

The subscribers, who have been engaged in compiling a map of Lenawee County since 14 months, are about to review the whole work in order to correct even the slightest error, if any should have occured. The same time they will obtain subscribers for the enterprise, which is connected with immense labor and expense.

The Map is about 3×5 feet in size, and contains every public road with all its variations, the localities of Dwellings, places of Worship, Post Offices, and School Houses, Stores, Mills, Shops, &c.; also, section and farm lines with the owner's name engraved to it; Views of Public buildings, Plans of every village in the County on the margin forming not only a correct and complete, but also an ornamental Map, and will be handsomely colored, mounted and furnished to subscribers for $5 per copy
BECHLER, WENIG & CO.,
Adrian & Philadelphia

The undersigned having examined Messrs. Bechler & Wenig's Surveys of Lenawee Co., take pleasure in recommending their Map to the citizens of this County, as being in our opinion, a very accurate, reliable and practical Map and Complete County Directory, and well worthy their liberal patronage. Considering the expense attending its survey and engraving so accurately all the names, local interests, town plats, farm lines, streams, &c., we think the charges reasonable, and have subscribed for the Map.

Come Unto Me.

"Come unto me, ye weak and faint and weary,
With torn and bleeding feet, and wounded breast
Sad wanderers on the mountains dark and dreary
Come unto me, and I will give you rest.

"Come unto me, thou weeper pale and lonely,
Whose stay of earthly hope long since went down
Thy dewy garland was a vision only,
But all too real is thy thorny crown.

"Come unto me. Oh heavy-hearted stranger,
Doomed thro' the world, unknown, unloved to roam
I know I love thee; I will shield thee from danger;
Come unto me, and it on shalt find a home.

"Come unto me, poor sinner, scorned and hated,
Disowned and hunted from among thy kind.
I can restore thee; fear not thou art fated;
Come unto me, and peace enduring find.

"Oh come, my children, to your Saviour's bosom;
Come ye who long for love, to Jesus' breast;
Ye little children, in your first sweet blossom;
Ye white-haired pilgrims, hasten to your rest."
A. Moore.

Conflict Between a Lion and an Antelope.

Dr Livingstone gives a very interesting description of a fight he witnessed in Africa between a lion and antelope. The Dr and his guides had just emerged from a narrow defile between two rocky hills, when they heard an angry growl, which they knew to be that of the monarch of the forest. At the distance of not more than forty yards in advance of them, a gemsbok stood at bay, while a huge tawny lion was crouched on a rocky platform, above the level of the plain, evidently meditating an attack on the antelope, only a space of about twenty feet separated the two animals. The lion appeared to be animated with the greatest fury—the gemsbok was apparently calm and resolute—presenting his well fortified head to the enemy. The lion cautiously changed his position, descended to the plain and made a circuit, obviously for the purpose of attacking the gemsbok in the rear, but the latter was on the alert and still turned his head towards his antagonist.

This manoeuvering lasted for half an hour, when it appeared to the observers that the gemsbok used a stratagem to induce the lion to make his assault. The flank of the antelope was for a moment presented to his fierce assailant. As quick as lightning, the lion made a spring, but while he was yet in the air, the gemsbok turned his head, bending his neck so as to present one of his spear like horns at the lion's breast. A terrible laceration was the consequence; the lion fell back on his haunches and showed a ghastly wound in the lower part of his neck. He uttered a howl of rage and anguish, and backed off to the distance of fifty yards, seeming half disposed to give up the contest, but hunger, fury or revenge once more impelled him forward. His second assault was more furious and headlong; he rushed at the gemsbok, and attempted to leap over the formidable horns in order to alight on his back. The gemsbok, still standing on the defensive, elevated his head, speared the lion in the side, and inflicted what the spectators believed to be a mortal wound, as the horns penetrated to the depth of six or eight inches. Again, the lion retreated groaning and limping in a manner which showed that he had been severely hurt, but he soon collected all his energies for another attack. At the instant of collision, the gemsbok presented a horn so as to strike the lion immediately between his two fore legs, and so forceful was the stroke, that the whole length of the horn was buried in the lion's body. For nearly a minute, the two beasts stood motionless; then the gemsbok, slowly backing, withdrew his horn, and the lion tottered and fell on his side, his limbs quivering in the agonies of death. The victor made a triumphant flourish of his heels, and trotted off apparently without having received the slightest injury in the conflict.

☞ The New Orleans Picayune says: Our intelligence from all sources, public and private, is very unfavorable to the growing sugar crop of Cuba. Travellers direct from the island, reiterate with the confidence of those who have seen with their own eyes, the statements already made public, that expectations formed in the early part of the season, will not be realized. Some say the crop in many districts will show a deficiency one-third; others one-half, while all agree that the whole crop will be short of the anticipated, which is still about one anticipated about 100,000 boxes, of that of 1855.

☞ The Lewiston Grand Jury condemn the Suspension Bridge at the Desjardins Canal. They say that some of the pillars are actually out of their place several inches, and the structure generally is too precarious a state for public safety.

The Squatter Family

Among the early settlers of the West were many who moved out and selected sites for their homes upon any unoccupied land they might find, and, by clearing a portion of it and building a cabin, they obtained a preemption right to the soil, or, at least, a certain portion of it, and in possession of which they have been protected by the government, at least so far as that none could dispossess them without paying an equivalent for the improvements; and even then they had a prior claim, or privilege of purchasing, at government prices, over every other purchaser. Such pioneers have been denominated "Squatters."

In an early day a man, who had left the sterile soil of an Eastern state, started with his young and rising family to better his condition in the rich and fertile valley of the West. He was a poor, but honest man; had struggled hard to raise his family, and by patient industry was enabled to obtain an outfit of a horse and cattle, journey to the West. Passing through what was then a wilderness, he at length reached a spot on the Illinois river, about two hundred miles from its mouth, where he pitched his tent, and subsequently erected his cabin. His family consisted of a wife and three children; the eldest, a boy, was in his nineteenth year, the next a girl in her eighteenth year, and the youngest a boy of fourteen. They were all healthy and vigorous, the very material suited for the hard toil and poor fare of pioneer life.

One day there came to the squatter's cabin three Indians, professing to be friendly, who invited him to go out on a hunting excursion with them. As the family subsisted mostly upon game, he finally concluded to accompany them, taking with him his eldest son. They expected to be absent about a week, as they intended to take a somewhat extensive range. After three days had passed away, one of the Indians returned to the squatter's house, and deliberately lighting his pipe and taking his seat by the fire, he commenced smoking in silence. The wife was not startled at his appearance, as it was frequently the case that one, and sometimes more, of a party of Indian hunters, getting discouraged, would leave the rest and return. This was usually the case when they imagined they discovered some bad sign, and it would not only be useless, but disastrous, for them to hunt under such circumstances.

The Indian sat for some time in sullen silence, and at length, removing his pipe from his mouth, he gave a significant grunt to awaken attention, and said—"White man die." The squatter's wife at this replied,

"What is the matter?"

"He sick; tree fall on him; he die—You go see him."

Her suspicions being somewhat aroused at the manner of the savage, she asked him a number of questions. The evasiveness and evident want of consistency in the answers, at length convinced her that something was wrong. She judged it best not to go herself, but sent her youngest son, the eldest, as we have seen, having gone on the hunt with his father—Night came, but it brought not the son or the Indian. All its gloomy hours were spent in that lone cabin by the mother and daughter; but morning came without their return. The whole day passed in the same fruitless look out for the boy; the mother felt grieved that she had sent her child on the errand, but it was now too late. Her suspicions were now confirmed that the Indians had decoyed away her husband and sons. She felt that they would not stop in their evil designs, and that, if they had slain the father and his sons, they would next attack the mother and daughter.

No time was to be lost, and she saw [illegible] was approaching [illegible] the door and windows of the cabin in the best manner they could. The rifle of the youngest boy was all the weapon in the house, as his father did not take it when he went to seek his other. This was taken from its hangings, and carefully examined to see that it was well loaded and primed. To her daughter she gave the axe, and thus armed they determined to watch all night, and if attacked by the savages, to fight to the last.

About midnight they made their appearance, expecting to find the mother and daughter asleep, but in this they were disappointed. They approached stealthily, and one of the number knocked loudly at the door, crying, "Mother! mother!"

The mother's ear was too acute to be deceived by the wily savage, and she replied, "Where are the Indians, my son?"

The answer, "Um gone," would have satisfied her, if she had not been before aware of the deceit.

"Come up, my son, and put your ear to the latch hole. I want to tell you something before I open the door."

The Indian applied his ear to the latch-hole. The crack of the rifle followed, and he fell dead.

As soon as she fired, she stepped on one side of the door, and immediately two rifle balls passed through it, either of which would have killed her.

"Thank God!" said the mother in a whisper to her daughter, "there are but two. They are the three that went to hunt with your father, and one of them is dead. If we can only kill or cripple another, we shall be safe. Take courage my child; God will not forsake us in this trying hour. We must both be still after they fire again. Suppose they have killed us, they will break down the door. I may be able to shoot one,"—for in the meantime she had re-loaded the rifle,—"but if I miss, you must use the axe with all your might."

The daughter, equally courageous with her mother, assured her she would do her best.

The conversation had scarcely ceased when two more rifle-balls came crashing through the window. A death-like stillness ensued for the space of several minutes, when two more balls, in quick succession came through the door, followed by tremendous strokes against it with a heavy stake. At length the door gave way, and an Indian, with a fiendish yell, was in the act of springing into the house; but a ball from the boy's rifle, in the mother's hand, pierced his heart, and he fell dead across the threshold. The surviving Indian, daring not to venture—and it was well for his skull that he did not—fired at random, and ran away.

"Now," said the mother to the daughter, "we must leave;" and taking the rifle and axe, they hastened to the river, jumped into the canoe, and without a morsel of provision, except a wild duck and two blackbirds which the mother shot on the voyage, and which they ate raw, they paddled their canoe down the river until they reached the residence of the French settlers at St. Louis.

Some time after, a party of hunters started over into Illinois, and scoured the country in every direction; but they returned without finding either the squatter or his boys. Nor have they been heard from to this day. Should the traveler pass by the beautiful city of Peoria, in his Westward wanderings, the old settlers in that neighborhood can point out the spot where stood the cabin of the squatter, so heroically defended by his wife and daughter, and who so nobly avenged the death of the father and sons.

The pioneer women of the West, like the men, were made of sterner stuff than enters into the composition of most of our modern ladies and gentlemen. They were brave in entering the wilderness, and they showed themselves equally so in grappling with its difficulties and encountering its perils. Who has not heard of the heroic Miss Elizabeth Zane, at Fort Henry, in 1777, where the city of Wheeling now stands? When a large army of savages had been collected, under the infamous Girty, and had attacked the fort, having killed in an outside skirmish several officers and men, a fearful crisis had arrived. The fort was reduced to but eleven men and boys. The house of villagers were occupied by the savage foe, who for the moment had ceased hostilities, and had withdrawn to the base of the hill, which rose abruptly and precipitously from the narrow valley. The ammunition of the fort was nearly exhausted and the stock must be replenished, or all would fall—men, women, and children—a prey to the merciless savages. About sixty yards distant, at the house of Ebenezer Zane, there was a keg of powder. If that could be procured, they would be enabled successfully to defend the fort, and keep the Indians at bay. Not a man or boy, for they were almost equally good marksmen, could be spared, and yet some one must hazard his life in the undertaking. It was the forlorn hope of that little band, and on it their fate was to turn. The commander, Col. Shepherd called for a volunteer in this perilous undertaking. Several promptly offered their services, both men and boys; but they were the bravest of the band, and could least be spared. The difficulty seemed to be not so much in finding the heart stout enough for the fearful undertaking but in making the selection. Just then, up stepped a slender, delicate girl. With the spirit of her father, she said to the commander, "I will bring the powder—If I die in the attempt, my loss will not be felt." In vain they strove to dissuade her, as she would most certainly be shot. Besides, she could not run with the fleetness of a man. All entreaties were in vain, and she heroically exclaimed, "Open the gates, and let me go!" With tearful eyes the gates were opened, and the interpid girl bounded toward the house.—The moment she was seen by the Indians, who, instead of firing at her, seemed to be taken by a surprise and astonishment that for a moment suspended their murderous purposes. She reached the house entered it, secured the desired keg, and started back to the fort. The son of the heroic girl was in the effort, and bravely it sustained her. As she sped across the space with her burden a dozen rifles were raised, and their sharp, simultaneous crack, seemed to announce her doom; but she neither fell nor faltered.—On with accelerated speed she urged her way; and, passing the gates, she entered the fort in safety. The deed of that brave girl saved the fort; and an advantage was gained over the savages from which they did not recover so as to renew their depredations in future on that [illegible] West abounds with incidents of female heroism; and the simple story of their deeds possesses a more thrilling interest than can be infused by the most fervent and fruitful imagination into any scene of fiction.—Pioneers of the West.

The Tame Seal

It is seldom that one meets with more touching recital in reference to the brute creation, than the following, which is quoted from an Irish work:

About forty years ago a young seal was taken in Claw Bay, and domesticated in the kitchen of a gentleman whose house was situated on the sea shore. It grew apace, became familiar with the servents, and attached to the house and family. It played with the children, came at its master's call and as the old man described it, was fond as a dog and playful as a kitten.—Daily the seal went out to fish, and after providing for his own wants, brought in a salmon or a turbot to his master. His delight in the summer was to bask in the sun, and in the winter to lie down before the fire, or if permitted, to creep into a large oven, which at that time formed the regular appendage of an Irish kitchen. For four years the seal was thus domesticated, when unfortunately, in that country the crippawn—a kind of paralytic affection in the limbs, which generly ends fatally—attacked some black cattle belonging to the master of the house. Some died, others became infected, and the customary cure by changeing them to dryer pastures, failed.

A "wise woman" was consulted; and this hag assured the credulous owner that the mortality among the cows was occasioned by his keeping an unclean beast about his habitation—the harmless and amusing seal. It must be made away with immediately; the crippawn will continue, and the charms be unable to avert the malady. The superstitious man consented to the hag's proposal—the seal was put on board a boat and carried out beyond Clear Island, and there committed to the deep, to manage for himself the best he could. The boat returned—the family retired to rest, and next morning a servent awakened her master to tell him that the seal was quietly sleeping in the oven. The poor animal, ever night, came back to the beloved home, crept through an open window, and took possession of his favorite sitting place. Next morning another cow was reported to be unwell. The seal must now be removed. A Galway fishing boat was leaving Westport on her return home, and the master undertook to carry off the seal, and not to put him off till he had gone leagues beyond lunis Boffin. It was done. A day and night passed. The second evening. The servent was raking the fire for the night when something scratched at the door—it was, of course, the house-dog—she opened it, and in came the seal.

Weaned with his long [illegible] voyage, he testified his delight to find himself at home—then stretching himself before the embers of the hearth, he fell asleep. The master of the house was apprised of this unexpected and unwelcom visit. In this exigency the ordiame was awakened and consulted. She avered that it was always unlucky to kill a seal, but suggested that the animal should be deprived of sight, and a third time, carried out to sea. To this hellish proposition the bespotted creatures who owned the house consented, and the affectionate and confiding creature was cruelly robbed of sight on that hearth for which he had resigned his native element. Next morning writhing in agony, the mutilated seal was embarked, taken out side Clare Island and for the last time committed to the waves. A week passed over and things became wors instead of better. The cattle of this truculent wrech died fast, and the infernal old hag then gave him the pleasurable tidings that her arts were useless, and that the destructive visitation upon his cattle exceded her skill and cure. On the eighth night after the seal had been devoted to the Atlantic, it blew tremendously. In the pauses of the storm a wailing voice at times was faintly herd at the door. The servents who slept in the kitchen, concluded that the banshee came to warn them of their approaching death, and buried their heads in the bed coverings.

When the morning broke, the door was opened, and the seal was there, lying on the threshold. "Stop Julius! I exclaimed," give a moment's time time to curse all concerned in this barbarism." "Be patient, Frank," said my cousin, "the final will probably save you that trouble." The skeleton of the once plump animal—for the poor beast perished from hunger, being incapacitated from blindness to procure its customary food—was buried in a sand hill, and from that moment misfortune followed the abettors and perpetrators of this inhuman deed. The detestible hag, who had denounced the inoffensive seal, was, within a fortnight, hanged for murdering the illegitimate offspring of her daughter. Every thing about this devoted home melted away, sheep rotted, cattle died, and "blighted was the corn." Of several children, none reached maturity, and the savage proprietor survived everthing he had loved or cared for. He died blind and miserable. There is not one stone of that accursed building standing upon another. The property has passed to a family of different name, and the series of incessant calamety which pursued all concerned in this cruel deed is as romantic as true.

A POLICEMAN MURDERED.—A policeman of New York city, named Stephen T. Hardenbrook, was murdered in the street of that city at about one o'clock on last Wednesday morning. He attempted to arrest two suspicious looking individuals who were emerging from a clothing store, each with a large bundle. One of them stabbed the officer in the left side with a dagger and they both fled. The officer lived until four o'clock the same morning, when he died. The murderers escaped.

Dr Tom Nichols and his wife, Mrs Gove Nichols, of "free love" notoriety, together with her daughter, have become converts to Catholicism in Cincinnati.—The spirits, it seems, were the instrument of the wonderful conversion. Dr. Nichols, in the name of himself and wife, has written a retraction of his free love and infidel teachings, in a letter to Dr Purcell.

POETRY CORNER

For the Tecumseh Herald.

THE RAIN

Oh many a tone hath the falling rain,
In its changeful moods to me
At times it sounds like a dirge or plaint
And now like full of glee

When it climbs in the pleasant April hours
Upon the roofs of home
It has no think of the blossoming flowers
In haunts where we love to roam

And when to the glorious summer time
It comes o'er the waving grain
It sounds to me like some grand old rhyme
And we seize the ringing strain

Rain in November, sad and cold,
When the falling rain we hear,
Its dirge-like tones bids us be bold
The chilling—dying year.

And when in the wintry days the rain
Comes down with strife and woe
We think of the castles we built in vain,
In the days of Long Ago.

And thus whenever the rain we hear,
Our olden dreams come back
And a light time down from the passing year,
Upon life's dreary track.

Afternoon Report

Washington, April 28

The War Department has completed arrangements for a Wagon road from Fort Defiance to Mojave river. Edward Beale, Superintendent, G. H. [illegible] assistant, James P. [illegible], physician.

Lieut. Charles E. Thrasburn has been detached from the Navy, to accompany the expedition for geological surveys, &.

Twentyfive camels and dromedaries will be employed, in order to test their endurance and adaptability to the climate.

The party will consist of about 50 picked men, provided with the necessary impliments to break a road through, and will rendezvous at New Orleans on the 20th of May.

All the parties for the different sections of the road are now breanized, with instructions to commence at the earliest practicable period. It is thought the work will be finished by next December.

Lawrence, Kansas, April 25.

Secretary Stanton addressed the citizens last evening. He was introduced by Governor Robinson, repeated the general points published in the address, he said the Bogus Law must be enforced, and Territorial taxes paid, the latter prohibition was decidedly given to the audience. He was listened to pleasantly and respectfully throughout.

Kingston, Jamaca, March 23

An English Man of-war has carried in to St Anne an American schooner from Africa to Cuba with 377 slaves, one hundred and thirty seven had died on the passage and the remainder were in starving condition. It was rumored that one other slaver was off the coast and a British steamer had started in pursuit.

Cuba, March 26.

The English Admiral in the Pacific had seized the Peruvian insurgent war vessels Loia and Tombs.

Vessels were still loading at the Chincas under permits from the insurgent General Viran.

News from California is meagre. The act of last Legislature for the protection of actual settlers has been declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court.

A fire at Sacramento destroyed $500.0 worth of property, of the California Stag Company.

Serious dissentions have arisen among the Mormons at San Barnado and Salt Lake.

San Francisco markets dull. Money market easy, no provision has been made for the payment of State debt.

Oregon dates are to March 26th, says the steamer Portland was carried over the Falls of Oregon city, 17th, killing Capt. Jamison and a seaman and entirely destroying the boat.

Fears are entertained of another outbreak in the Washington territory.

Advices from Honolulu, Sandwich Islands, state that a schooner had arrived there from Nantucket Island with a cargo of Guano, the Island had been taken possession of by Americans.

Costa Rican papers of April 8th, contain a letter from Gen. Mora to the Minister of War, he says Walker is hemmed in on the plain at Rivas, the allies being intrenched within 400 yards of his line and that he was subsisting on mule and dog's flesh.

Chicago, April 28.

The St Paul Pioneer contains a letter from General Shields, Taribault, 15th which pointedly contradicts the rumor of the Indian murders at Mankato. Reliable information from Blue Earth county states that there was not a sign of hostility among the Indians. The Minnesotian of the 20th, confirms the above.

New York, April 28

The liquor dealers held a meeting last night and adopted resolutions to disregard the new excise law, and take the first prosecution under it to the highest courts, to test its Constitutionality. A fund was raised for this purpose.

Coster's livery stable at Montgomery, Alabama, was burned this week including 30 horses, mostly belonging to Ortons Circus. Loss $30,000.

☞ Navigation is open to Dunkirk.

Utah and the Mormons.

A recent article in Judge Drummond's late from Utah, although containing some revolting particulars that should have been suffered to rest in oblivion, rather than thrust mercilessly upon the bereaved widow of the lamented Capt. Gunnison, shows however conclusively that his unprovoked murder, was only the carrying out of the Mormon edict of Brigham Young.

Recent events also show a determination of this high priest of Iniquity, and of those associated with him, to resist all and any efficient control or interference of the Federal authorities within the Territory. In anticipation of this the military of the territory is being fortified, and thoroughly organized. Islands are being established in the Salt Lake in artillery and cavalry companies. The United States Government officers there are constantly in fear of assassination.

What is to be done now becomes a question of difficulty and importance. We do not believe it will do any good, nor that it is safe any longer to temporise in the matter. Insubordination never grows less by indulgence. Had this thing been met boldly and efficiently when it first obtruded itself upon the government, as it did under the administration of President Fillmore, it would have been disposed of without bloodshed, and almost without difficulty. But instead of doing this, under a mistaken policy, he made the prime traitor its Governor, and President Pierce under the same apprehension and mistaken policy has permitted him to remain, until now the difficulty increased ten fold, must be met, or the Territory abandoned, and the movements of the government stand confessed. To this neither the American people nor the American government are prepared to submit.

This matter affords another striking illustration of one of the greatest evils incident to and to be guarded against, in a popular representative government.—And that is a disposition and strong inducement on the part of party or power to temper with, and oftentimes make most unwarranted and unfortunate concessions to, acknowledged wrong for the sake of courting the elements of elective power which it is able to control. Party may and does sometimes temporarily does gain by this, but its gain thus is to the common wealth a fearful loss. We shall not be understood as charging this upon any particular party. It is unfortunately but too common with all. Under its baneful countenance, and fostering encouragement, have been aggravated into their most threatening difficulty and danger—the rowdyism of our large cities, the slave extensionists of dissunionists, the border ruffianism of Missouri, and the Mormonism of Utah.

These evils are all now seen and felt, but how they came to be what they are, is but too apt to be over looked or forgotten. Nor indeed will it be of any service to call the public attention to their causes, until there shall come at length to be cultivated and cherished in the great untrammelled heart of the people, a love of country more than of party, and a fixed determination to set their seal of unequivocal condemnation upon every and any party in every and any attempt to barter human right or common weal for party power.—When this is done, then will these and similar evils be effectually redressed, and not before, and not then because party is power, but because they will be thus compelled to do right by the strong ties of their own patriotism.

THE WEATHER.—There is but little use in talking about the weather, for it seems to be about the same all over the country, but dame nature seems to have got at least one full calendar month behind hand in some way. No green grass nor fruit bearing blossoms are yet to be seen among us.

CHARTER ELECTION.—The Charter Election in this village which took place last Monday last, resulted in the election of the following Village Board, without distinction of party, President, Joseph C. Satterthwait; Trustees, Elijah Anderson, Timothy Doel, James S. Gilman, Elliot M. Gray, Hugh Richard, Philip Totten.

Ladies' Repository.

The May number of the Repository is promptly received. Improved as it has of late been in size and typographical execution, illustrated and embellished also with fine engravings, it is now inferior to nothing of its kind. It has always been well edited, and is worthy of commendation to any fire-side or parlor. Edited by D. W. Clark, D. D. and published by Swormstedt & Poe, Cincinnati, O. Terms $2 per annum.

The May number of Putnam is promptly upon our table. It is a number of more than usual interest. Among its articles may be noticed a fine story of border life, entitled "The Trail, the Trace and the Wagon Road," and an unanswerable review of "History as expounded by the Supreme Court," written with great force and clearness. It is published monthly, by Messrs. Dix, Edwards, & Co., 321 Broadway, New York, at $3 per annum.

Dickens's Household Words.

The May number of Dickens is received and welcome to our exchanges. It contains a continuation of the "Dead Secret," and "A Journey Due North," which are exciting much interest in its readers. We are always at a loss to notice it, from the fact that each number contains an amount and variety of articles that almost preclude specification in the brief space devoted to this purpose. Published monthly by Messrs Dix, Edwards and Co., New York, as above. Terms $3 per annum.

A CARD.—I would hereby publicly express my thanks to the Ætna Insurance Company of Hartford, for their very prompt manner in which they have paid the am't insured on my store which was destroyed by fire on the 3d inst. I am in receipt of my claim in full ($500) less 60 days' interest, the time allowed according to conditions of policy. L. L. CUMSTOCK.

A CARD.—The Ætna Insurance Company of Hartford, in which we were insured, having promptly and amicably adjusted the loss and damage by fire to our stock of merchandise on the 3d inst., and as promptly paid the same, we would confidently recommend the Company as perfectly reliable, to all owners of property in this region, and advise them without delay to apply to the Agent of the Company, Mr. John Cumming of Tecumseh, who will as promptly attend to their wants in the line of Insurance.

RUSSIAN RAILWAYS.—The Czar is now using his utmost efforts to cover Russia with a net of railways which will alike add to the military power of Russia, and to the prosperity of its people. The capital required is forty-five millians sterling, ($220 000,000) and the work is to be completed in ten years. The lines are to be divided in the following sections:

1. St Petersburgh to Vilna or Kovno.
2. Vilna to Warsaw.
3. Moscow to Kourak.
4. Kourak to Theodosia.
5. Kourak to Donabourg.
6. Dunabourg to Libau.
7. Moscow to Nijnei Novgord.

He hopes to raise the required capital in England, Holland and France. The Russian government guarantee 5 per cent interest on the investment.

We speak of Dr. Sanford's Invigorator, which came to us recommended as a cure for Liver Complaints, and all diseases arising from a Diseased Liver. The testimonials of so many of our Physicians in its favor, induced us to try it, and now conviction is certain that it is one of the greatest blessings ever given to Dyspeptics, for it made a complete cure before the first bottle was taken, and now we can eat any thing eatable without trouble, while before nothing but the lightest food would digest, and often that gave pain. Now what we want to say to all our readers is, if Liver Complaint or Dyspepsia troubles you, do not fail to try this the greatest remedy in the world.

Important from Nicaragua.

The arrival of the Illinois has placed us in possession of very late advices from all parts of Central America.

The dates are from:—

Rivas, Nicaragua	April 1.
San Jose, Costa Rica	April 5
Granada, Nicaragua	March 14
Guatemala	March 22
Cojutepique, San Salvador	March 26

The most important news is that Walker was said to be hemmed in in the Plaza of Rivas, the allies be entrenched within 400 yards of the filibusters, who were reduced to mule and dog flesh, with sugar in the place of salt, for food, and in whose camp sickness was prevalent. The accounts of the battle of March 5th, are differently reported by the Costa Rican journals from the statement made by Walker. Walker, at the head of 300 men, is said to have been routed at the point of the bayonet, with a loss of 26 men killed, besides the wounded, with the loss of a large quantity of horses, arms, wagons, &c., whilst the allies loss is said to be one captain and two privates killed, and one ensign and eighteen privates wounded.

The Album Semenal of the 28th ult., says that by the last advices General Mora had taken up his position on the north and south side of Rivas, within 400 yards of the plaza, and was soon to open fire. Several deserters from Walker's camp state that over 100 filibusters were slain in the action of the 16th, and that the number of wounded was very great. The fight took place near San Jorge.

Walker having advanced against that place with all his disposable force, took up a position near the church of Pueblo Nuevo, from which he opened fire with his heavy guns, throwing five hundred round shots into the enemy's camp. At 4 P. M. Walker retreated, and General Jorez having been sent to intercept his return to Rivas, harrassed the filibusters whenever he had a chance. The loss on Walker's side is said to be over 100 killed, whilst the allies lost 92 killed and 60 wounded. General Jarez afterwards occupied San Juan del Sur.

Advices from Rivas to the 28th March announces that fighting had continued for four days, but to no successes on either side as recorded.

April 20 was the day fixed by the Costa Ricans for the finishing of Walker on the Pacific.

We learn that Lockridge remained at Greytown, and that the Costa Ricans were still there.

The symptoms of dissension between the Costa Ricans and Nicaraguans have already shown themselves on the Atlantic side and in the interior, as they did some time since on the Pacific side. Rivas sent a Collector of Customs to San Carlos, and Gen. Mora sent him back with the message that he would attend to the collecting on the river. Col. Canty had delared the river open, and several parties had gone into the interior with passports from him. Mora was expected at Greytown.

The Telegrapho Setentrional, dated Granada, March 14, publishes a correspondence between Capt. Davis, of the St. Marys, and General Xatruch. The correspondence is published in the Herald of this morning. From the editorial remarks thereon, we infer that Capt. Davis refused to interfere between the belligerents.

Advices from Guatemala are to March 22d. Senor Don Pedro Gaivez, Minister from Peru, and General Barrios, Commissioner from Salvador, has arrived at the capital, and been received by the President.

To encourage the cultivation of coffee, that article has been exempted from municipal and hospital taxes for twenty years.

A government return of the trade of the republic for 1856 has been published, by which it appears that the total imports for the year amounted to $1,045 816, and the exports to $1,067,973. The largest amount of trade is done at the port of Izabel, on the Atlantic, but that of San Jose on the Pacific is rapidly increasing, and eventually the largest proportion of the indigo, cochineal coffee and hides, will be exported from the Pacific port.

From observations made at the observatory of the college during the last eruption of the volcano of Fuego, on the 18th of February, the column of flame issuing from the crater reached the enormous height of 2,021 feet.

Guatemala had sent 3,000 soldiers, well disciplined and equipped, to aid the allies in Nicaragua.

From Cojutepique, the capital of Salvador, dates are to March 26.

By a Presidential decree, dated Feb. 23, a forced loan of twenty thousand dollars a month is ordered to be levied for the purpose of carrying on the war against Walker.

On the 27th of February, the Legislature closed its session with the usual formalities.

On the 16th, the Legislature confirmed the privilege given to Mr. F. Belmont for the establishment of a line of clipper between Panama and San Jose de Guatemala.

A force of 2,000 men was organized to join the allies in Nicaragua.

OPERATIONS WITH SAN JUAN.

From the correspondence of the New York Herald we gather the following relative to the movements of the troops under Lockridge, after the explosion of the steamer, an account of which we published some days ago. The letter is dated Aspinwall, 20th April:

Mr. Hull reports that a Costa Rican post was came down to Greytown with Col. Canty's troops a few days after the explosion, reports that when the passed the wreck he saw ten dead bodies, and that the Costa Ricans took from the remains of ship a lot of muskets and Minie rifles.

Arrival of the America.

Halifax, April 24.

The steamship America arrived here last evening, but in consequence of the prostration of the wires were unable to transmit her news.

The America left Liverpool Saturday morning, April 11.

The political news present no feature of special importance.

The final contests in the British General Election has taken place and a general resulted in a majority of voices in favor of the Palmerston administration. Estimates of the strength of the Ministry in the new Parliament, varied so widely that nothing short of an actual division on a test question could settle the point.

The Aust ia Sardinian difficulty remains in statuquo.

The cotton market had a drooping tendency and an actual decline had been submitted to on some of the higher grades, while for lower descriptions quotations were barely maintained.

In breadstuffs a general dullness pervaried the market.

Flour and wheat nominally unchanged, although the tendency was declining downward.

Corn is quoted a trifle lower, but closed steady at the decline.

The London money market continued stringent but although the Bank of England was still losing bullion, the rise in the rate of interest which was predicted at the departure of the Edinburgh, had not taken place.

The elections in England were nearly over. The ministerial net gain so far, is completed at 65.

Sidney Herbert is spoken of as minister of war, in place of Lord Panmure.

Evelyn Denison is the ministerial candidate for Speaker.

The English government furnishes 3 steamships to assist in laying the Atlantic cable. The cable will be completed in June, and laid in July.

FRANCE.—The rumored attempt to assassinate the Emperor was unfounded, but several arrests had been made of persons connected with secret societies.

SPAIN.—A Madrid letter says active communications are taking place between Spain, England and France, on the subject of the Spanish Mexican difficulty.—The Spanish government hopes to obtain the moral support of those powers, and in case the question goes beyond war between Mexico and Spain, their material support also.

DENMARK.—The cabinet have tendered their resignation. Cause local politics.

The Danish Diet unanimously approved of the abolition of the Sound Dues, and a treaty is concluded with foreign powers.

AUSTRIA.—An Austrian circular states respecting the Austrian Sardinian rupture that should the mediation of England and France prove unsuccessful, Austria will seek measures for her own protection.—The authority of the circular is doubted.

ITALY.—The Austrian ambassador at Naples repeats the statement that Naples is more and more unwilling to make advances towards the re-establishment of diplomatic relations with the Western powers.

RUSSIA.—A letter from St Petersburgh says operations for raising the sunken vessels at Sebastopol have commenced. 16 have been recovered.

PERSIA.—The Ottoman ambassador at Teheran had required the execution of the treaty, and the restitution of 7 towns to Turkey.

The Persian army was collected at Bunjoe.

Holloway's Pills.—In all cases of weak stomach, which are usually attended with want of appetite, nausea, griping, disturbed sleep, and a general prostration of the bodily powers, these pills will be found a swift and certain remedy. Among the most common indications of a diseased stomach, are a sense of fullness after eating a dry, yellow tongue, flatulence in the abdomen, repulsive taste in the mouth, heaviness in all the limbs, giddiness, pain in the eyes, want of energy, aversion to mental exercise, and irregularity of the bowels. These symptoms disappear after a few doses of the pills have been administered; the stomach, liver, and bowels, resume the regular and vigorous performance of their functions, the patient's strength returns, and in a short time the cure is complete.

SHERIFF'S SALE.—By virtue of a writ of fieri facias issued from the Circuit Court of Lenawee County against the goods and chattels, lands and tenements of Stephen B. Ivory and Francis Hurlburt I have levied upon & shall sell at the auction to the highest bidder on the west by the Brick Church, on the south by Front Street, on the west by Clinton street and on the north by Railroad Street, which I shall sell as Public Auction at the Court room in Adrian on the 30th day of June 1857 at 10 o'clock A. Cathartic Pills

(SUGAR COATED,)

CLEANSE THE BLOOD AND CURE THE Invalids, Mothers, Brothers, Physicians, Philanthropists, regard them, Editors, and Judge are their Virtues.

Headache, Sick Headache, Foul Stomach, Dyspepsia, Piles, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Dropsy, Erysipelas, Scrofula, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Ringworm, Tumors, Ulcers, Blotches, Boils, Pimples, Fever Sores, Biliousness, Jaundice, Dysentery, Colic, Costiveness, Indigestion, Liver Complaint, Fits, Suppression, Paralysis, Inflammation, Pain, Heartburn, Female Complaints, Worms, Colds, Coughs, Hoarseness, Influenza, Bronchitis, Whooping Cough, Croup, Asthma, Incipient Consumption, and for the relief of consumptive patients in advanced stages of the disease.

We need not speak to the public of its virtues. Throughout every town and almost every family in the American States its wonderful cures of pulmonary complaints have made it universally known. Nay, few are the families in any civilized country on the continent without some personal experience of its effects, and hence, as a communication ever which have not availed to relieve by its use, or some known to have been benefited by it, it is almost superfluous to say that in all cases where a cathartic medicine is required, this will be found the most powerful antidote that has yet been discovered. Laboring as it does, directly upon the blood and the digestive organs, it expels from the system those foul humors that corrupt the fountains of life, and thus invigorates the whole body. Diseases of the most malignant character yield to its influence, and such variety of complaints arise from impure blood, that a remedy which acts upon that fluid with unerring certainty must be found to cure a host of diseases. Hence it is almost useless to enumerate the ailments against which it is a protection. Purify the blood, and every organ will be found to do its duty. Keep it pure, and the health will be impregnable. We have abundant grounds to believe the Cherry Pectoral will save more lives by the consumptions it prevents than there are cases of consumption. Every body knows that these ill comes. Every body is liable to them, and every one should be provided with a remedy. But, fortunately for us, we have in this country the most effectual remedy for them. All know the dreadful fatality of lung disease, and all know that they know the virtues of this remedy. We need not, therefore, assure them that it is still made. We have spared no pains to render it the most perfect possible, and thus afford those who rely upon it the best protection which our skill can furnish for them.

Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaint.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, D. C., Dec. 30, 1856.

SIR: I have used your Pills in my general practice for several years past, and consider them a valuable purgative. They are prompt and efficient in their operation, and in my hands have proved a safe and reliable remedy for Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaint. Very respectfully, your obedient servant, ROBERT MCCLELLAND, M. D.

Physician of the Interior Department.

Dysentery, Relax, and Worms.

POST OFFICE, HARTLAND, LIV. CO., MICH., Nov. 18, 1856.

DR. AYER: Your Pills are the perfection of medicine. They have done my wife more good than I can tell. She had been sick and pining away for months, and off to be declared at great expense, but got no better, when counsel of having your Pills, which soon cured by expelling large quantities of worms (dead) from her. They afterwards cured her and our two children of bloody dysentery. One of our neighbors had ill fever, my wife cured him with two doses of your Pills, and others around us paid from five to twenty dollars for Ayer's Pills and for nearly nine, without being cured as soon as even then. Such a medicine as yours, which is so effectual and honest will be prized here.

GEO. J. GRIFFIN, Postmaster.

Indigestion and Impurity of the Blood.

From Rev. J. V. Hines, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.

DR. AYER: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to visit in distress. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood they are the very best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends.

Yours, J. V. HINES.

WARSAW, WYOMING CO., N. Y., Oct. 24, 1853.

DEAR SIR: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system, and purify the fountains of the blood.

JOHN G. MEACHAM, M. D.

Erysipelas, Scrofula, King's Evil, Tetter, Tumors, and Salt Rheum.

From a Prominent Merchant of St. Louis, Mo.

DR. AYER: Your Pills are the greatest of all the great medicines. They have cured my little daughter of obstinate sores upon her head and feet that had proved incurable for years. Her mother has been long grievously afflicted with blotches and pimples on her skin and on her hair. After our child was cured, she also tried your Pills, and they have cured her. ASA MORRISON.

Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and Gout.

From the Rev. Dr. Hawks, of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

PLANTERS HOUSE, SAVANNAH, GA., Jan. 6, 1856.

HONORED SIR: I thought to be unmanful for the relief your skill has brought me. I did not expect they time to write a full notice in the papers, but I am so much troubled with neuralgic pains, which ended in chronic rheumatism. Notwithstanding I had the best of physicians, the disease grew worse and worse, until by the advice of your excellent agent in Baltimore, Dr. Mackenzie, I tried your Pills. Their effects were slow, but sure. By perseverring in the use of them I am now entirely well.

SENATE CHAMBER, HARRISBURG, Dec. 8, 1855.

DR. AYER: I have been entirely cured by your valuable Rheumatic Cure—a painful disease that had afflicted me for years. VINCENT SLIDELL.

For Dropsy, Plethora, or kindred Complaints, requiring an active purge, they are an excellent remedy.

For Costiveness or Constipation, and as a Dinner Pill,

they are agreeable and effectual.

Fits, Suppression, Paralysis, Inflammation, and even Deafness, and Partial Blindness, have been cured by the alterative action of these Pills.

Most of the pills in market contain Mercury, which, though a valuable remedy in skilful hands, is dangerous in a public pill, from the dreadful consequences that frequently follow its incautious use. These contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.

A MEDICAL REVOLUTION.
THE WORLD UNANIMOUS.

Holloway's Ointment.

THE GREAT COUNTER IRRITANT.

The virus of disease often makes its way to the internal organs through the pores of the skin. This penetrating Ointment, melting under the heat to which it is rubbed in, is absorbed through the same channels, and, reaching the seat of inflamation promptly, and invariably subdues it, whether located in the kidneys, the liver, the lungs, or any other important organ. It penetrates the surface of the interior, through the countless tubes that communicate with the skin as summer rain passes into the fevered earth, diffusing its cool and regenerating influence.

Skin Diseases and Glandular Swellings.

Every species of exterior irritation is quickly relieved by the anti-inflammatory action of this Ointment. Angry eruptions, such as Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Tetter, Ringworm, Scald head, Nettle Rash, Scabies (or Itch), &c., die out, to return no more, under its application. Hospital experience in all parts of the world proves its infallibility in diseases of the skin, the muscles, the joints and the glands.

ULCERS, SORES & TUMORS.

The effect of this unrivaled external remedy upon scrofula, and other virulent ulcers and sores, is almost Miraculous. It first discharges the poison which produces suppuration and proud flesh, and then cures which its healing properties after are complete are safe as well as permanent.

Wounds Bruises Burns and Scalds

In cases of the fracture of the bones, injuries caused by steam explosions, bruises, burns, scalds, rheumatism, stiffness of the joints, and contraction of the sinews, it is employed and warmly recommended by the faculty. This marvelous remedy has been introduced by its inventor in person into all the leading hospitals of Europe, and no private household should be without it.

UNDENIABLE TESTIMONY.

The medical staff of the French and English Armies in the Crimea, have officially, signed their approval of Holloway's Ointment, as the most reliable dressing for sabre cuts, stabs, and gun shot wounds. It is also used by the surgeons of the Allied Navies.

Both the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following cases.

ONLY ONE BOTTLE

DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR,

OR LIVER REMEDY.

IS Required to cure anyone troubled with Liver complaints, unless the most desperate of cases, and the Second bottle will with scarce a single failure, restore the patient to health and vigor. We wish to call the attention of all to these facts, that the Invigorator is compounded by a physician who has used it in his practice for the past twenty years with a success almost unprecedented, and that it is entirely vegetable in its composition, and free of mercury.

Some idea of the strength of these gums may be formed when it is known one bottle of the Invigorator contains as much strength as one hundred doses of Calomel without any of its deleterious effects.

One bottle is the subject thing known to carry away the fatal effects of unlawful poison of any kind

Only one bottle is required to clear out of the system the effects of medicine after a long sickness

One bottle is sufficient for jaundice removes all yellowness or unnatural redness from the skin

One dose after eating is sufficient to relieve the stomach and prevent the food from rising and sourcing

Only one dose taken before retiring prevents nightmare.

One dose taken at night loosens the bowels gently, and cures costiveness.

One dose taken of or each meal will cure Dyspepsia.

One dose of two tea spoonsful will always relieve the Sick Headache.

One bottle taken for female obstruction removes the cause of illness and causes a perfect cure.

Only one dose immediately relieves cholic, while

One dose of two spoonsful is a sure cure for Cholera Morbus, and a sure preventative.

One dose taken often will prevent the occurrence of bilious attacks, while it relieves all painful feelings.

☞Two or three doses taken occasionally is one of the best remedies for a cold ever known.

Thousands of cases of inflamation and weakness of the lungs have been cured by the Invigorator

One dose taken at the time before eating gives vigor to the appetite and makes food digest well.

One dose often repeated cures chronic Diarrhoea in its worst forms, while summer and bowel complaints yield almost to the first dose.

One or two doses cures attacks caused by worms while for women and children, there is no cure, safer and speedier remedy in the world as it never fails

There is never a operation in these statements, they are plain and sober facts, that we can give evidence to prove, while all who use it are giving their unanimous testimony in its favor.

We wish all who are sick and debilitated to try this remedy and test its thoroughly and any who are not benefited by its use we should like to hear from as we have yet to hear from the first person who has used a bottle of invigorator without receiving benefit, for if there are such, astonishing medicinal virtues in it, that, no matter how long they have been affected, if their complaint or cause is a deranged liver, will be benefited if not entirely cured

MORE BOUNTY LAND.

THE ACT OF CONGRESS, passed March 3d, 1855, gives

160 Acres of Land,

To every Officer, Soldier, Musician, in the Army, or man, Marine, Clerk, or Landsman in the Navy, who served fourteen days, or was in any battle in any war since 1790, or to their widows or minor children—embracing officers and soldiers of

WAYNE'S WAR,
WAR OF 1812,
BLACK HAWK WAR,
PATRIOT WAR,
FLORIDA WAR,
AROOSTOOK WAR,
MEXICAN WAR.

ALSO, the Revolutionary Soldiers or their Widows. In cases where 160 acres have been received under former Acts of Congress, no more can be drawn, but those who have been allowed a Warrant for 40 or 80 acres are now entitled to a Warrant for enough more to make up 160 acres.

P. S. We have faithful and experienced Agents in Washington, and we make no charge in any case unless we obtain the land.

☞The second, third or fourth marriage of a widow does not impair her claim under this act, if she is a widow at the time of her application.

Persons under the age of 21 years on the 3d of March, 1955, are regarded minors by this act.

Those having claims, will have them promptly attended to by calling on or writing (post paid,) to BILLS & BAXTER, Tecumseh.

The President, Vice Presidents, Directors, Secretary and Treasurer, constitute the Executive Committee.

CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE 1. This Society shall be called the Northern Lenawee Agricultural Society, which shall include Horticulture and the Mechanic Arts, and it shall be auxiliary to the Lenawee County Agricultural Society, and shall be composed of the towns of Franklin, Tecumseh, Ridgeway, Raisin.

ART. 2. Any person may become a member of this Society by signing this Constitution and paying into the Treasury Fifty Cents on entrance, and Fifty Cents annually thereafter.

ART. 3. There shall be an annual meeting of this Society for the election of Officers, and to transact such other business as may be thought expedient, on the 2nd Saturday of January in every year.

ART. 4. The annual meeting of this Society shall be holden at Tecumseh, but other meetings may be holden at such times and places as may be directed by the Executive Committee.

ART. 5. At the annual meeting, there shall be chosen by ballot or otherwise, by the members of this Society there assembled, one President, one Vice President from each township connected with the Association, a Recording and Corresponding Secretary, and a Treasurer, and an Executive Committee of Directors of one person from each township, and one at large, of which Committee the President, Vice President and Secretary shall be members ex officio, and any five of whom Committee shall be deemed a quorum competent to transact business.

ART. 6. There shall be an Annual Public Exhibition of Agricultural and Horticultural products, showing new and useful improvements in Husbandry, [illegible] Plowing Match, and [illegible] Premiums. Such Fair shall be held on a day [illegible] and the Executive Committee shall appoint [illegible] Boards of the

BY-LAWS AND REGULATIONS.

ART. 1. The Executive Committee shall provide suitable accommodations for the Annual Fair, and prescribe the rules and [illegible]

ART. 2. The Executive Committee shall appoint Judges who shall examine the property [illegible] persons applying for premiums at the Annual Fair, and shall determine on the judge whether any or [illegible] the applicants are entitled to a premium according to the conditions prescribed.

ART. 3. The Executive Committee may award discretionary premiums out of any unappropriated funds of the Society. All awards [illegible] be accompanied by a certificate signed by the President and Recording Secretary.

ART. 4. The Treasurer shall receive and have charge of the funds of the Society, and shall disburse the same under the direction of the Executive Committee, and report at each annual meeting.

ART. 5. Every candidate for a premium is especially requested to make his entries for the same, at the office of the Secretary, and receive his numbered certificate therefor from him, as early at least as the day before the Fair, and no entry will be received after 10 o'clock of the morning of the day of the Fair.

ART. 6. All certificates of membership shall include the family of the person to whom they are given, and shall entitle them to all the privileges of the Society.

ART. 7. No article or animal upon which a premium was given last year shall be entitled to compete for the same premium this year.

ART. 8. An Admission fee of Thirteen Cents shall be charged to all persons except members of the society and their families.

ART. 9. All articles intended for exhibition must be on the ground at 10 o'clock of the morning of the Fair, when persons will be in readiness to have them arranged in their appropriate classes.

ART. 10. No animal or article can compete for two premiums. When there is but one on exhibition it will receive the first or second premium as it may be adjudged worthy, and no premium will be awarded when the animal or article is not worthy.

ART. 11. Pedigrees of Blood and Blood Stock must be handed to the chairman of the committee of judges on the ground, if not before, otherwise no premium will be awarded.

ART. 12. Persons who enter for premium on crops, must give a full statement in writing, of the number of bushels from a given quantity of ground, the manner and expense of cultivating the crops for which they are competitors, and premiums on such crops as are not mentioned at the time of the annual Fair will be awarded by the Executive Committee at the time of the annual meeting, on a similar statement.

ART. 13. The several Judges will report themselves to the Secretary at 10 o'clock A. M., on the ground on the day of the Fair.

DR. Everson's Great American Remedy for Ague, or Chills and Fever, is the most popular and certain remedy now known. The people and the press speak of it in the highest terms of commendation. It is pleasant to take, does not purge, vomit or sweat, but invigorates the system. It contains no Arsenic, Strichnine, Quinine, or any other poisonous or injurious drug, but it is an originally discovered Antidote to Malaria and as an Ague Killer it has no equal. Call and get a circular containing certificates from Professors, Physician, Clergymen and the press.

THE PEOPLE DEMAND IT AND WILL HAVE IT.

Unmistakable Evidence of its Work and Worth.

Messrs. W. W. Roberts & Co., Druggists, of Indianapolis, sold over $20,000 worth during the great Ague season of 1855.

CERTIFICATES

Almost without number, might here be adduced, from Physicians, Clergymen, officers of State, and private individuals; but the following will suffice.

From our intimate knowledge of Dr. Everson, and the extraordinary virtues of his Ague remedy—being apprized of its constituents, and knowing, as we do, that it contains neither Arsenic, Quininine, Strichnine, Mercury or any poisonous or injurious drugs, we heartily commend it, and also his Family Phisic, or Cathartic Pills, as medicines deserving the approbation of an intelligent public.

AYER'S

CHERRY PECTORAL,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Colds, Coughs, and Hoarseness.

SHEFFIELD, Mass., 20th Dec., 1854.

DR. J. C. AYER:—I do not hesitate to say that your remedy I have used found the best Cough, Consumption, Influenza, and the commencement of symptoms of a fatal illness, CHERRY PECTORAL.—To [illegible] you in my immediate neighborhood, and the last year has shown it to possess much the virtues for the treatment of these complaints. HIRAM KNIGHT, M. D.

A. B. MORTLEY, Esq., of Utica, N. Y., writes:—I have used your PECTORAL myself and in my family ever since you [illegible] it, and believe it the best medicine for its purposes ever put out. While a boy I had [illegible] severe bronchial affection, for a bottle than do without it, I take any other remedy."

Croup, Whooping Cough, Influenza.

BRISTOL, Conn., Jan. 1856.

HONORED SIR:—I will cheerfully certify your PECTORAL is the best remedy we possess for the cure of Whooping Cough, Croup, and the short diseases of children. Will your fraternity in the South appreciate your skill, and commend your medicine to our people.

HIRAM CONKLIN, M. D.

AMOS LEE, Esq., MOOSEHEAD, Me., writes, 2d Jan., 1856: "I had a terrible Influenza, which [illegible] me to keep my bed six weeks; took many medicines without relief; finally tried your PECTORAL by the advice of our clergyman. The first dose relieved the soreness in my throat and lungs; less than one half the bottle made me completely well. Your medicines are the cheapest as well as the best we can buy, and we esteem you, Doctor, and your remedies, as the poor man's friend."

Asthma or Phthisic, and Bronchitis.

WEST MANCHESTER, Pa., Feb. 2, 1856.

SIR: Your CHERRY PECTORAL is performing unrivalled cures in this section. It has relieved several from alarming symptoms of consumption, and is now curing a lady who has labored under an affection of the lungs for the last forty years. HENRY L. PARKER, Agent.

A. A. RAMSEY, M. D., ALBION, MONROE Co., N. Y., writes, Sept. 6, 1855: "During my practice of many years I have found nothing equal to your CHERRY PECTORAL for giving ease and relief to consumptive patients, or curing such as are curable."

We might add volumes of evidence, but the most convincing proof of the virtues of this remedy is found in its effects upon trial.

Consumption.

Probably no one remedy has ever been known which cured so many and such dangerous cases as this. Some no human aid can reach; but even to those the CHERRY PECTORAL affords relief and comfort.

ASTOR HOUSE, NEW YORK CITY, March 5, 1856.

DOCTOR AYER, LOWELL: I feel it a duty and a pleasure to inform you what your CHERRY PECTORAL has done for my wife. She had been five months laboring under the dangerous symptoms of Consumption, from which no aid we could procure gave her much relief. She was steadily failing, until Dr. Strong, of this city, where we have come for advice, recommended a trial of your medicine. We bless his kindness, as we do your skill, for she has recovered from that day. She is not yet as strong as she used to be, but is free from her cough and calls herself well.

Yours with gratitude and regard,
ORLANDO SHERMAN, of SHELBYVILLE.

Consumptives, do not despair till you have tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It is made by one of the best [illegible] chemists in the world, and its cures all around it bespeak the high merits of its virtues.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

THE sciences of Chemistry and Medicine have [illegible] taxed their utmost to produce this best, most perfect purgative which is known to man. Innumerable proofs are shown that these PILLS have virtues which surpass in excellence the ordinary medicines, and that they win unprecedentedly upon the esteem of all men. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. Their penetrating properties stimulate the vital activities of the body, remove the obstructions of its organs, purify the blood, and expel disease. They purge out the foul humors which breed and grow distemper, stimulate sluggish or disordered organs into their natural action, and impart healthy tone with strength to the whole system. Not only do they cure the every-day complaints of every body, but also formidable and dangerous diseases that have baffled the best of human skill. While they produce powerful effects, they are at the same time, in diminished doses, the safest and best physic that can be employed for children. Being sugar-coated, they are pleasant to take, and being purely vegetable, are free from any risk of harm. Cures have been made which surpass belief were they not substantiated by men of such exalted position and character as to forbid the suspicion of untruth. Many eminent clergymen and physicians have lent their names to testify to the public the reliability of my remedies, while others have sent me the assurance of their conviction that my Preparations contribute immediately to the relief of the afflicted, suffering fellow-men.

The Agent below named is pleased to furnish gratis my American Almanac, containing directions for their use, and certificates of their cures, of the following complaints: Costiveness, Bilious Complaints, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Heartburn, Headache arising from a foul Stomach, Sick Headache, Indigestion, Morbid inaction of the Bowels and Piles arising therefrom, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, all Worms and Cutaneous Diseases which require an occasional dose of Medicine, Scrofula or King's Evil. They also by purifying the blood and stimulating the system, cure many complaints which it would not be supposed they could reach, such as Deafness, Partial Blindness, Neuralgia or Nervous Irritability, Derangements of the Liver and Kidneys, Gout, and other kindred complaints arising from a low state of the body or obstruction of its functions.

Do not be put off by unprincipled dealers with something other pill they make more profit on. Ask for AYER'S PILLS, and take nothing else. No other they can give you compares with this in its intrinsic value or cures its powers. The sick want the best and there is for them, and they should have it.

The Great Family Weekly Paper.

THE NEW YORK LEDGER has now attained the extraordinary circulation of One Hundred and Ninety Thousand copies. The LEDGER is devoted to POLITE LITERATURE, ORIGINAL TALES, SKETCHES, POETRY, ESSAYS, GOSSIP, CURRENT NEWS and maintains a high moral tone. It is every where acknowledged to be the best family paper in the world. Hence its extraordinary and unheard of popularity. MRS. EMMELINE BONNER, the Proprietor of the LEDGER employs the best talent in the country, and by so doing makes the best paper. Such writers as Fanny Fern, Sylvanus Cobb, Jr., and Emerson Bennett, are engaged on it, and will write for no other paper hereafter. Mrs. Sigourney, also, constantly writes for it; so do a host of other popular authors, including Mrs. Emma E. N. Southworth, Alice Cary, Mrs. Vaney, Mary W. Stanley Gibson, Clara Sydney, &c., &c. The LEDGER is beautifully illustrated every week.

The N. Y. LEDGER is printed on beautiful white paper, and is composed of eight pages, making the handsomest weekly paper in the country. It is published every Saturday, and sold at all the news offices in every city and town throughout the country, and is mailed for subscribers at two dollars per annum; two copies are sent for three dollars. Any person obtaining eight subscribers at $1 each (which is our lowest club rates,) and sending us $12 will be entitled to one copy free. Terms invariably in advance. Address all letters to ROBERT BONNER, Publisher of N. Y. LEDGER, 44 Ann Street, New York.

N. B.—Now is a good time to subscribe. EMMESON BENNET'S Great Original Novel of Frontier Life will be commenced in the LEDGER on the first of January.

EMIGRATION WESTWARD.—Such emigration was never known in the history of the world, as is now pouring into the Mississippi valley. The hands are here, and they want land to till. Hundreds of thousands are filling their new lands, and they demand new towns to trade with and sell their products to. This is a sound state of things. It betokens no undue excitement, and bodes no ruin to the West. There can be no back-set to the West, until good western farming lands get far above the price of good farming lands in the Eastern States.—There must be an equilibrium before there can be a revolution. While good farms in New England, Ohio, or Kentucky command $40 per acre, and equally good—nay, far better—lands can be had for $5 to $10 in the Western States, the rush of emigration must still go on, and the West grow daily richer, and stronger, and greater.—St. Louis Intelligencer.

ANOTHER EXPEDITION IN SEARCH OF SIR JOHN FRANKLIN.—The London Times of the 15th ult., announces that Lady Franklin has embarked the last relic of her fortune in another expedition to the polar regions, in search of Sir John Franklin and his company. The expedition is to be directed to that particular spot where tidings would most likely be expected from the Esquimaux of the lost voyagers. The Times says.

The expedition we believe is to be a Quixotic one; but who will venture to speak with disrespect, or even with indifference, of the efforts—aye, of the desperation of Lady Franklin in such a cause? Looking at the matter as one of plain common sense, we believe that speedier and cheaper access to the region in question might be obtained by overland and smaller excursions from the extreme settlements of the Hudson's Bay Company; but Lady Franklin has resolved upon a final expedition by sea, and therefore we can only say "God speed" to the adventurers in so noble a cause. Public assistance to this bereaved lady might have been given in one way. What if the old Resolute had been handed over to her as a gift from the English public: The sea-battered and ice-worn ship might thus have been turned to some account, and Lady Franklin might possibly have been saved some expense. We can form no favorable expectations as to the results which may be looked for from this last Arctic Expedition; but as far as Lady Franklin is concerned, she has every right to the sympathy of her fellow countrymen.

ANOTHER SLAVER.—The New York Times says the Bark Minnetoka, which left New York in the latter part of March, is reported to have gone on a slave expedition to Africa. Some suspicion attached to her before her departure, but not sufficient to cause a close watch to be kept upon her movements. She cleared for St. Thomas and a market. A house in Havana purchased the Minnetoka just previous to her departure, by privateering from Castrol & Co. of this city, the former owners. The vessel formerly was employed in the West India trade. She is a stout square built bark of 284 tons. She was built in 1852. She was sold to her present owners for $13,000. The names of these owners are not given.

The New York ticket swindlers proposed to freeze 150 passengers in a California steamer, by pretending to ranch agencies, buying tickets at sale, and dividing the profits with purchaser, and distributing a warning st bogus agencies, at the same time they make their sales.

The Democrat published a letter from several citizens of Lawrence, Kansas, to Secretary Stanton, stating that if the following course be adopted they will go into election of delegates: Two persons, one of each party to be selected from each District to correct registry list. They to proceed together to register legal voters. The Probate Judges to correct lists and the appointments, to be made according to these returns. Four Judges of election, two from each party to be elected in each precinct and the names of three of said Judges to be required on a certificate to entitle any person to a seat in the convention. Later advices state that Stanton has declined to accede to the proposition.

THE GARROTTE IN BOSTON.—A CITIZEN ROBBED OF $1,100.—About nine o'clock last evening, as Mr Cyrus Smith, a trader of Piermont, N. H., was passing near the corner of Brookline and Tremont streets, he was attacked by three men, one or whom clasped him arouned the body, while another covered his mouth and throttled him. Mr. Smith was thrown down, when a scuffle very naturally ensued, in which Mr. Smith was robbed of a memorandum book containing $1100 in bills of the Bradford Bank, of Bradford, Vt. Mr. Smith arrived in town yesterday afternoon, visiting the city for the purpose of purchasing goods, and was with his wife stopping at the house of a friend, a short distance from the scene of the robbery.

This is certainly one of the boldest robberies on record, and as the first case of genuine garotting which has occurred in Boston, will mark an epoch in our criminal calender. The robbers have not yet been arrested, and are entiely unknown.

The Times' correspondent states that a proposal had been drawn up, but the terms were kept secret. It is said to be that the representatives of the four powers declare that they have done their best to exact an arrangement between the Confederation and Prussia, by settling the question in dispute between them in the best way it could be done in their judgment.

They offer the settlement they have made to be contending parties for their acceptance and strongly recommended them to do so; if however they refuse to accept the propositions, and such refusals should be followed with measures of hostile character, the four powers will do their best to prevent hostilities breaking out between the two nations.

The Conference had re-assembled at Paris. Hopes were entertained of an amicable settlement of the question in dispute.

ANOTHER COAL MINE.—The Citizen is informed that another rich vein of coal has been opened in Jackson county, half a mile west of Barry village and six miles from Jackson city. It is situated on the farm of Mr. Olcott, and the 'pit,' is within thirty rods of the track of the Michigan Central Railroad. The shaft has been sunk about twelve feet, and the supply of coal appears to be large and lasting. In quality it is about the same as that taken from other veins near that city. The coal upon the bank at the mouth of the mine, looks fresh and rich as any specimens we have ever seen.

New Jersey Pearl Fisheries.

The muscle catchers along the shores of New Jersey have been finding pearls. The Patterson Guardian, of a recent date, states that last week a Mr. Hower, whose family have been connected with the search from the beginning and have been employed in comfortable circumstances, made three hundred dollars from his search, in pearls:

"The largest pearl yet found was one ruined by boiling. The man tried to boil the clams first and afterwards attempted to try them tender. The pearl meanwhile going through the heating process, and was of course destroyed, although $25 was paid for it as a curiosity on account of its large size. It was of a perfect shape, and evidently of great beauty. The next largest was that found by young Quackenbush, which has been sent to Paris by Tiffany or Ball, Black & Co., both of which firms have been anxious to secure these pearls. Last week quite a number of persons from New York were on the grounds searching for pearls without success; while one of the Patterson men went behind them and found one which readily brought $100.—But the proprietors of the grounds have forbidden trespassers, the muscles have mostly disappeared from the vicinity, and we believe the pearl fishery will soon be at an end. The most unfortunate fact, is the destruction of the largest and most perfect specimen by the boiling as above. Mr. Luverack declares that it could not have been worth less than $25,000, and it would have been the pearl Kohinor of the world."

From Kansas.

LEAVENWORTH CITY, April 30.

Secretary Stanton acting Governor of Kansas, arrived in Lawrence from Topeka on Friday last, and was entertained by Governor Robinson. In the evening it was reported that he would speak at the Cincinnatti House, whether a large number, over 1000 let ock themselves.

About 8 o'clock Gov Robinson stepped toward and introduced Mr. Stanton, as the present Governor of Kansas, and b bespoke for him an attentive hearing.

In opening his address the Secretary repudiated the title of Governor. He was but an humble Secretary upon whom the arduous responsibilities and lofty honors of the Gubernatorial office had fallen but temporarily. While the real Governor, the Hon Robert J. Walker, was a man of gigantic ability and varied accomplishments, a man who stood upon the highest pinnacle of fame, and the light of whose genius irradiated an entire continent.

Mr Walker, continued the Secretary, is appreciated not only in this Republic, but in Europe; and his services are eagerly sought by both England and France in the adjustment of the great "Eastern Question." But he, with a lofty patriotism, worthy of such a noble character, was det rained in "saving his own country," before he turned his attention to the intricate entanglements of European matters. Therefore had he accepted the Governorship of Kansas, and therefore was he coming out here for the express purpose of devoting himself entire to the securing of peace and quiet, and to the settlement of the conflicting interests which have met so frequently in jarring antagonism.

Mr Stanton continued in this strain for upwards of half or three quarters of an hour, eulogizing the apostate Walker to the skies, and placing him among the loftiest patriots of this or any other time. The audience took the "large dose" complacently enough, though it acted like an emetic. Branching off, at last, from the Governor, he devoted himself to elucidating his views and explaining his policy.—He told how in the lower House, when the Kansas Nebraska Bill was being debated, he had foretold the effect, and prophesied that it would make Kansas a Free State. And this prediction he felt would be verified. For though he was a pro Slavery man, and would vote to make Kansas a Slave State if he had a vote, yet as an officer, he would act impartially and bend his energies to the enforcement of the laws. The Federal laws must be obeyed, and he had come to see that they were enforced.

The audience responded, "That's right, we'll help you enforce them; they shall have our cordial support." "And the enactments of the Territorial (bogus) Legislature must also be obeyed," addressed the Secretary!

"Never!" "Never!" "Never!" Never!" broke out from every part of the audience.

"Then you and I," continued Mr Stanton, growing much excited and looking very pale, "are, at was upon that point; but I shall spill every drop of blood in my body but what the laws shall be enforced."

"Can't do it, old fellow;" Like to see you try;" "Go on," and "Pitch in," responded the auditory.

"Henceforth," said the speaker, "we understand each other, and there will be war to the knife unless you come under."

"Come on, then," said an old man, drawing his knife, "if you want to try that game."

"I did not come armed, resumed Mr. Stanton, "and I have neither a revolver nor bowie knife about me—nothing but this, (showing a small pen-knife,) for I thought my life would not be endangered in Lawrence. (Cries of "Bah!" "Oh, please!" and "Humbug!") But it will be useless to attempt to resist the authorities, for you will not be fighting with the Government nor the Federal Government—but with the mighty and irresistible Federal Government itself. Yes, the United States forces will compel you to succumb."

Great excitement ensued hereupon—the audience hissing, laughing and exclaiming, come on with your troops;" "We are ready to fight with the Federal Government; it is the biggest Border Ruffian we have."

Gov. Robinson at last came foward, begged his hearers to let Mr Stanton proceed, and to answer him when he finished.

Mr. Stanton having cooled down a little, in recommencing, asked his hearers if they would pay taxes to the Territorial (bogus) officers.

"Never!" they replied. "No bogus officers shall come about us. We will pay taxes to the U. S. officers, and to no one else."

Mr. Stanton then urged the Free State men to vote for delegates to the Constitutional Convention.

"No list has been taken," said one of the audience, "and therefore we are not qualified electors."

Mr. S.—Go to the Probate Judge and get your names inserted.

Free State Speaker.—We have no Probate Judge to go to. Now what do you advise us to do?

Mr. S.—I don't know; You are a queer set, and I can't understand you.

Mr. Stanton countinued his speech, treating of general topics, and finally closed by reading a passage from Hiawatha, in which the Indians are exhorted to wash the war paint from their faces, and smoke the pipe of peace.

What the South thinks of 1860.

Every political event, movement and indication at this time in the North, unite in confirming the prediction we made as soon as Mr. Buchanan's election was established, that the Black Republican cause far from disbanding, would undertake preparations for the battle of 1860 with renewed vigor, and more determination and zeal than ever. Though they failed to elect their President, yet they were signally triumphant in consolidating such an extended and serried political organization as was never before effected within the same brief period. They were not beaten; they yielded no inch of advantage ground; they encamped upon the battle field, and are now defiantly flaunting their black banners across our lines in Maryland, Virginia and Missouri.

They have sworn never to lay down their arms, these enemies of the South. They hate her with a Carthaginian hatred. By the Black God they worship they have sworn to conquer her in 1860. They are heightening their weapons every day. The tramping of their gathering hosts may be heard on every Northern plain. The toesin of war sounds shrilly through every Northern valley. Their camp fires burn all along the Southern border, and in one place they have already crossed the boundary and established outposts upon Southern territory. They have never been known to take a step backward, and their order of march is still Southward.

The National Democratic party has no longer any rational hope to hold out to the South. The South gave it victory in 1856, and she has tasted none of the fruits of victory yet, but Dead-Sea ashes. Another such victory would leave her naked, to starve upon the desert.

Pennsylvania was carried for Mr. Buchanan by a liberal tax upon the Democratic office holders. Is it at all reasonable that they would again undergo such a tax, with the certainty that the candidate they were thus aiding to elect would cut their own heads off? Is it more reasonable, on the contrary, that many of them would listen favorably to the overtures of the enemy to sell their party for their offices? Assuredly it is as the morals of politics go now-a days.

Meantime, we have this to say: The issue is distinctly made between the North and South; it is a life-and-death contest, and, with her present resources, the South cannot conquer in the Union. If she is to be saved, she must work out her own salvation; her own foresight must be her providence—her own will her destiny.

Fatal Accident on the Southern Railroad.

The night express going west, on the above road, on Tuesday night, met with a sad accident between Toledo and Adrian and about twelve miles from the latter place, near a private crossing, where a man had crossed the track just before dark, and left the bars down. A cow thus got upon the track, and was struck by the engine. After dragging her for some distance, the tender was thrown off the track, and the fore part of the first passenger car, having broken an axle, was thrown off into a ditch, tearing its rear across the track. The second passenger car then ran against the hind end of the first, staving it clear into the baggage car in advance, instantly killing five persons which were in the first car, and seriously injuring several others. A gentleman named Joseph Gillespie, and his wife from Mercer county, Pa., on their way to settle in Wisconsin, together with one of their children, some eighteen months old, were among the killed, leaving another child some three years old unharmed.—Another man name unknown, was killed. And his brother horribly mangled, he was from Wayne county, New York, bound to Wisconsin; was some thirty years of age, heavy black beard and moustache, and well dressed in black. Lastly, a child some eighteen months old, of Mrs Ellen F Brown, was killed in its mother's arms. This Mrs Brown, together with her mother, Mrs. Palmiter, were quite seriously injured. Mr. P., his wife and two boys, with Mrs. Brown were emigrating from New Lyme, Ashtabula county, Ohio to Sheboygan county, Wis.

DR. Everson's Great American Remedy for Ague & Chills and Fever, is the most popular and certain remedy now known. The people and the press speak of it in the highest terms of commendation. It is pleasant to take, does not purge, vomit or sicken, but invigorates the system. It contains no Arsenic, Strichnine, Quinine, or any other poisonous or injurious drug, but it is an originally discovered Antidote to Malaria and as an Ague Killer it has no equal. Call and get a circular containing certificates from Professors, Physician, Clergymen and the press.

THE PEOPLE DEMAND IT AND WILL HAVE IT.

Unmistakable Evidence of its Work and Worth.

Messrs. W. W. Roberts & Co., Druggists, of Indianapolis, sold over $20,000 worth during the great Ague season of 1855. CERTIFICATES

Almost without number, might here be adduced, from Physicians, Clergymen, officers of State, and private individuals; but the following will suffice:

From our intimate knowledge of Dr. Everson, and the extraordinary virtues of his Ague remedy—being apprized of its constituents, and knowing, as we do, that it contains neither Arsenic, Quinine, Strichnine, Mercury or any poisonous or injurious drugs, we heartily commend it, and also his Family, Bilious, or Cathartic Pills, as medicines deserving the approbation of an intelligent public.

Thos. Cooke, M. D., Prof. of Theory and Practice of Medicine, E. M. C., Philadelphia.
Jos. Sites, M. D., Prof. of Obstetrics & Diseases of Women and Children, Philadelphia.
John T. Walsh, M. D., Prof. of Anatomy and Physiology, Richmond, Va.
Harvey B. Benham, A. M., M. D., West Chester, O. Huntington, In., June 4, 1856.

GENTS:—Having last season, during the scarcity of Quinine, in this region, used in my practice some of your medicine in the treatment of Ague and Intermittents, and being pleased with their prompt operation in the cases in which they were tried, I have concluded to use them in my practice. DR. EVERSON'S HEALTH RESTORATIVE PILLS,

Is the Cheapest and Best Family Physic

Or Anti-Dyspeptic & Anti-Bilious Medicine Now Known.

They combine power with mildness of action;
They do not gripe or debilitate the Patient;
They excite the stomach, liver and bowels to a healthy action;
They strengthen the digestive organs, and improve the appetite;
They remove obstructions from the liver, and thus cleans and purify the blood; remove Liver Complaints, Dyspepsia, Bilious Disorders, Costiveness, Piles, Headache, Dizziness, Sour and Stomach Weariness, Sallow Complexion and Colic.

Their gentleness of action admits of their being used while traveling or attending to business. Females instead of getting Bled should use these Pills. They will give you the relief you desire, immediately and pleasantly. They are safe in all cases. They will remove those PAIN'S in the SIDE and BACK, and other difficulties and weaknesses—Cold Feet and hands, Palpitation of the Heart, Enlarged Veins and Swellings. No Lady will ever be Without them after a single trial.

They do not force, but assist, nature. Very eminent physicians use them, and testify that they give more satisfaction to them and their patients, than any physic they ever knew. They are, truly a FAMILY MEDICINE.

Highly esteemed for their rare virtues. They contain no Mercury,—are entirely Vegetable and are scientifically compounded from the best articles in the Materia Medica.

Only 25 cents per Box, or 5 Boxes for $1.00. For sale by Druggists and dealers generally. PROPRIETORS, EVERSON & CO., No. 7 South 6th st., Philadelphia.

AYER'S

CHERRY PECTORAL,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Colds, Coughs, and Consumption.

BREWSTER, Mass., March 6, 1856.
DR. J. C. AYER:—I do not hesitate to say the Lord's remedy, I have ever found the Cherry Pectoral, Influenza, and the consumption of the throat and lungs, to yield to its power more readily than to that. I have ever found in the Cherry Pectoral. In several cases in my own family, and in the case of my wife, it has proved a sure remedy for the most obstinate coughs, colds, and consumption. SAMUEL KNIGHT, M. D.

A. B. MORTLEY, Esq., of Mexico, N. Y., writes, "I have used your Cherry Pectoral myself and in my practice for the last two years, and find it the best medicine for all diseases of the throat and lungs that I have ever used, and I prefer it to any other remedy."

Croup, Whooping Cough, Influenza.

BROWN AYER:—I will cheerfully certify your Pectoral is the best remedy we possess for the cure of Whooping Cough, Croup, and the other diseases of children. We of your fraternity in the North appreciate your skill, and commend your medicines to our people.

HIRAM CONKLIN, M. D.

AMOS LEE, Esq., Mowkeset, R. I., writes, 2d Jan., 1856: "I had a tedious Influenza, which confined me to my house six weeks; took many medicines without relief; finally tried your Pectoral, by the advice of our clergyman, and the first dose relieved the soreness in my throat and lungs; less than one half the bottle made me completely well. Your medicines are the cheapest as well as the best we can buy, and we esteem you, Doctor, and your remedies, as the poor man's friend."

Asthma or Phthisic, and Bronchitis.

SIR: Your CHERRY PECTORAL is performing marvellous cures in this section. It has relieved several from alarming symptoms of consumption, and is now curing a man who has labored under an affection of the lungs for the last forty years. HENRY L. PARKS, Merchant.

A. A. RAMSEY, M. D., ALBION, Monroe Co., Iowa, writes, Sept. 6, 1856: "During my practice of many years, I have found nothing equal to your CHERRY PECTORAL for allaying pains and relief to consumptive patients, or curing such as are curable."

We might add volumes of evidence, but the most convincing proof of the virtues of this remedy is found in its effects upon trial.

Consumption.

Probably no one remedy has ever been known which cured so many and such dangerous cases as this. Scarce no human aid can reach; but even to those the CHERRY PECTORAL affords relief and comfort.

ASTOR HOUSE, NEW YORK CITY, March 8, 1856.
DOCTOR AYER, LOWELL: I feel it a duty and a pleasure to inform you what your CHERRY PECTORAL has done for my wife. She had been five months laboring under the dangerous symptoms of Consumption, from which no aid we could procure gave her much relief. She was steadily failing, until Dr. Strong, of this city, whose skill we have confidence in, recommended a trial of your medicine. We bless his kindness, as we do your skill, for she has recovered from that day. She is not yet as strong as she used to be, but is free from her cough, and walks herself well.

Yours with gratitude and regard,
ORLANDO SHELBY, of SEVASTYHL.

Consumptives, do not despair till you have tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It is made by one of the best medical chemists in the world, and its cures all around us bespeak the high merits of its virtues.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills.

THE sciences of Chemistry and Medicine have been taxed their utmost to produce this best, most perfect purgative which is known to man. Innumerable proofs are shown that these PILLS have virtues which surpass in excellence the ordinary medicines, and that they win unprecedentedly upon the esteem of all men. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. Their penetrating properties stimulate the vital activities of the body, remove the obstructions of its organs, purify the blood, and expel disease. They purge out the foul humors which breed and grow distempers, stimulate sluggish or disordered organs into their natural action, and impart healthy tone with strength to the whole system. Not only do they cure the every-day complaints of every body, but also formidable and dangerous diseases that have baffled the best of human skill. While they produce powerful effects, they are at the same time, so diminished doses, the safest and best physic that can be employed for children. Being sugar-coated, they are pleasant to take; and being purely vegetable, are free from any risk of harm. Cures have been made which surpass belief were they not substantiated by men of such exalted position and character as to forbid the suspicion of untruth. Many eminent clergymen and physicians have lent their names to certify to the public the reliability of my remedies, while others have sent me the assurance of their conviction that my Preparations controlled immensely to the relief of afflicted, suffering fellowmen.

The Agent below named is pleased to furnish gratis my American Almanac, containing directions for their use and certificates of their cures of the following complaints:—Costiveness, Bilious Complaints, Rheumatism, Dropsy, Heartburn, Headache arising from a foul Stomach, Nausea, Indigestion, Morbid Inaction of the Bowels and Pain arising therefrom, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, all Ulcerous and Cutaneous Diseases which require an evacuant Medicine, Scrofula or King's Evil. They also, by purifying the blood and stimulating the system, cure many complaints which it would not be supposed they could reach, such as Deafness, Partial Blindness, Neuralgia and Nervous Irritability, Derangements of the Liver and Kidneys, Gout, and other kindred complaints arising from a low state of the body or obstruction of its functions.

Do not be persuaded by unprincipled dealers (with some other pill they make more profit on), to take AYER'S Pills, and take nothing else. No other they can give you compares with this in its intrinsic value or curative powers. The sick want the best and there is for them, and they should have it.

Lenawee county, Mich.,

From original surveys and actual measurement throughout the whole county by Bechler and Wenig, Surveyors and Civil Engineers. Assisted by Mapmakers and Draftsmen from the County Surveyor's office, Lenawee Co., Mich.

The subscribers who are now engaged in compiling a map of Lenawee County since 14 months, are about to review the whole work in order to correct even the slightest error, if any should have occured. The same time they will obtain subscribers for the enterprise, which is connected with immense labor and expense."

The Map is about 44×5 feet in size, and contains every public road with all its variations, the localities of Dwellings, places of Worship, Post Offices, and School Houses, Stores, Mills, Shops, &c; also, section and farm lines with the owner's name engraved to it; Views of Public buildings, Plans of every village in the County on the margin, forming not only a correct and complete, but also an ornamental Map, and will be handsomely colored, mounted and furnished to subscribers for $5 per copy.

BECHLER, WENIG & CO.,
Adrian & Philadelphia.

The undersigned having examined Messrs. Bechler & Wenig's Surveys of Lenawee Co., take pleasure in recommending their Map to the citizens of this County, as being in our opinion, a very accurate, reliable and practical Map, and complete County Directory, and well worthy their liberal patronage. Considering the expense attending its survey, procuring so accurately all the names, localities, distances, town plats, farm lines, &c., etc., and the limited sale it must necessarily meet with "on account of its being entirely local work" we think they offer it

Death on the Pave.

BY ANNANIAS W. SAWYER.

"The lifeless and emaciated body of a little beggar girl, apparently eight or nine years of age, was found this morning in Broadway by one of the city watch. Name of the child unknown."

Friendless and shelterless,
Out in the storm,
On the cold stones she laid
Down her weak form.
Worn out with suffering,
Hunger and woe,
Sunk she to struggle with
Mortals' dread foe.

Crouched neath the threshold of Affluence,
Her scared spirit in the night
Gained its release.
Fled from the tenement,
Shunken and worn,
That the first passer by
Found in the morn.

Oh! what a death it was!
Out on the stone,
Out in the tempest wild,
Dying alone.
Freighted with agonies,
Covered with sleet,
Dying amid the gloom,
Out in the street.

Jehovah's orphan child,
Freed from her pain,
Cruel tongue never will
Taunt her again.
From his dominion gone,
And his reign o'er.
Will pray on her fragle frame
Famine no more.

Fatherless, motherless,
Never the query
Of the hard-hearted will
Bring more the tear.
Ne'er will her plaintive voice
In the street sound,
Pleading for succor that
Rarely she found.

Gone to the Shepherd's fold,
Earth's trials done;
Gone to a better world,
Silent, alone.
Ended thy miseries,
Nameless thy grave,
Heaven will cherish thee,
Child of the pave.

An Heiress Elopement.

The citizens of Xenia have been greatly agitated by a very strange case of elopement, that has turned up in their midst, during the present week. The parties are a Miss Sallie Martin, aged seventeen years, and a man named Boyd, of rather doubtful repute and of bad association. Miss Martin is the daughter of the late Dr. Martin, of Xenia, and is worth, in her own right, some $70,000. She has been of late under the care of two maiden aunts, who have raised her in total seclusion from company. Miss Sallie became acquainted with Boyd about a month since, and notwithstanding the vigilance of her guardians managed to have stolen interviews with him at certain intervals.

On Tuesday morning last it was discovered that the young lady and her lover had fled. The entire community was thrown into a furor of excitement, and arrangements were made to pursue the fugitives, and if possible, bring Boyd to justice. It was ascertained that they had taken the night train to Springfield, and passed the night at the Werden House in that city. The pursuers then left for Urbana, for which place Boyd and his victim had departed. Here they were again too late, as Boyd, after making an attempt to procure a marriage license, had hurried on to some other point. In his application to the proper authorities at Urbana, Boyd swore to the young lady's age as being eighteen years, but being rather closely questioned by the Judge, became frightened at the prospect of a charge of perjury, to which he had laid himself open, and tearing up the license, left the office in a hurry.

The citizens of Xenia have made the matter a community affair, and should Boyd, who has made himself obnoxious to them in more ways than one, fall into their hands, they will fix him securely in some way or other. The affair is said to have made lively times among the Xenianites.—Cinn Times.

BAUTIFUL SENTIMENT.—This little gem, which contains so much truth, is from the London Times. It is worth reading and worth keeping:

"There is a voice within me,
And 'tis so sweet a voice,
That Be soft lispings win me,
Till tears start to mine eyes.
Deep from my soul it springeth,
Like hidden melody;
And evermore it singeth
This song of songs to me:
'This world is full of beauty,
As other worlds above;
And if we did our duty,
It might be full of love.'"

'I am afraid of the lightning,' murmured a pretty young coquette, during a storm. Well you may be, sighed a despairing lover, 'when your heart is steel.'

Go Back, Rose: You're too Little to Come.

BY ELLEN LOUISA CHANDLER.

There were three of us—Kate, Annette and myself, and we were going into the old wood to hunt strawberries. Oh! it was such a delicious day in June. The birds sang till the air was fairly vocal with their melody, and all the green trees nodded their heads in approbation. The very brook seemed to have caught the general inspiration, and danced along through the meadows as if keeping time to a quick-step of the fairies.

Annette Summers and I had been invited to spend the half holiday with our schoolmate Kate Harrington. Deacon Harrington's old fashioned brown house fronted towards the south. Behind it, stretched a broad, green meadow, and still further back was a densely wooded acclivity, famous for flowers and berries in the geography of every child in Ryefield. I used to love to look at Deacon Harrington's old brown house, even in those early days when I had not a single well defined notion of artistic taste in my curly head. I know that it combined to an eminent degree the elements of the picturesque. The low roof which sloped backward nearly to the ground was gray with moss. Ivy crept about the windows, and over the rustic porch had twined climbing roses along with heavy clusters of trumpet creepers.

There was a rude seat at the doorway, made of the little bogus of the white birch twisted together in fantastic fashion, and here Grandmother Harrington was wont to sit, with her grey woolen knitting work. Oh! what a treat we used to think it was to spend a half holiday with Kate Harrington.

'I wish I were you Kate,' exclaimed Annette, after we had spent half the long summer afternoon chasing butterflies, and arranging a vegetable baby house, with hollyhocks for our ladies' parasols, and and teapots manufactured out of veritable poppy pods 'I wish I were you, and then I could be happy all day long, with nothing to trouble me.'

'You could, could you?' and Kate's cheeks flushed as she put away from them her heavy bonds of black hair, 'you think so, and that's all you know about it. I have a thousand things to vex me. There's Rose, for instance. Mother expects me to be constantly taking care of her, and she's the greatest little torment you ever saw. By the way, girls let's start after those strawberries in the wood, now she's out of sight for a minute, so she won't tease to go with us.'

We were just half way across the meadow, when we heard a sweet voice crying, 'Please, sister Kate, Rose wants to go too.'

I turned round, I remember, and thought how beautiful was the little creature coming towards us. She was very unlike her sister Kate. Kate was a brunette, but the little white-robed figure tripping across the meadow had a pale, spiral face, and long curls of golden hair falling to her tiny waist. There was a flush on her cheek, a look of eager, beseeching interest in her large blue eyes; and as she stretched her dimpled arms towards us, and kept crying in her earnestness:

'Please girls, wait for Rose.'

A look of vexation crossed Kate's face and she called out in a tone of extreme irritability.

'Go back, Rose, you're to little to come. Go back! go back!'

Kate always had a way of being of being minded, and the little one put her fingers to her eyes, and silently turned towards the house. We hurried on in the direction of the wood, without giving a single glance backward. I think Kate's conscience reproached her for her selfishness, and I know my pleasures were spoiled for the afternoon. We found plenty of strawberries, red and ripe among their beds of leaves. There was little blue eyed blossoms, too, that kept reminding me of Rosie, and I was not sorry when sunset shadows lengthened, and we turned to go home.

We had gone down the hill out of the wood, and crossed several rods of the meadow-land, when Kate said in a hoarse whisper—'See there girls, what is that white thing by the brook? Do you see it?'

We saw it and hurried towards it. It was Rose. At first we thought she was dead. Scarcely seemed the faintest breath to steal from her parted lips, and the pulsations of the heart were so weak that you scarcely felt them. She was in a kind of a trance-like sleep. It was some time before we succeeded in waking her and then her limbs seemed chilled and stiffened by the subtile dampness of the meadow-land atmosphere. She could not stand. How many times that afternoon the little darling had begged us to make a chair' for her with our hands, and we had answered that we could not stop.—We made her one now. She twined her dimple arms about our necks, and held on very tight; she didn't speak, except once, and then she only said, 'ain't I most big enough, sister Kate?'

Mrs Harrington met us at the door with a look of alarm.

'Good heavens, Kate!' she exclaimed 'what's the matter with Rose?' And taking the child from our arms she discovered that her clothes were almost saturated with moisture. 'Kate, child why don't you speak? Has Rose been in the water.

'No ma'am, but she went into the meadow and got to sleep, and we found her there sleeping.'

* * * * * *

Oh, there were anxious hearts in Deacon Harrington's brown house that night. Very tenderly was the suffering little Rose cradled on her mother's breast, but not once did she speak coherently. Her cheeks burned and her eyes sparkled with fever; her dimpled arms were tossed above her head, and every little while, between her moans, she would stretch out her hands towards some imaginary object, and say: 'Please sister Kate, ins't Rose most big enough?'

Three days passed—days of incessant watching and weariness, and towards evening the little Rose opened her blue eyes after a restless slumber. She seemed much better, and the mother glanced hopefully up to the kind physician bending over her.

'I cannot say she's better, madam.—God knows I wish I could; but Rose must die before midnight!' and the tears stood in glittering drops on the good man's cheek.

The morther's grief was not noisy. She quietly lifted her darling from the bed, and sat down with her in her arms—Kate stood by, sobbing as if already the brand of Cain were upon her brow.

'Please, mamma,' said the little one, at length, 'am I big enough to go to Heaven!'

'Yes, darling, was the tearful answer.' 'Jesus loves little children.'

'And mamma do you s'pose he'll forgive me for sitting down in the meadow to watch Katie, when you told me I mus'nt never stay there?'

'Yes, my pet, the good Savior will forgive me for sitting down in the meadow to watch Katie, when you told me I mus'nt never stay there?'

'I heard somebody say I must go when I was asleep, mother; a beautiful lady, with oh! such white shining wings, and she stretched out her arms to take me, but I didn't go, I woke up just to kiss you and sister once more. Please kiss me Katie. 'Little Rose won't never be naughty any more up in heaven, and I'll grow up big before you come, Katie, so I can play with you up there!'

There were tears, sighs, a funeral and a little coffin. The rosebud opened its petals on the bosom of Jesus The little earth flower was "big enough for heaven!"

From the Plaindealer (Jamaica) Post.

Capture of an American Slaver.

On Tuesday the 16th inst., the inhabitants of St. Anns Bay were thrown into a state of considerable excitement by the arrival of a schooner—evidently American—towed into port by her Majesty's brig Arab. It was soon ascertained that the schooner was a slaver, and that she had on board a large number of captives. It appears that the Captain of the Arab had received information that a bark and schooner were expected in Cuba from the Coast of Africa, each with a cargo of slaves. A strict watch was therefore kept, and on Monday, the 13th inst., a suspicious looking craft was seen with a full press of sail, making the best of her way to her destined port. She was closely pursued, and the Captain finding that there was no possibility of escaping from the Arab, deserted her, taking with him in a shallop his crew, money, chronometer and other useful articles. The commander of the Arab dispatched his gunboat, with fifteen men, under the command of his First Lieutenant, with orders for the capture of the shallop. The chase continued for nearly three hours, and a shot having destroyed the rudder of the shallop, the Captain who was owner of the slaver, surrendered. Two of his principal slaves and an interpreter were taken from the shallop, and the crew were left on it to make the best of their way to Cuba.

The First Lieutenant then boarded the schooner, and found her filled with young Africans, males and females, to the number of 373, no less than 127 having fallen victims to the middle passage during a voyage of 29 days. The poor captives were in a wretched condition—all of them were naked—and the greater part seemed to have been half starved. They were packed closely together, and covered with dirt and vermin. On the arrival of the schooner in St. Ann's Bay, several gentlemen went on board, and their sympathies were excited at the misery they witnessed. Messrs. Bravo & Brother suggested measures which were adopted, and, with their usual liberality, ordered a steer to be killed, and soup prepared for the sufferers; other gentlemen furnished ground provisions, bread, &c., and while the food was being prepared, the whole of the human cargo was brought upon deck and washed, and had blankets given to them until clothing could be procured. Thirty of them were in a dying state, but the most human attention was paid to them, and up to the time when our informant left St. Ann's Bay they were all alive, and expected to do well. The Hon. Charles Royes, Custos of the Parsh, sent off, without loss of time, a dispatch to his excellency the Lieut. Governor, acquainting him with all the circumstances connected with the capture, and requesting to be informed whether the captives should be handed over to proprietors of estates who were anxious to produce their services.

The captain of the schooner refused to give his name or the name of the vessel, but stated that he would be the loser of $30,000—a loss which did not cause him much concern, as he made other and successful trips. A great deal of information, however, has been obtained from the interpreter, who mentioned that several vessels were left on the African coast—that they were to have sailed soon with full cargoes—that, upon an average, two vessels departed weekly, each with 500 to 700 slaves on board—that the trade was rapidly increasing—and that the slaves on being landed in Cuba were worth from $500 to $700 each. With regard to those that were captured in the schooner, there was but one day's supply of provisions on the day of capture, and so limited was the quantity of food dealed out to them during the passage, that when they saw the soup, bread, hams, &c., which were sent on board by the gentlemen of St Ann's they made a rush to get at them, and it was found necessary to exercise a rigid discipline, in order that the numbers that were the most enfeebled should be the first supplied.

The slave schooner has two decks, and between them the captives were packed in such a manner that they had scarcely room to move. During each day of the voyage they sat in a painful posture, eighteen inches only being allowed for each to turn in, and in a deck-room of 30 feet in length 300 human beings were stowed away, and brought up in platoons once every day to get a small portion of air. The schooner draws but six feet of water, is of great breadth, and flat-bottomed, and was thus built to enable her, in case of pursuit, to run into a port where there is not much depth of water. The interpreter states that when slave-trading Captains cannot escape cruisers they make their way to a particular point of land on the Cuban coast, run the vessels ashore, and leave the slaves to perish. The place alluded to is surrounded with rocks—none but flat-bottomed boats can get in—and the whole of that portion of the coast is blanced with human bones.

The commander of the Arab is in pursuit of the bark that sailed in company with the schooner, and we hope that we shall soon have accounts of her capture.

PROF. WELCH.—We understand that Mr. Welch has been compelled temporarily to leave the State Normal School on account of ill health.

☞ If a man does not make new acquaintances as he advances through life, he will soon find himself left alone. A man should keep his friendship in constant repair.

A lawyer, to avenge himself on an opponent, wrote 'rascal' in his hat.—The owner of the hat took it up, looked ruefully into it, and turning to the judge exclaimed, "I claim the protection of this honorable court, for the opposing counsel has written his name in my hat, and I have strong suspicion that he intends to make off with it."

The McKeesport Murder—Confession of Margaret Jones

From the Pittsburg Dispatch we learn that Margaret Jones has confessed to all the details of the murder. They are as follows:

"On Monday last, 27th of April, 1857, Fife told me he wished to see me on Thursday evening, at the bars above George Wilson's. I asked him what for. He told me that he would tell me when I came. I left Monongahela city on the boat, and got off at Elizabeth, and left there in the afternoon; was at the appointed place at dark. I waited there until about fifteen minutes after 9 o'clock, when Fife came. He had a bottle of barndy. Stewart come about 10 o'colck. He also had a bottle of brandy. They were both in liquor. They gave me some brandy. I drank a good deal of it.—Monroe Stewart then told me that they wanted me to go up to Uncle George's.—I asked them what for. They said they wanted his money. I told them I did not want to go, when Monroe Stewart drew a knife and threatened that if I did not they would kill me. I went with them.

Monroe Stuart told me to knock at the door, which I did. Uncle George asked me who was there. "Charlotte Jones." He said he would get up and let me in. Then Monroe Stuart and Henry Fife allowed that they intended to kill them—I told them for God's sake not to do it.—I did not think that they would do it—thought they sayed it to frighten me. He said "good evening," and I walked up to the bed where aunt was laying. I asked her how she was. She said not very well—she was sick. Whilst I was talking to aunt, uncle went to the door. Stewart and Fife then rushed in. Fife had a knife in his hand, and struck him (uncle) in the breast with it. He fell and never spoke. Stewart took hold of aunt, who cried for God's sake not to kill her. I then told them again not to murder them that way, when they said to "shut up," or they would do the same to me.

Stewart first threw her down, and then choked her, and then stamped on her with the heel of his boot on her head. He then called to Henry Fife for his knife who said it was of no use, it was bent.—He then called for a case knife. That not killing her, he ran to the corner of the room and took a poker, struck her twice on the head, when I ran out, as I could not stand it any longer. After I was out in the back yard, I heard them breaking open the chest. There was no light but a fire in the place. I could see uncle and aunt plainly. They were in the house about fifteen minutes. I did not go into the house again. When they came out, they took hold of me. They then made me swear the most awful oaths, that I would not tell. Their hands were bloody. We then started for M'Keesport—it was after one o'clock—all three together. We arrived at the bank of the Youghiogheny at nearly two o'clock, where we all sat down and drank more brandy.

They showed money to me there; it was all in half dollars. We sat there a very short time but while there Monroe Stewart threatened me again, that he would kill me if I told on them. We then went over the river in a skiff, using pieces of boards for oars. We went from the river to the railroad, and walked down the track a short distance. They stopped and caught hold of me, and allowed that they were afraid of me, when I swore I would never tell on them.

Charlotte Jones, Henry Fife and Monroe Stewart are now in jail to await further examinations. Traces of blood have been found in Fife's pants pocket, as well as in Stuart's and what appears to be blood stains on their dress cape and bonnet.

TRUE FRIENDSHIP.—An unfortunate young Frenchman, named G——, whose finances are always in disorder, but who manages very cleverly to help himself out of the purses of his friends, called upon a friend for whose purse G—— seemed to have a decided preference, as its owner was generally ready to oblige him without impolitely reminding him of it. "Good day, dear friend," said he, entering, "I am come to borrow ten louis of you." "I have not got them."—"Then a terrible alternative is all that is left me," said the borrower, tragically, "You alarm me." "I will throw myself into the Seine!" "You are talking at random; the Seine is frozen. But," said the sympathising friend, "since matters are gone so bad, there is no last service I would not render you." "Ah, my dear friend," exclaimed G——, thinking the other had been moved by his threat, "Here are two francs," continued the lender, "to pay some one for breaking the ice."

Joy to the Day

Joy to the day, when first we met
On honored and festal plain,
Hold are its scenes in memory yet,
Nor pave its pleasures a vain.

Quelled was the voice of kindred hearts
Until that day we mingled
In festive throng, but as her sports
Still hung, on strange entangled,
Clung each to each, with magic token,
Yet bound by ties could not be broken.

And since that hour, our hearts are one,
Drawn by the spell of kindred feeling,
And hopes and dreams have led us on
More bright than youthful pleasures gone,
Still doomed to wait for time's revealings.

When youthful hopes shall fade and die,
Or youthful toil be crowned with fame,
On life's last verge, yet still shall I
Delight to speak and hear thy name. L.

Letter from Sir John Franklin.

The following letter from Sir John Franklin is believed to be the last from his pen. It was never published before in America.—N. Y. Eve. Post.

Whale Fish Island, Bay of Disco, 11th July, 1845.

"My Dear Sister —* * * The appearance, dress and manners of the Esquimaux, bespeaks that care is taken of them by the government. Several of them can read the Bible with ease, and I am told that when the families are all collected the children are obliged to attend school daily. I looked into one of the huts arranged with seats for this purpose When the minister comes over from Disco he superintends the schools; at other times the children are taught by a half caste Esquimaux. How delightful it is to know that the gospel is spreading far and wide, and will do so till its blessed truths are disseminated through the globe Every ship in these days ought to go forth to strange lands bearing among its officers a missionary spirit; and may God grant such a spirit on board this ship. It is my desire to cultivate this feeling, and I am encouraged to hope that we have among us some who will aid me in this duty.—We have divine service twice on each Sunday, and I never witnessed a more attentive congregation than we have May the seed sown fall upon good ground, and bring forth fruit abundantly to God's honor and glory. * *

Ever your affectionate brother,
JOHN FRANKLIN."

Southern R.R. Finances.—The new Directors of the Michigan Southern Rail Road Company have resolved to issue three million dollars preferred ten per cent. stock, half of which is to be paid for in cash, and half in the old stock of the company. The $1,500,000 thus raised together with other assetts in hand will wipe out all the floating debt, and enable the Directors to carry on the financial affairs of the company without further hinderances

The following are the officers of the company as newly organized:

President - Edwin C. Litchfield.
Vice President—John Wilkinson.
Treasurer—John A. C. Gray.
Secretary—John M. Hopkins
Assist. Treas.—George H. Ford.
Executive Committee—Edwin C. Litchfield, John A. C. Gray, John Wilkinson, John Stryker, William B Welles
Finance Committee—John A. C. Gray, Edwin C. Litchfield, Henry Keep, Wm. M. Vermilye, J. H. Ransom.

Young Rogers Found.—John Rogers the young man who dissapeared from Finney's Hotel so mysteriously, about six weeks ago, was found in the water near J B. Palmers dock, at half past four o'clock yesterday afternoon, having been raised to the surface by the action of the wheels of the steamer Plymouth Rock. The body was immediately taken out, and removed to Moore & Foote's building, at the next dock below, and a jury empanelled by Justice Ensworth, who proceeded to take the testimony of several witnesses as to the identity. The body was recognized by Justice Purdy, Sheriff Purdy, and others, and Miss Caroline Beckenwith a foster sister of the deceased, identified his clothing and several articles, which were found in his pocket, among which were memorandas of articles he was to have purchased while in the city, some samples of fringes &c.

The appearance of the body immediately suggested the idea that Rodgers was murdered, his head being very badly bruised, and his face covered with blood It is possible, however, that the contusions may have been produced by being thrown against the timbers of the dock, by the action of the water, during the long time he has been lying there.

The inquest was adjourned to 9 o'clock this morning and in the meantime a post mortem examination is to be held.—Det Adv May 15.

A Splendid Donation.—David Hunt, Esq., of Missisippi, recently gave $25,000 to the American Colonization Society. On Friday last, he sent a check to the Society for $20,000 additional to be applied to the purposes for which that society is organized.

Seed Time and Harvest.

Those familiar with the Sacred Records will recollect that after the world was destroyed by the flood, it is affirmed that the bow of promise was put upon the cloud, as the seal of an undying covenant that the waters should not again cover the face of the earth, and that seed time and harvest should not again fail its inhabitants, while the world endures. That bow of promise still spans the rain—dispensing clouds, and that covenant of mercy has never yet been broken

It is, whenever we stop to think of it a matter of profound surprise how little faith men are found to place either in the promises or history of the past, and how at every little irregularity of the seasons, their hearts are ready to fail them for fear. If we were to devote half as much thought and time to looking after and improving those things that are appropriately within our sphere, as we gratuitously bestow upon matters for which we are in no way accountable, and which are in no sense within our control, we should approve ourselves to be far happier and wiser men, and more intelligently devoted to the rational supply of human wants.

The present spring is undoubtedly remarkably backward, more so than any one known in the United States since 1816. It is now within ten days of summer and as yet not a fruit-bearing blossom is to be seen. But after all there is nothing really portentious in all this The wheat and grasses are thickening up and doing well, and should there be no summer crops, there would indeed be inconvenience, but not want. But so far the present backwardness of the season indicates nothing particularly unfavorable to the summer crops even A month hence is not too late to plant corn and still allow it to mature the present season. It has been done here and may be again.

A lavish and unnecessary extravagance on the part of the community at large, has far more to do with pecuniary pressure and embarassment, than any failure of the crops, past or to come. No one has a right to calculate upon, and anticipate, the extreme of productiveness under the most favorable circumstances, and then blame Providence, rather than themselves, if their income is found unequal to this unwarranted calculation. It is in ourselves, and not in Providence that we shall find our principal, and all our real causes of despondency and gloom.

Seed time and harvest we need not trouble ourselves about in advance, but only see that we make ourselves ready to improve them when they do come. They have never yet failed upon the earth, and we have a surer covenant than any man could make or mar, that they never will.

Tecumseh Herald.

It will be seen by the present issue of the Herald that it has passed into the hands of Messrs. George S. & Charles. K. Spafford, who will continue its publication as heretofore. The present publishers, as their predecessor, are practical printers, and having been for a long time engaged in and about the office, are not unfamiliar with its business details. As will be seen, they are giving the whole paper a thorough overhauling, throwing out the old advertisements, giving to the paper more reading matter, a new head, and almost new dress They have also put the subscription, paid in advance at one Dollar, which is a reduction worthy the prompt attention of all its subscribers An additional column will be given to the Agricultural Department, a local column will also be kept upon the third page, filled with local events, news, and matters generally of local interest.

The Job Department of the office has been thoroughly overhauled and Job-work will be at all times executed with neatness and dispatch. It is the determination of the present publishers to spare no pains to merit, as they are flatteringly assured of receiving a liberal public patronage. The editorial direction, and character of the Herald will continue as heretofore

Louisville, May 14.

About dark to night a mob broke into the cannon house and obtained possession of a cannon, which they placed in front of the jail.

A number of shots were fired from the jail and from the mob, and brickbats were hurled against the jail. The jailor fearing the escape of the prisoners, formally surrendered two of them, and they were hung by the mob. The third one took a raizor and cut his own throat.

The negro who turned State's evidence was unmolested.

St. Louis, May 15.

The remaining negro implicated in the Joyce murder was hung by the mob last night, making three hanged and one suicide.

LITERARY NOTICES.

Godey's Lady's Book.

The June No. of Godey is promptly upon our Table,—Its colored Fashion Plates and work patterns are unusually full and instructive—"May: The Squatters Daughter" by Metta Virginia Victor (Fuller,) is concluded in this No. "The Memory Bells" by Virginia F. Townsend, is also concluded in this No. But the Literary and Artistical character of this first of Ladies Magazines in this country is too well known to need commendation at our hands It is published monthly by L. A. Godey, Phila'd at $3,00 per year 2 copies $5,00 3 copies $6,00.

The missing March No. with his usual promptness and courtesy has been replaced upon our files by Mr. Godey, and is received with many acknowledgements.

The Lady's Home Magazine,

The June No of this pleasant and instructive monthly Magazine by T. S. Arthur, published also at Philadelphia is duly received—Among its articles we would particularly notice "The clerk of the Dead Letter office" by Mrs. Caroline Orne. "The young Methodist Preacher" by Rev. A. M Scott, and "Tombi, or the Mulatto of Murillo's Studio,"—It is a good No.—Terms $2,00 per annum 4 copies $5,00.

Hunt's Merchants' Magazine.

The May No. of Hunt is upon our table—Its table of contents are so full and varied that we in vain attempt to compress them within the short limits of our usual notice. It is embellished with a fine engraved portrait of W W. Leland Esq Its leading article is a brief notice of the Finances and Debts of some seventeen States of the Union, including Mich. Published monthly by Freeman Hunt Esq 142 Fulton St. N. Y.—Terms $5,00 per anum.

Waymark's in the Wilderness.

The May No. of this monthly Journal of Scriptural studies, current History and Literary observations Published by Inglis & Jones, St. Louis—together with preceding Nos. is promptly received. With its principal Editor, Rev James Inglis, many of our readers are not unacquainted. Of refined and cultivated literary taste, and a heartfelt evangelical zeal, the impress of his noble mind and benovolent heart, is prominently impressed upon the work—Terms, $2,00 per anum 3 copies $5,00.

Michigan Journal of Education.

The May No. is received.—As our readers will recollect it is published monthly by Rev. J. M. Gregory Ann Arbor, at $1,00 per anum. The principal educational talent of the State is identified with its publication, and our last Legislature, has provided for placing a copy in every School District in the State These copies are now ready for delivery, but the Publishers find a difficulty in getting the name and Post-Office Address of the different School Directors in the State. If every School Director whose eye may fall upon this notice and who has not already received the Journal, will drop a line to its editor, at Ann Arbor, postage paid of course, giving his name, Post-office Address in full, and the No. of his School Dis[illegible] the Journal due to his district will be forth coming without delay.

The Wanderer's Return.

On the door-stone of the old home sat a child looking towards the far distant but beauteous west, the blue sky seemed to kiss the dark brow of the bluer hills at the soft twilight or in the silver moonlight and the sun bathed their summits in the bright rising of the moon

As he sat thus musing he was heard to day "surely behind those old hills there must be a fairer sky hid from my longing view; oh! that I could look upon those gushing rills and sun-bright fields, that I might go forth and search for happiness, honor, wealth and fame; I would toil for the laurel wreath and win a name that would live long after this heart had ceased to beat and this body had lain moldering in its last resting place.

The sunny years of that boy's youth passed and the hopes, joys, doubts and fears of his struggling manhood came up with every coming day

That strong man worshipped at a gentle shrine but it was a human being, before whom he bent, full of error and weakness yet like the honored name he had almost given his life for it had taken wing and soared to its higher home, an angel.

And now in that far off land a radiant spirit waits for him—it will lead him with gentle hands when the "eyes of Faith", are dim. Once more he turned to fame as a weary child to sleep It came up like a beauteous light and he followed on through its darksome way until it ended in nights gloom. On that door-stone where a child sat years ago is an old man lone, sad and weary. He bows his aged head in the strong sunshine and looks about with bewildered air,—he has come to his boyhood home a broken reed never again to roam—the "lone old man is dead." Kate Montague.

A Warning

Charles Lamb—who has not heard of "gentle Charles"?—was much addicted to the wine cup. Hear his solemn warning; heed it ye who can:

"The waters have gone over me. But out of the black depth, could I be heard, I would cry out to all those who have but set a foot in the perilous flood. Could the youth to whom the flavor of his first wine is delicious as the opening scenes of life, or the entering upon some newly discovered paradise, look into my desolation and be made to understand what a dreary thing it is when a man shall feel himself going down a precipice with open eyes and a passive will—to see his destruction and have no power to stop it, and yet feel it all the way emanating from himself; to see all goodness emptied out of him, and yet not be able to forget a time when it was otherwise; to bear about the piteous spectacle of his own ruin; could he see my fevered eye, feverish with last night's drinking, and feverishly looking for the night's repetition of folly; could he but feel the body of death out of which I cry hourly, with feeble outcry to be delivered—it were enough to make him dash the sparkling beverage to the ground in all the pride of his maiding temptation."

An Outrage on an Old Woman.—The Medina Tribune says that a desperate and villainous fraud was perpetrated upon an old woman, living on the Ridge Road, in that town, a few days ago: "A wealthy farmer—her relative and living near her—purchased of her an acre of land for which he pretended to draw up a deed. Without suspicion of rascality, the old lady signed the deed and acknowledged its execution, and delivered the same to the purchaser. A few days afterwards one the neighbors had occasion to 'search the records,' at the County Clerk's office, where the discovery was made that old lady instead of deeding one acre, had given a warrantee deed of her whole farm of one hundred and sixty acres, worth $60 per acre! She was feeble in health at the time the deed was given, and it was thought that she would live but few weeks and she died before the discovery of the fraud, her heirs would have been robbed of a property valued at $8,000"

The perpetrators of this diabolical villiany, (there were several engaged in it) are all wealthy and prominent citizens of this town. For the present we suppress their names.

Public Meeting to Aid the Sufferers from Famine in the Northern Counties.

The meeting called at the City Hall, last evening for the above purpose was of very good size, and composed mostly monied men, who were able and willing to aid in the work of alleviating the sufferings of their fellow citizen.

The meeting was called to order, and C. C. Towbridge was called to the chair Several gentlemen made interesting remarks Among these, were Walter Chester, John Hull, and Ralph Emerson. The last named gentleman stated that he had just come from Gratiot county, where he described the suffering as very general, so great, that many of the citizens were starving—and the afflicted man added with a trembling voice and eyes suffused with tears, that he had lost his wife and three children from starvation.

The Chairman appointed a committe of three consisting of Henry Barns, John Owen, and Walter Chester, to draft resolutions, and to take such measures as would appear them necessary and expedient, to secure the objects desired. The committee reported the following resolution:

Resolved—That the citizens of Detroit have heard with heartfelt regret of the suffering and death, from want of food, of their fellow citizens of Gratiot, and the new settlements of other counties of Michigan

Resolved—That Detroit has a heart to feel and liberally respond to the necessities of their fellow citizens, in whatever section of the State, or from whatever cause, and that it is a source of deep regret that the real necessities and sufferings in the new and sparse settlements, have not been made known to us through authorized Committies, appointed for that purpose, from those sections of the State.

Resolved—That a Committee of three be appointed by the Executive Committee hereafter provided for, to proceed forth with to those sections of the State represented as being in want of the necessities of life, to enquire into and ascertain the circumstances and necessities of the people, and that they be empowered to extend such immediate relief as to them may be deemed requisite, to afford the relief required.

Resolved—That the sum of $5,000 be raised in money, provisions, and clothing and seeds in the city of Detroit, to aid our suffering fellow citizens, and that we pledge ourselves in such additional means as may be necessary to give full relief from want of the necessaries of life.

Resolved—That an Executive Committee of three be appointed to co-operate with a similar Committee in Lansing, to receive and distribute such contributions of money or other means as may be made by our citizens, and to appoint such agents as they may need, and pay their expenses.

Resolved—That the city be divided into four districts, and that a Committee of eight be appointed—two for each district—to canvass the city for subscriptions and contributions to carry out the designs of this meeting, and that this committee report and deliver all the subscriptions and contributions to the Executive Committee

Resolved—That the prompt action of the citizens of Lansing, in extending aid to their fellow citizens in Gratiot county is deserving of all praise, and that we respectfully recommend our fellow citizens in other towns and villiages to do likewise, in aid of suffering humanity.

A subscription was taken up in the Hall and amounted to about $1,000.

Citizens of Detroit! come to the rescue. Let your sufferin brothers know you have hearts to feel for, and hands to relieve them!

We suggest to Ministers of the Gospel the propriety of taking up contributions in their respective churches on the coming Sabbath morning No time is to be lost, and this occasion certainly calls loudly for the exercise of Christian charity, in relieving the neccessities of the poor.—Det Adv. May 16.

Public Meeting at Tecumseh.

At a meeting of the citizens of Tecumseh held on the 18th inst, called for the purpose of furnishing aid and relief to the citizens who are said to be in want in some of the northern counties of this State—Hon. P. Bills was called to the Chair and L. Lilly appointed Secretary.

Mr. Rappleye addressed the meeting stating the facts as he had learned them while on a visit to Lansing Dr. DeMott also made some remarks and read an article from a Detroit Paper stating that there was want and scarvation among our fellow citizens in the northern portion of the State.

On motion of Tho's Baylis the follow resolution was adopted.

Resolved, That a committee of nine be appointed to correspond with the committee at Detroit to learn more particularly what their necessities are and the best means of affording relief also to solicit subscriptions for the purpose.

Committee: Thos Baylis, J G Roberts, A. Anderson, Dr. DeMott; Samuel Rappleye, Ridgeway; John H. Osborn, Macon; G D. Perry, Franklin; Edwin Smith, Clinton; Thos. J. Faxon, Raisin.

On motion of B. L. Baxter, it was

Resolved, That a subscription be now taken up subject to the call of the committee

On motion the meeting adjourned.

LUCIUS LILLEY, Sec.

Tecumseh, May 18th 1857.

There is an article selling throughout the country that has attained the widest celebrity ever known as a remedy for Liver Complaints. We have reference to Dr. Sanford's Invigorator, or Liver Remedy, that has performed cures almost too great to believe, were it not for the undoubted evidence that accompany the testimonials. It is, in truth, the greatest remedy known for Dyspepsia, Jaundice, or a general debility that so often baffles the skill of our most eminent physicians.

Dr. Sanford has been for a long time one of the most eminent physicians of New York, and it is said, most of his cases were treated with the Invigorater with such invariable success that he has been induced to offer it as a family medicine, and let the world have the benefit of his discovery. If those who are troubled will try a bottle, we think they might save physicians' bills, and days, perhaps years of suffering.

Holloway's Ointment and Pills—Encrusted Sores.—Few external disorders are more loathsome than this It is however, very common, especially among children. Sometimes the face, sometimes the head, and in many instances the whole surface the root of this disgusting complaint; but whatever their origin, these excresences are speedily removed by the regular application of the Ointment.—Scurvy frequently develops itself in the same way, and therefore no vessel should leave port without a supply of this match less preparation. The Pills, from their powerful detergent action upon the animal fluids, facilitate the cure of external diseases, and for all complaints of the stomach and its dependecies, are absolutly infallible.

Arrival of the George Law.

New York, May 14.

The news from Peru by the George Law, is important

President Castillo had left the Capital at the head of 2,000 troops, for the south, but after he had landed, his vessel was captured by Vivanco, who, it was expected, would immediately make a demonstration against Lima and Callao. The cities it was believed, were in great danger of falling into the hands of the Revolutionists.

Col. Frank Anderson, an officer of Walker's army, who came passenger on the Geo Law, says that when he left Aspinwall, on the 3d, Walker was at Rivas, with 300 men.

A day or two previous to Anderson's leaving the Isthmus, a letter was received from a private source, in San Francisco, requesting Gen. Walker to be sure and be at San Juan del Sur 3 or 4 days in advance of the steamer's usual arrival at that place, from San Francisco, but not to have his expectations raised too high, and he would thus find something to benefit him and his cause. The Col. also says, that he heard from another source that the proposed benefit was in the shape of a small sailing vessel, fitted up by private enterprise, having a good supply of provisions and upwards of 150 men arms, &c. on board, which Anderson thinks must have arrived ere this time, and been taken charge of by Walker or his representatives.

Anderson thinks Walker is still in the ascendant, and gives no credence to the report that he has taken refuge on board of a man-of-war. On the other side, one of the the officers of the Geo Law says, that on leaving Aspinwall, the report was current there, that walker was completely hemmed in on all sides by the enemy at Rivas, and that the allies were about to bring guns to bear on him, in which case, he thinks there will be little hopes for his men, of which he has but about 300 all told.

☞ WEBB gave us a call, says there is a lot of goods coming; we will give his programme next week

☞ The Village Board, at their last meeting, appointed MORRIS HYDE, their Marshall; if we are not mistaken, somebody's pigs will have their "hide" on the fence, if not taken care of. The board have much work laid out, which will be noticed as accomplished.

☞ Notwithstanding the hard times, our village continues a steady and healthy growth. Werkmen are completing the new block of Messrs. Anderson and Bills They are also laying the foundation of three more new Stores for Messrs. Strong & Drew, William Richards, and J. E Hall, which when completed, are to be A No 1. Among other improvements, we notice a large number of shade trees, fences, &c., which speak well for Tecumseh.

☞ Bishop McCrosky, confirmed eight persons, at the Episcopal Church, on the 10th, inst. Mr. Lester, will preach at the same church, the last Sunday in May and the first in June.

☞ The Iron and Timber for the completion of the Jackson Branch, is passing through our village daily. The Depot for Jackson, is framing at the Junction

☞ The Chicago Tribune, says J. R. Rice, & Co, Bankers, of Buffalo, have been obliged to suspend payment.

☞ Over six millions acres of farming land remains unsold, in Michigan.

☞ Sanford's Invigorator, is gaining popularity daily. See advertisement

☞ We received the 4th No. of the Ottawa Clayion, a new paper started at Grand Haven, Mich It calls for Carpenters—wages $2,50 per day.

☞ The elevators and grain house of the Toledo, Wabash & Western Railroad Company, was entirely consumed by fire on the 19th inst

☞ One editor in Georgia asks another, "whether he can bite the bottom of a flying pan without smutting his nose."

☞ A dentist presented a bill for the tooth time to a rich skin flint. "It strikes me," said the latter, "that this is a pretty round bill." "Yes replied the dentist I've sent it round often enough to make it appear so, and I have called now to get squared."

☞ TOUGH.—A genuine Down Easter was lately essaying to appropriate a square of exceedingly tough beef at a Wisconsin hotel. His convulsive efforts with his knife and fork attracted the the smiles of the guest in the same predicament as himself. At last Johnathan's patience vanished under his illsuccess, when laying down his utensils, he burst out with the following "Strangers, you needn't laugh; if you ain't got any regard for the landlords feelings you ought to have some respect for the old bull." This sally brought down the house

☞ The redoubtable mayor of Madison has been eclipsed, distanced, outdone. The chief magistrate of some flourishing paper city in Minnesota has issued an inaugural address in which he alludes to the future prospects of the "burgh."

"The growth of our city are astounding in all human calculations. They staggers belief and the thoughts mount up in glory and vociforarte hallelujah at the prolific panorama of the butterflie brilliancy of the future hereafter of the time to come by and by, in a few years from now. We must make ample provision for that time, or bust."

Tell me, ye winged winds
That round my pathway roar,
Do you not know some spot
Where winter's storms are o'er,
Some country far away
Where ice is never seen,
Where April snow storms cannot come,
And trees put forth their green?
There came a murmur from the distant len,
Low, sad tone, which whispered. "No-sir-ee."

Owing to our neglect in reading the proof on the first page, a bad mistake has occurred in the story.

ST. LOUIS, May 19.

The Lecompton correspondent of the Republican says that by the advice of Secretary Stanton, the District Attorney has entered a nolle prosequi in each of the treason cases. Prosecutions for usurpation of office will probably be disposed of in the same manner.

HEALTH OR SICKNESS.
CHOOSE BETWEEN THEM.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

The blood furnishes the material of every tissue, muscle gland and fibre in the human frame. When pure, it secures health to every organ; when corrupt, it necessarily produces disease. Holloway's Pills operate directly upon the elements of the stream of life, neutralizing the principle of disease and thus radically curing them, whether located in the nerves, the stomach, the liver, the bowels, the muscles, the skin, the brain, or any other part of the system.

USED THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

Holloway's Pills are equally efficacious in complaints common to the whole human race, and in disorders peculiar to certain climates and localities.

ALARMITG DISORDERS.

Dyspepsia and derangement of the liver, the source of infirmity and suffering, and the cause of innumerable deaths, yield to these curatives in all cases, however aggravated acting as a mild purgative, alterative and tonic: they relieve the bowels, purify the fluids, and invigorate the system and the constitution at the same time.

General Weakness—Nervous Complaints.

When all stimulants fail, the renovating and bracing properties of these Pills give firmness to the shaking nerves and enfeebled muscles of the victim of general debility.

DELICATE FEMALES.

All irregularities and ailments incident to the delicate and sensitive organs of the sex are removed or prevented by a few doses of these mild but infallible alternatives. No mother who regards her own or her children's health should fail to have them within her reach.

The London "Lancet" the London "Medical Review" and the most eminent of the faculty in Great Britain, France and Germany, have eulogized the Pills and their inventor.

Holloway's Pills are the best remedy known in the World for the following Diseases

Asthma.	Diarrhœa	Inflamation	Stone and
Bowel Complaints	Dropsy	Inward weak	Gravel.
Coughs	Debility	ness	Secondary
Colds	Fevers	Ague	Symptoms
Chest Diseases	Female Complaints	Lowness of	Venereal affections
Constiveness	Headaches	Spirits	Worms of all
Dyspepsia	Indigestion	Piles	Kinds
	Influenza

ONE BOTTLE ONLY:
DR. SANFORD'S
INVIGORATOR,
OR LIVER REMEDY.

IS REQUIRED TO CURE ANY ONE TROUBLED WITH LIVER Complaints, unless the most desperate of cases, and the Second bottle will with scarce a single failure restore the patient to health and vigor. We wish to call the attention of all to these facts, that the Invigorator is compounded by a physicion who has used it in his practice for the past twenty years with a success almost incredulous, and that it is entirely vegetable being composed wholly of gums.

Some idea of the strength of these gums may be formed when it is known one bottle of the Invigorator contains as much strength as one hundred doses of Calomel without any of its delerious effects.

One bottle is the surest thing known to carry away the bad effects of mineral poison of any kind

Only one bottle is needed to throw out of the system the effects of medicine after a long sickness

One bottle taken for Jaundice removes all yellowness or unnatural color from the skin.

One dose taken before retiring prevents nightmare.

One dose taken at night loosens the bowels gently and cures costiveness.

One dose taken after each meal will cure Dyspepsia

One dose of two tea spoonsful will always relieve the Sick Headache

One bottle taken for female obstruction removes the cause of the disease and makes a perfect cure.

Only one dose immediately relieves Cholic, while

One dose often repeated is a sure cure for Cholera Morbus and a sure preventative of Cholera.

One dose taken of it will prevent the recurrence of bilious attacks, while it relieves all painful feelings

☞ One or two doses taken occasionally is one of the best remidies for a cold ever known.

Thousands of cases of inflamation and weakness of the lungs have been cured by the Invigorator

One dose taken a short time before eating gives vigor to the appetite and makes food digest well.

One dose often repeated cures Chronic Diarrhœa in its worst forms, while summer and bowel complaints yield almost to the first dose.

One or two doses cures attacks caused by worms, while for worms in children, there is no surer, safer and speedier remedy in the world as it never fails.

There is no exaggeration in these statements, they are plain and sober facts, that we can give evidence to prove while all who use it are giving their unanimous testimony in its favor.

We wish all who are sick and debilitated to try this remedy, and test it thoroughly and any who are not benefited by its use we should like to hear from, as we have yet to hear from the first person who has used a bottle of invigorator without receiving benefit, for there are such astonishing medicinal virtues in it, that all, no matter how long they have been affected if their complaint arises from a deranged liver, will be benefited, if not entirely cured.

GREAT INDUCEMENTS

Will Be Offered To

CASH & READY PAY

CUSTOMERS

GREAT WESTERN READY PAY

B. J. BIDWELL.

Chicago Street, Tecumseh.

I am now opening a Large, and General Assortment of

Dry Goods and Groceries,

and shall be receiving from week to week, through the Season, any Goods that may be wanted, from the Eastern Manufacturers, and Jobbers of

New York, Boston,

and Other Cities in the East

I have tried during Nineteen Years of my life the various modes of doing business.

Firstly for Cash.
Secondly on Short Credit.
Thirdly, had to take Long Credit, Orders and Accounts.

Lastly, I have been compelled to wait for payment of Goods sold on Six Months time, long enough for a man to visit California, get rich, and return, before payment could be forced or coaxed.

Now I wish to say, to my numerous friends and patrons, that I am thoroughly convinced that the mode of buying goods on time is both injurious to the buyer and seller.

I will hereafter Sell for Ready pay, at such prices that will defy all competion in this Town, State, or the United States.

No one should buy a dollars worth of Goods without calling at the

Great Western Cash Store,

and get the prices! Some are so unfortunate as to be compelled to trade at long credit stores—to those I would say, Call and See what you can save by having the Ready or something as good, to use where you please.

Call one and all, I wish to see the light of your countenance, and the cash from your pockets. B. J. BIDWELL.

MICHIGAN.

A. RANDALL, Foreman.
Tecumseh, May 18th, 1857.

WANTED.

At the Great Western Store 200,000 lbs of Nice clean Wool for which the highest price in cash will be paid.
May. 20 B. J. BIDWELL.

NOTICE.

All those having unsettled accounts at my store will please call and arrange the same immediately. And all owing notes are most earnestly requested to pay them at once, or they will be left for collection. Pull out the old gold you have laid up in the room of keeping it thinking some one will get her up so you can make a dollar out of them. Pay your debts, then I can pay mine.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS

OF THE

NORTHERN LENAWEE

AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY

TOGETHER WITH THE LIST OF

JUDGES, PREMIUMS &C.,

FOR THE

Annual Fair for the year 1857,

To be held at Tecumseh, September 10th.

TECUMSEH:
Printed at the office of the "Tecumseh Herald." 1857.

OFFICERS FOR 1857.

PRESIDENT,

M. A. PATTERSON.

VICE PRESIDENTS:

S. Davidson, Tecumseh, | Sam'l. Rappleye, Ridgeway,
John Richard, Raisin, | Jas. B. Wells, Franklin.

Treasurer, B. J. BIDWELL. | Secretary, B. L. BAXTER.

DIRECTORS:

J. G Roberts, Tecumseh, | Alex Montgomery, Ridgeway,
A. J. Hunter, Franklin, | E. H. Raymond, Raisin,
William A. Hall, Clinton.

The President, Vice Presidents, Directors, Secretary and Treasurer, constitute the Executive Committee.

CONSTITUTION.

Article 1. This Society shall be called the Northern Lenawee Agricultural Society, which shall include Horticulture and the Mechanic Arts, and it shall be auxiliary to the Lenawee County Agricultural Society, and shall be composed of the towns of Franklin, Tecumseh, Ridgeway, Raisin.

Art. 2. Any person may become a member of this Society by signing this Constitution and paying into the Treasury Fifty Cents on entrance, and Fifty Cents annually thereafter.

Art. 3. There shall be an annual meeting of this Society for the election of officers, and to transact such other business as may be thought expedient, on the 2nd Saturday of January in every year.

Art. 4. The annual meeting of this Society shall be holden at Tecumseh, but other meetings may be holden at such times and places as may be directed by the Executive Committee.

Art. 5. At the annual meeting, there shall be chosen by ballot or otherwise, by the members of this Society there assembled, one President, one Vice President from each township connected with the Association, a Recording and Corresponding Secretary, and a Treasurer, and an Executive Committee of Directors of one person from each township, and one at large; of which Committee the President, Vice President and Secretary shall be members ex-officio, and any Five of which Committee shall be deemed a quorum competent to transact business.

Art. 6. There shall be an Annual Fair and General Exhibition of Agricultural and Horticultural products, including new and useful improvements in Husbandry; at which time there shall be a Plowing Match, and a distribution of Premiums. Such Fair shall be holden at such times and places as the Executive Committee shall appoint, they giving at least 4 weeks' previous notice of the same.

Art. 7. No premium shall be awarded to any person who is not a member of this Society.

Art. 8. It shall be the duty of the Executive Committee to adopt a code of By-Laws, and publish them with the Constitution, for the benefit of the society.

Art. 9. The Constitution of the Society may be altered or amended at any annual meeting of the Society, by a vote of two-thirds of the members present

BY-LAWS AND REGULATIONS.

Article 1. The Executive Committee shall provide suitable accommodations for the Annual Exhibition, and prescribe the rules and regulations to be observed.

Art 2. They shall appoint Judges who shall examine the property and specimens produced by the persons applying for premiums at the Annual Fairs, and shall determine or judge whether any or either of the applicants be entitled to a premium according to the conditions prescribed.

Art. 3 The Executive Committee may award discretionary premiums out of any unappropriated funds of the Society. All awards of money shall be accompanied by a certificate signed by the President and Recording Secretary.

Art 4. The Treasurer shall receive and have charge of the funds of the Society, and shall disburse the same under the direction of the Executive Committee, and report at each annual meeting.

Art. 5. Every candidate for a premium is especially requested to make his entries for the same, at the office of the Secretary, and receive his numbered certificate therefor from him, as early at least as the day before the Fair, and no entry will be received after 10 o'clock of the morning of the day of the Fair.

Art. 6. All certificates of membership shall include the family of the person to whom they are given and shall entitle them to all the privileges of the Society.

Art. 7. No article or animal upon which a premium was given last year shall be entitled to compete for the same premium this year.

Art. 8. An Admission fee of Thirteen Cents shall be charged to all persons except members of the society and their families.

Art. 9 All articles intended for exhibition must be on the ground at 10 o'clock of the morning of the Fair, when persons will be in readiness to have them arranged in their appropriate classes.

Art. 10. No animal or article can compete for two premiums. When there is but one on exhibition it will receive the first or second premium as it may be adjudged worthy, and no premium will be awarded when the animal or article is not worthy.

Art. 11 Pedigrees of Blood and Blood Stock must be handed to the chairman of the committee of judges on the ground, if not before, otherwise no premium will be awarded

Art. 12. Persons who enter for premiums on crops, must give a full statement in writing, of the number of bushels from a given quantity of ground, the manner and expense of cultivating the crops for which they are competitors, and premiums on such crops as are not mentioned at the time of the annual Fair will be awarded by the Executive Committee at the time of the annual meeting, on a similar statement.

Art. 13. The several Judges will report themselves to the Secretary at 10 o'clock A. M., on the ground on the day of the Fair.

DR. Everson's Great American Remedy for Ague, or Chills and Fever, is the most popular and certain remedy now known. The people and the press speak of it in the highest terms of commendation. It is pleasant to take, does not purge, vomit or sweat, but invigorates the system. It contains no Arsenic, Strichnine, Quinine, or any other poisonous or injurious drug, but it is an originally discovered Antidote to Malaria and as an Ague Killer it has no equal. Call and get a circular containing certificates from Professors, Physician, Clergymen and the press.

THE PEOPLE DEMAND IT AND WILL HAVE IT.

Unmistakable Evidence of its Work and Worth.

Messrs. W. W Roberts & Co., Druggists, of Indianapolis, sold over $20,000 worth during the great Ague season of 1855.

CERTIFICATES

Almost without number, might here be adduced, from Physicians, Clergymen, officers of State, and private individuals; but the following will suffice:

From our intimate knowledge of Dr. Everson, and the extraordinary virtues of his Ague remedy—being apprized of its constituents, and knowing, as we do, that it contains neither Arsenic, Quininine, Strichnine, Mercury or any poisonous or injurious drugs, we heartily commend it, and also his Family Phisic, or Cathartic Pills, as medicines deserving the approbation of an intelligent public.

AYER'S

CHERRY PECTORAL,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Colds, Coughs, and Hoarseness.

Bedford, Mass., 20th Dec., 1855.

Dr. J. C. Ayer: I do not hesitate to say the best remedy I have ever found for Coughs, Hoarseness, Influenza, and the concomitant symptoms of a cold, is your CHERRY PECTORAL. Its constant use in my practice and my family for the past few years has shown it to possess the most salutary virtues for the treatment of these complaints. EBEN KNIGHT, M. D.

A. B. MORTLEY, Esq., of Utica, N. Y., writes: "I have used your PECTORAL myself and in my family ever since you invented it, and believe it the best medicine for the purpose ever put out. With a bad cold I should rather have a dollar's worth than do without it.

Croup, Whooping Cough, Influenza.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Feb. 5, 1856.

BROTHER AYER: I will cheerfully certify your PECTORAL is the best remedy we possess for the cure of Whooping Cough, Croup, and the chest diseases of children. Your fraternity in the South appreciate your skill, and commend your medicine to our people.
HIRAM CONKLIN, M. D.

AMOS LEE, Esq., Monterey, Ia., writes, 24 Jan., 1856: "I had a tedious Influenza, which confined me in doors six weeks; took many medicines without relief; finally tried your PECTORAL by the advice of our clergyman. The first dose relieved the soreness in my throat and lungs; less than one half the bottle made me completely well. Your medicines are the cheapest as well as the best we can buy, and we esteem you, Doctor, and your remedies, as the poor man's friend."

Asthma or Phthisic, and Bronchitis.

West Manchester, Pa., Feb. 4, 1856.

SIR: Your CHERRY PECTORAL is performing marvelous cures in this section. It has relieved several from alarming symptoms of consumption, and is now curing a man who has labored under an affection of the lungs for the last forty years. HENRY L. PARKS, Merchant.

A. A. RAMSEY, M. D., Albion, Mosher Co., Iowa, writes, Sept. 5, 1855: "During my practice of twenty years, I have found nothing equal to your CHERRY PECTORAL for giving ease and relief to consumptive patients, or curing such as are curable."

We might add volumes of evidence, but the most convincing proof of the virtues of this remedy is found in its effects upon trial.

Consumption.

Probably no one remedy has ever been known which cured so many and such dangerous cases as this. Scarce no human aid can reach; but even to those the CHERRY PECTORAL affords relief and comfort.

ASTON HOUSE, NEW YORK CITY, March 5, 1856.

DOCTOR AYER, LOWELL: I feel it a duty and a pleasure to inform you what your CHERRY PECTORAL has done to my wife. She had been five months laboring under the dangerous symptoms of Consumption, from which no aid we could procure gave her much relief. She was steadily failing, until Dr. Strong, of this city, where we have come for advice, recommended a trial of your medicine. We bless his kindness, as we do your skill, for she has recovered from that day. She is not yet as strong as she used to be, but is free from her cough, and calls herself well.

Yours with gratitude and regard,
ORLANDO SHELBY, of SHELBYVILLE.

Germantown, do not despair till you have tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It is made by one of the best medical chemists in the world, and its cures all around us request the high merits of its virtues.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills.

THE sciences of Chemistry and Medicine have been taxed their utmost to produce this most perfect purgative which is known to man. Innumerable proofs are shown that these PILLS have virtues which surpass in excellence the ordinary medicines, and that they win unprecedentedly upon the esteem of all men. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. Their penetrating properties stimulate the vital activities of the body, remove the obstructions of its organs, purify the blood, and expel disease. They purge out the foul humors which breed and grow distemper, stimulate sluggish or disordered organs into their natural action and impart healthy tone with strength to the whole system. Not only do they cure the every-day complaints of every body, but also formidable and dangerous diseases that have baffled the best of human skill. While they produce powerful effects, they are at the same time, in diminished doses the safest and best physic that can be employed for children. Being sugar-coated, they are pleasant to take; and being purely vegetable, are free from any risk of harm. Cures have been made which surpass belief were they not substantiated by men of such exalted position and character as to forbid the suspicion of untruth. Many eminent clergymen and physicians have lent their names to certify to the public the reliability of my remedies, while others have sent me the autographs of their conviction that my Preparations contribute immensely to the relief of the afflicted, suffering fellow-men.

The Agent below named is pleased to furnish gratis my American Almanac, containing directions for their use, and certificates of their cures, of the following complaints:

Costiveness, Bilious Complaints, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Dropsy, Heartburn, Headache arising from a foul stomach, Sick Headache, Indigestion, Mental Dejection of the Blood, Languor, Lassitude, Loss of Appetite, all Disorders arising therefrom, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, all Disorders arising from Derangements of the Liver and Stomach, Bilious and Cutaneous Diseases which require an evacuation of the Medicine, Scrofula or King's Evil. They also, by purifying the blood and stimulating the system, cure many other complaints which it would not be supposed they could reach, such as Deafness, Partial Blindness, Neuralgia or Nervous Irritability, Derangements of the Liver and Kidneys, Gout, and other kindred complaints arising from a low state of the body or obstruction of its functions.

Do not be put off by unprincipled dealers with some other pill they make more profit on. Ask for Ayer's Pills, and take nothing else. No other they can get will cure you. Compare with this in its intrinsic value or curative powers. The sick want the best and there is for them, and they should have it.

Topographical Map of

Lenawee county, Mich

From original surveys and actual measurement throughout the whole county, by Beecher and Wenig, Surveyors and Civil Engineers, Authors of Maps of Allegany, Schoharie, and Broome County, N. Y., and Washtenaw Co., Mich.

The subscribers, who have been engaged in compiling a map of Lenawee County since 14 months, are about to review the whole work in order to correct even the slightest error, if any should have occured. The same time they will obtain subscribers for the enterprise, "which is connected with immense labor and expense."

The Map is about 42x5 feet in size, and contains every public road with all its variations, the localities of Dwellings, places of Worship, Post Offices, and School Houses, Mills, Shops, &c.; also, section lines, farm lines with the owner's name engraved to it, Views of Public buildings, Plans of every village in the County on the margin, forming not only a correct and complete, but also an ornamental Map, and will be handsomely colored, mounted and furnished to subscribers for $5 per copy

BECHLER, WENIG & CO.,
Adrian & Philadelphia

The undersigned having examined Messrs. Beechler & Wenig's Surveys of Lenawee County, take pleasure in recommending their Map to the citizens of this County, as being in our opinion, a very accurate, reliable and practical Map, and complete County Directory, and well worthy their liberal patronage. Considering the expense attending its survey and procuring so accurately all the names, localities, distances, town plats, farm lines, roads, etc., and the limited sale it must necessarily meet with "on account of its being entirely a local work" we think they offer it very reasonable, and have subscribed for the Map.

From the Household Words.

The Life Shore

Alone by my fire side dreaming,
Counting Life's golden sands;
Counting the years on my fingers
Since my youth and I shook hands—
Since I stood, weak and weary,
Oh, the shores of a troubled sea
And my youth and infancy went drifting
Down the ebb-tide dark and free—

Counting the years on my fingers
And looking along the shore!
Back to the spot where we parted,—
Parts 3 for experience —
Many a precious footprint
Trace I up in the sands,
Hence to the shadowed waters
Where my youth and I shook hands.

Wavering and slow at their restraint,
Oft halting and turning back,
Alone in the mournful journey,
Are the first steps on the track;
Looking away through the sea-mists—
Not at the stumbling feet—
Are the tear-blind eyes of the wanderer
When she and Pale Sorrow meet.

Her passion is mute in this presence,
And low, with her face on her hands,
Keeps she a virgil of silence.
Midst the wreck on the storm beat sands;
Tell comes through the noiseless darkness,
With trailing garments of mourning,
Patience, with heavenward brow.

She rises up from her weeping,
And looks o'er the sea again;
But night is low on the waters,
And her eyes may watch in vain,
Onward, by Patience guided,
Onward along the shore,
Leaving the wrecks unheeded,
Unheard for evermore.

Peace comes in the morning twilight,
Strength comes in the later day,
And all these four together
Press forward upon the way.
Not without bitter struggle
Passes the pilgrim heart;
Turned back and checked and baffled
Oft are her weary feet.

Could she but sit and rest her
One hour by the whitening wave,
And gather old dreams around her
'Tis all that her heart would crave;
But, no! she must work and suffer
While the day is daylight still;
There is time for rest and idleness
In the grave beyond the hill.

Quicksand and ghastly breakers
Are there on the forward track;
Go on, for as the tide advancing,
"No lingering, no looking back!"
Swifter, and ever swifter,
Comes the roll of the mighty flood,
And the waves of dark Time sweep over
The spot where late she stood.

A wide, black waste of water
Strewn o'er with spar and mast,
The wrecks that the currents carry
To the Present from the Past,
Across that heaving whirlpool
She may look and look again,
There is only mist and foaming,
Thick cloud and driving rain.
Dead Hopes, lost Love, lost Happiness.
Lie pale on the tempest sea—
Seed sown in youth for a harvest
That shall never gathered be.

Forward, and ever forward,
Skirting the haggard rocks,
Where no glimmer of golden sunshine
The dull, gray silence mocks.
Footsore and lagging often,
Weary both of heart and brain—
Courage, faint heart, and forward!
Such travel is not in vain.

The heat of the day is over,
Twilight enshrouds the sky;
Gone back are sullen waters,
Leaving the footprints dry.
Some faint on the deep-ribbed sea-sand
Inall their wandering maze,
When she and her heart went blindly
Though long, long aching days;
Some clear as if cut in marble,
Straight on the beaten strand;
Steady and true to their purpose,
Guided by an angel hand.

Sitting alone by my fireside,
Alone this October night,
Tracing a backward journey
By memory's pale moonlight,
Looking through Life's long vista
To its hours of golden sands,
And counting the years on my fingers
Since my youth and I shook hands
Till bright in the far-off distance,
Like sun in a pictured scene,
As I round the hills of autumns,
The old spring-times are seen.

Juddge Romsen's First Client

Old Judge Romsen, of Cowan, was fond of telling his early experience at the bar. My first case, he would say, came upon me unexpectedly, after I had waited a considerable time for a client. The way I came to get it was this:

A young girl, Helen Montressor, was to be tried at our County Court, for stealing a breast pin, valued at four dollars, and twenty dollars in gold from the trunk of her employer, James Wesley, merchant, in the town of Bedford. The theft, which was detected five weeks before, occasioned quite a talk at the time, as the girl was beautiful, and Wesley and his wife Eunice were anything but that, besides being generally detested. People said Helen had been shamefully treated by her mistress, who was jealous of her; and it was even hinted that there had been foul play in the prosecution for theft.

The subsequent trial of a gang of counterfeiters and horse-theives had so absorbed public attention that the case of Helen Montressor was forgotten and no one seemed to care for her fate. But when she was placed in the prisoner's box, her beauty riveted every eye, and when the Judge asked her who was her counsel and she modestly replied that she had none and no money to pay a lawyer, there was not a member of the bar who would not have willingly undertaken her case. The Judge, after looking round for a moment, fixed his eye upon me, and said, "Mr Romsen, will you please act as this young lady's counsel. I started as tho' I had been shot. Luckily a juror had been taken ill, and the court adjourned till ten next morning, or I am afraid I should have made sad work with my client's case.

As I left the court-room I looked at my watch; it was eleven, so I had but twenty-three hours to prepare. I called upon the District Attorney and asked to see the indictment and the evidence taken before the Justice of the Peace. As he tumbled over a pile of documents in search of the papers, he said: 'The Judge must have a spite against you, Romsen, to put you in such a tight place, and you a green hand. No offouse,' he added, as he observed the rising color of my cheek—'no offouse; I simply meant that you are inexperienced. There are the documents; take them home with you; only be sure to bring them to court to-morrow morning. You will see that your client has not a chance.'

I was annoyed at this light reference to my client, for whom I already entertained deep respect and believed innocent; but I said nothing. Hastening to my office I locked myself in and commenced the analysis of my case. The evidence consisted of the testimony of James and Eunice Wesley, Sarah Brown, a seamstress, Charlotte Boyce, a domestic, and Thomas Hanegan, a man of all work employed by the Wesleys. Hanegan's evidence seined straightforward and truthful, and so did the servant girl's. I made up my mind that they were not unfriendly to my client, and that I would necessitate a journey to Bedford. In Mrs. Brown's testimony I at once detected intense malice and determined to harrow her unmercifully in cross examination. Wesley's evidence was similar in style and matter to that of Hannegan; but Mrs Wesley's was full, discursive and acrimonious—such as, that 'She had always believed Helen to be a viper, but her husband upheld the trollop.' To me the case seemed clear; Mrs. Wesley herself had put those things in Helen's trunk.

I next went to the Court House, and requested Mr. Mace, the Sheriff, who lived in the wing of the building to introduce me to the prisoner. Although the bolts changed heavily as they sprang from the locks, our entrance did not seem to attract her attention. She was standing with clasped hands before her grated window, gazing at the sky. The Sheriff touched her arm, and said, 'Miss Montressor, Remsen is the lawyer who is to manage your case, and he wants to see you.' She started, turned quickly around, and made an inclination of her head, to indicate her readiness to listen, but she said not a word. The Sheriff left the cell and we were alone. Conscious that every moment was precious, I said: 'Miss Montressor, we must throw aside ceremony, and communicate frankly upon this painful business. I believe you are innocent. The thing is to prove you so. This promises to be difficult, but I am not without hope. If you will tell me frankly, what your experience has been with the Wesleys, my task may be lightened.'

I then put a series of questions, and learned she was fifteen years old; that she had lived with Mrs. Wesley, who had been married about eight years; that she had lived with a kind old gentleman named Gregory, who had taught her to call him grandpa; that Mrs. Wesley, who was then called Miss Naesmith, lived with Gregory, also; that he seemed afraid of Miss Naesmith; that Miss Naesmith inherited all his property, and married Wesley about a month after he died; that she told hert never to call him grandpa any more, for he wasn't any relation to her; that the day on which Gregory died he gave her a sealed package, and told her not to let Eunice see it; but to give it to a certain lawyer when he returned to town, for it would make her a rich young lady, and then he cried and said he had let Eunice have her own way too much; that she fell asleep with the packet in her lap, and when she awoke it was gone and she never dare ask any questions about it; that Mrs. Wesley hated her, and treated her like a slave, and that she sometimes thought of drowning herself, she was so miserable; that Wesley said improper things to her; that he was a bad man, but weak and under his wife's control; that the day on which her trunk was searched, she was sent on an errand to the minister's; was gone about an hour and a half, and on her return was taken up stairs to see her trunk opened before she had pulled off her bonnet and shawl; then she was sure Mrs. Wesley had put the things in her trunk while she was out, because she had overhauled it that morning, and they were not in it then; but whether Wesley knew about it she could not say, although she rather thought he did, because he looked guilty when his wife was opening her trunk.

Telling the poor girl to cheer up, I went to the Sheriff's sitting room, where I found Mrs. Mace. I at once informed her that in my opinion Miss Montresson was a persecuted girl, and hoped she would try to cheer her up, so that she could enter the court-room with a good heart on the morrow. This the kind lady promised to do, and I hastened to my office. My brain was in a whirl. Gregory—grandpa—the paket which was to make her a rich lady—its mysterious disappearance! Was old Gregory really Helen's grandfather? Was the packet his last will and testament, bequeathing his property to her? And had Eunice Naesmith, now Mrs. Wesley, stolen it from the child as she slept that she might clutch the property by virtue of a later will which had been forced from the old man? 'He cried, and said he had let Eunice have her own way too much!'—Her own way about what? I felt certain about what? I felt certain that I had got on the track of great villainy, and thought I could understand the reason for Eunice Wesley's hatred of Helen, and her desire to blast the poor girl's character. After spending a half hour in arranging my plans, I ordered a carriage and drove to Bedford.

It was two when I reached the village. I wished first to see Hannegan, Wesley's serving man. By making a few cautious inquiries at the tavern, and distributing a half dollar to the ostler, Hannegan was soon in my room. He was pleased to find I was Helen's friend, and on my promising him never to let what he said go to Mrs Wesley's ear, he told me she had treated the poor girl like a dog; that he had seen her strike Helen, and heard her threaten to kill her and ruin her reputation; and that he believed the breastpin and money had been put into the trunk by the old catamaran herself.

He stated what Helen's behavior was when the articles were found in her trunk, and described the breastpin and money. The latter consisted of four half eagles, one of which had a hole in it, that had been made by Murch, the jeweler, so Mrs. Wesley could string on a ribbon for a birthday present for the minister's little boy; and that was one way Mrs. Wesley knew the money was hers. He also gave me a letter signed "Eunice Gregory" that he had found in the yard that day, and which he maintained was in Mrs Wesley's hand writing. That had made him suspect that her name was'nt Naesmith before she was married to Wesley; and he had thought that she might have been some relation to old Mr. Gregory, and there must have been something bad to make her change her name.

This information made a deep impression on my mind, taken in connection with what Helen had told me; besides, the name Eunice Gregory seemed floating in my memory as though I had seen it connected with some event which had faded from recollection and was dimly recalled.

I dismissed Hannegan and paid a visit to Mr. Murch, the jeweler—told him who I was, and for what I called. He remembered the half eagle business—it was on his record. He turned to see on what day the hole was made in the coin. It was Wednesday the 17th of March—the very day Helen's trunk was searched. I asked at what hour the coin was delivered to Mrs Wesley. He replied that she called for it about 11 in the forenoon, and that Miss Montressor's trunk was searched about 1 in the afternoon of the same day.

'That looks very strange,' said I.—'Would you have any objections to attend the trial to morrow, with your books, and testify?'

'None at all,' he replied.

I turned to depart. At that moment Wesley entered the shop, and was accosted by the jeweler, who gave me the wink to indicate who he was. We had never before met, so I regarded him at my leisure. He was an evil looking man. Over his left eye was a queer shaped scar which ran crookedly across his forehead. The instant I saw the scar I felt as though the whole thing was clear. The scar, the description of which I so well remembered, brought the whole story freshly to my mind. I remembered now the name of Eunice Gregory—the child murderess—and there stood her accomplice under an assumed name. Giving the jeweler a warning glance, I hastened to my carriage and drove furiously home, shut myself in my room, and determined to pass the entire night, if necessary, in preparing for the contest. I wished to clear my client on the charge made against her, expose the Wesleys, and oblige them to make restitution to the wrobged and pillaged orphan.

I ransacked my memory to find something tangible concerning the past career of Eunice Gregory and her accomplice, but found nothing. I had read the story many years ago before in the newspaper, the name of which I could not remember. I could not prove that the Wesleys were the same parties; and should I mention my suspicions in court the District Attorney would scout at them as ridiculous and malicious inventions of my own, and the Judge would charge the Jury to pay no heed to them. I must sap the characters of the Wesleys in my cross examinations of their witnessess and thus try to effect a breach sufficient to justify a direct assault, on charge of conspiracy against Hannegan, and crush James Wesley on the witness stand. And I wove my meshes for the victim until the morning sun rays streamed through my windows.

The Court was opened, a jury empanelled, the case called, Helen Montressor placed in the prisoner's box, and the District Attorney's telling, merciless opening of the case completed, in what seemed to be but a few minutes of times. Helen seemed to look more innocent than ever, and I resolved that full justice she'd be done her, if my resources could compass such a result. It is in such an hour that a lawyer feels the honor and dignity of his position—it is then that he also feels his responsibility.

The first witness was Charlotte Boyce. She had been called by her mistress to go up and see Helen's trunk searched; and she went up and saw the breastpin and money found in one corner. By my cross-examination I elicited the fact that Helen had just come home from an errand, (on which she had been sent more than an hour,) when her trunk was searched, and had on her bonnet and shawl; that she looked quite innocent and unconcerned until things were found, and then she seemed astonished.' On dismissing the witness I gazed at the jury, but they sat with steam faces, as though resolved that nothing should make them clear the culprit. I called Miss Boyce back, saying I had forgotten a very important point. This excited some attention, and when I asked her if Mrs. Wesley, was in the habit of ill-treating the prisoner, every body pricked up their ears. The girl hesitated and stammered, finally said she was.

'And why do you think so?' I asked.

'Because Mrs Wesley, beat her once with a large club, and threatened to kill her and was scolding her. But don't ask me any more questions,' she suddenly exclaimed, 'or I shall loose my place!'

I glanced at Mrs. Wesley, and saw that she was regarding her servant with a look of intense malignity, and to annoy her I appealed to the Court to protect the witness against the threatening looks of her mistress. This brought all eyes to a focus on Mrs. Wesley's ugly countenance, and she turned fairly white with indignation. The Judge told the witness to speak without fear, and if she lost her place by telling the truth, she would find plenty of better ones. Being satisfied with the impression made, I told the witness she might go, and the District Attorney permitted her to pass without questioning.

The next witness was Miss Sarah Brown the seamstress—a rat-eyed hatchet faced dapper little creature. She was at work for Mrs. Wesley at the time the theft was discovered. She met Helen the day before the trunk was searched, coming out of her mistress' room and she looked so guilty she suspected she had been doing something wrong. The same day Mrs. Wesley spoke about her things being gone and she told her suspicions. Thereupon she thought it would be a good plan to search Helen's trunk; proposed to do it at once, but Mrs. Wesley preferred to wait. When the trunk was searched, the things were found in it, just as she expected they would be.'

When the witness was passed over to me, I asked in a careless tone, how she knew the money was in Mrs Wesley's room the day she had met Helen coming thence.

"She knew it because Mrs Wesley had told her. Couldn't be mistaken, for Mrs Wesley had spoken about the half eagle with it, which she was going to present to the minister's boy.'

This I made her say over and over again until there could be no mistake about it, and then asked her if she knew who made the hole in the half eagle.

'Yes; Mr. Murch the, jeweler, made it.'

'Is he in the room?' I asked.

'Yes there he is,' said she pointing.

I told Miss Brown that she could go, and the District Attorney requested that Mr. Murch should be sworn. The Attorney handed Mr. Murch the identical half eagle and asked if he recognized it—He said he did; that the magistrate who committed the prisoner had made a mark upon it.

'That's all the witness is your's Mr. Remsen.'

'Do you remember, Murch on what day of the month you made the hole in the half eagle?' I asked

'It was on the 17th day of March,' said he.

'Why that is the very day the prisoner's trunk was searched, was it not?' said I turning to the District Attorney.

'That is the day mentioned in the indictment,' he replied.

Turning again to the witness, I said, Murch, please to reccollect with precision; you heard the witness who preceeded you, swear that Mrs. Wesley told her that the identical half eagle with the hole she made in it, was in her husband's trunk on or before the 16th of last March.

'Yes,' said Murch. 'I heard her swear to that, and was astonished, for Mrs Wesley had given the coin in the afternoon of the 16th and told me I must have it fixed by noon the next day, at 11 on the 17th she came for it, and at 1 that afternoon it was found in Miss Montressor's trunk.

The District Attorney turned sharp around and gave the Wesleys a piercing look. Mrs. W was immovable; but Wesley turned pale and fairly cowered beneath the gaze of the Attorney, who I saw, was now convinced of the true fact of the case; and Judge and jury seemed to be of the same opinion. I felt certain of a verdict in my client's favor; but how was I to crush the Wesleys, and how win back her estate? I decided on my course.

Hannegan was next. I showed by him that Mrs. Wesley had persecuted the prisoner in the most outrageous manner—beating her and threatening to kill her, and ruin her reputation, and treating her shamefully. His testimony excited so much indignation against the couple, that I longed for the moment when James Wesley should take the stand. When Hannegan retired, Mrs. Wesley whispered to her husband, and he whispered to the Attorney. The latter seemed surprised but announce that the prosecution would there rest the case.

Every body was surprised that the Wesleys were not called, and my plans were all disarranged. I divined at once that Mrs. Wesley had suggested this course to shield her husband and herself from cross examination. Had the instinct of self preservation told her what was coming? I rose to open my case for the defense and I began by stating that I had incontestible evidence that a conspiracy had been entered into to blast the character of my client, to enable the parties in the conspiracy to perfect certain secret plans, which would fill the community with horror. I saw everybody was prepared to believe almost everything, and determined to waste no time in words. So I requested that James Wesley might be sworn, and desired the Judge to have Eunice Wesley removed while her husband was examined. She was taken out by the sheriff and I turned to question James Wesley.

'James Wesley' said I sternly 'how came that scar on your forehead?'

As the villian turned ghastly, staggered, and clutched at the railing of the witness box for support; I felt sure of my man.

'Answer me, Bob Harmon; how came that scar on your forehead?'

At the mention of the 'Bob Harmon,' the wretch fell back upon his seat and groaned. 'Oh don't bring that again me!'

'I shall bring that up more too, unless you answer me truly about this pretended theft. Now tell me—did not Eunice Gregory put these things in Miss Montressor's trunk?'

'Oh, my God! how did you know about Eunice Gregory? Don't bring that up now. It's gone by years ago,' groaned the wretched man.

'Answer me then; did not your wife put those things in Miss Montressor's trunk.

'Yes, she did; let the girl go and, and don't ask me any more questions.'

The excitement had now become overwhelming, and the winess began fear for his bodily safety—a fact I determined to use as an additional screw. 'I shall ask for a little more,' I replied 'as I do not wish to expose you to the rage of this audience, if you'll answer promptly.—Where is the will old Mr. Gregory executed, in which he made his grandchild, Helen Montressor, his heir, and which he gave her to give to his lawyer when he returned—the will your wife stole from the child as she lay sleeping?'

'Oh Lord! it's come at last! just as I told her it would.'

'Where is the will?' I thundered.

'It is burnt,' he exclaimed but Helen is the only surviving relation, and this will by which my wife got the property is a forged one.'

Having achieved everything and not caring to prolong the painful scene, I asked the District Attorney if it would not be best to dismiss the case. He cheerfully assented, and Miss Montressor, who in her flush of agitation and thankfulness looked more lovely than ever, was released from the custody of Mr. Mace, and placed in charge of his wife, while Wesley and his wife shrank away from public indignation.

The excitement was so great the Court was adjourned till 3 P.M., and I was obliged to state for the gratification of the crowd how I had managed to get on track of the Wesleys. I told that many years before I had read an account of the murder of a child by its aunt Eunice Gregory, assisted by her lover, one Bob Harmon, for the purpose of possessing her niece's estate. In that account it was stated that Bob Harmon, at the time of the murder had fallen down an area and gashed his forehead terribly, which afterwards healed and left a peculiar scar. The hints I received from Helen's story, and the letter signed Eunice Gregory, had set my memory at work, and when I met Wesley and observed the peculiar scar on his forehead, the whole thing flashed upon me. I determined to make a bold push to expose them, and not only defend Helen on the charge of larceny, but wrench from her guardians aunt the patrimony that had been withheld from her.

My explanation was received with applause, and a movement set on foot to have the Wesleys indicted for perjury; but it was never carried out, as they disappeared from that part of the country and we all thought it best not to bring them back for any purpose whatever.

Helen secured her estate, and I secured Helen; and if you will go with me you shall have an introduction to her and the children. That first case did the business for me all around, as I secured a great reputation, plenty of practice, a handsome wife and a large fortune.

Infidels often grumble about the cost of preachers, who by the by are the poorest paid set of men the United States, as a whole, with here and there an exception: and who in order to live must have Donation parties, as though they were paupers, because they were preachers of eternal realities. The cost of all the clergy in the United States is but $12,000,000 annually, while the criminals cost $40,000,000, the lawyers $70,000,000, and Rum $200,000,000.

The Student's Welcome To—

As we ——— in a joyous greeting
To Aurora's blushing dawn,
Who in her golden chariot
By w a of clouds gay drawn,
She glides with glittered radiance,
Her bright aerial way,
And opens on the slumbering world
The rosy light of day;

As we gaze with rapture pleased
Upon the living loveliness,
While sight with heightened charms
Is enchanting shown us,
And each object fades in darkness
On the wide and spreading lawn,
And the fleecy clouds above them
Are in rainbow colors drawn;

As a throb of soft emotion
Fills the bosom with delight,
While we gaze upon the beauties
And the jocund Queen of Night,
As she beams with bright effulgence,
On the word that slumbering lay,
In her charms more sweetly pleasing
Than the lovely King of Day;

So we welcome thee fair lady,
With emotions of delight,
And gaze with thrilling pleasure
On thy gentle beauty bright,
And thy well-lit eye of feeling
As a pledge that we shall see
Both the charms of mind and person
Shine unitedly in thee.

COFFEE A POWERFUL ANTIDOTE.—An able medical writer says that very few persons, and but a small number of medical men, know that Coffee is one of the most important antidotes to many deadly poison and to a great many ordinary drugs. This remarkable fact leads to serious consequences, many patients receiving the right remedies, but not being prohibited from taking Coffee, destroy the intended effects of their medicine, become worse, and lead the physician to change the right treatment into a false one, and perhaps unhappy one—while the simple knowledge of the above fact would have contributed to ameliorate their state and save them.—But far more important is it to know that the many fatal results of accidental, spontaneous or criminal empoisonments could be stopped almost instantly by administering that simple antidote, Coffee, while the loss of time in calling a physician, is—oft it only the cause of the loss of life

FREEDOM IN MEXICO.—This country, so long distracted by factions and revolutions, has adopted a new Constitution, under which, it is hoped, she may have deliverance but of the worst of her troubles. It contains one provision, which, in view of the intrigues of the American Slaveocracy against the peace of the country, is specially significant. It declares that all persons born in Mexico are born free, and that slaves coming thither from other countries are free the moment their feet touch the soil, and entitled to the protection of the laws. It also declares that no treaty for the extradition of criminals shall surrender those who, in the country where the crime was committed, were held as slaves. The slaveholders of the United States, long on the Mexican border, have been anxious for a long time to make some treatment with the government of that country for the restoration of their run-aways. The new Constitution looks this game well.—N. Y. Standard.

VOLCANO IN GEORGIA.—According to a writer in the Chronicle and Sentinel, a volcano has recently made its appearance in Pigeon Mountain, some ten miles distant from the town of Lafayette, in Walker county, Georgia. A roaring has been heard at that place in the mountain, since October, 1856, but on the 24th of April last the earth was violently agitated. The citizens in the vicinity were aroused and terribly frightened by the commotion. When observing the mountain they were more than ever terrified, for a brilliant light was plainly seen issuing from the summit. The atmosphere soon became strongly impregnated with a disagreeable sulphuric odor. On the following day a thick torrent of smoke and ashes ascended from where the light was previously seen. The smoke was not visible at night. This was perhaps owing to the elements being covered at the time with a very dark cloud. No blaze has yet been seen to issue from the crater. It has continued about as above described ever since, emitting smoke and ashes without intermission. The crater is thought to be about one hundred yards in diameter.—No one has yet ventured near enough to ascertain anything of its general depth. Several springs in the vicinity have totally disappeared. Many of the citizens are very much alarmed, and some are even moving out of the valley, through anticipation and fear of a violent eruption.

NEW YORK May 23.

A Washington correspondent writes to the Sun that the Cabinet are unanimous in their determination to oppose the partition of Nicaragua, and that the government's last resort will be to send out a special agent to treat with Walker, if he still occupies a position in the country, rather than allow the Anglo-Costa Rican usurpation of the Transit route to be consummated. The same correspondent asserts that Lord Niper has been informed of this government's reasons, and he states that England will acquiesce, rather than have amicable relations with the United States disturbed.

Extra Session.

We have noticed with surprise and regret that a portion of the press of the State is seriously discussing the propriety, and urging the necessity of calling an extra session of the State Legislature.

We say [with] regret, for in the first place, we are not aware of any necessity for the call of an extra session, and in the second place such a necessity if it should be found to exist, is always a matter of regret. There can be no mistaking the strong disinclination of the people to this course, nor will anything but a pressing and unavoidable necessity reconcile them to its expense. It has at any rate seldom happened that any party in this State has felt itself to be sufficiently fortified to risk, under any ordinary circumstances, the experiment.

The prominent reason urged for calling an extra session seems to be a supposed defect in the Bill for the sale of the Swamp Lands, which will result in withholding them from sale until it can be amended. Now admitting all this to be true, we do not see that it can result in any such real loss or injury to the State as to justify the inconvenience and expense of calling an extra session. It is not intimated that there is any defect in the Swamp Land act proper, by which they are set apart and appriated to the purposes of Education—and by the provisions of our Constitution, this appropriation is irrevocable. All that an extra session could do would be to make perhaps more feasible arrangements for their sale.

Now we very much doubt if it is for the true interest of the State that they should be offered for sale at present. In the present stringent state of the money market there could be but little competition in the purchase of wild lands, of this character—and it is not certainly for the interest of the important fund to which they are appropriated that they should be disposed of at a sacrifice. We think it a commendable feature in the Bill providing for their disposal, that the minimum price at which they can be sold is fixed so high as to prevent the sacrifice of the more valuable portions of them. When these are disposed of at something like their true value, it will then be time enough to reduce the price if found necessary.

We cannot sympathise with that uneasy restlessness of speculators and politicians, which cannot be at rest so long as there is a foot of land to vest of funds connected with the State for disposal, and which would not think that the [illegible] of the [illegible] at sufficiently [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

The invitation was accepted, and the man took a seat by the stove. The heat fired up the liquor with which he was soaked, and he soon gave such signs of drunken sickness that the Doctor, thinking his Gospel was doing no good, cried, 'Turn him out! turn him out!' The poor fellow was put to the door, but waked up just enough to sputter out as he went, "Such preaching as that is enough to make a dog sick"

The recoil was tremendous, throwing the old lady on her back! She promptly struggled to regain her feet, but the boy cried out, "Lay still Granny—there are five more charges to go off yet."

Probate Notice.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss. At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office in the City of Adrian, on Monday the 25th day of May, in the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty seven.

Present, Fernando C. Beaman, Judge of Probate In the matter of the Estate of Isaac H. Ketcham deceased. On reading and filing the Petition of William McCowan praying that the administrator on the estate of said deceased may be authorized to convey to him certain real estate therein described, for causes therein set forth.

Thereupon it is ordered, That Monday, the Twentieth day of July next at one o'clock in the afternoon, be assigned for the hearing of said Petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, there to be holden at the Probate Office, in the City of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the Petitioner should not be granted:

And it is further ordered, That said Petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Tecumseh Herald, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for six successive weeks previous to said day of hearing. Patent Medicines.

A Medicine that Never Debilitates.

DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR,
OR LIVER REMEDY.

HAS ALL THE GOOD QUALITIES OF A Purgative medicine, answering the purposes of any Cathartic without the debilitating effects experienced from most purgatives It acts slowly and gently, but surely, moving the bowels to carry off all the secreted matter, at the same time, stimulating the Liver to a proper performance of its functions

The Invigorator cures the Sick Headache. Take one or two tea-spoonsful at each attack and it will soon disappear. For an overloaded stomache, or when food rises or sours, take the Invigorator after eating, and it will not prove disagreeable or oppressive For Heartburn, Palpitation, or difficult breathing take a teaspoonful once or twice daily. For Loss of Appetite, Lungs or Listlessness, the medicine is invaluable It will restore the apperite and make the food digest well—Nightmare take a teaspoonful on retiring, and the demons of dream-land will all be fairies. After eating a heavy dinner, take a dose of Invigorator and it will relieve all oppression or fullness. The Invigorator is a Liver Remedy of unequalled virtue, acting directly on that organ, curing Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Bilious Attacks, Dysentery, Piles Worms, and all Female Obstructions, for which it has no equal.

We know there is nothing no[illegible] American public, prepared wit[illegible] a scientific man, particularly fo[illegible] the Liver, as Dr. Sanford's In[illegible] Liver Remedy. It has attained [illegible] second to no other article in the [illegible] simply because it rests on its own merit. To convince all by trial that it is all its proprietors claim it to be, if any of our readers are suffering from such diseases as are described in Dr Sanford's advertisement, we know of no remedy that will so surely cure as the Invigorator.

There has lately been brought to our notice a medicine that seems to possess wonderful, cuptive and healing proprieties in diseases of the Liver, stomache and Digestive Organs. It came to us with so many testimonials in its favor that we have noted its effects in some of the worst cases of continual debility, caused by deranged liver, and in every instance the effect was to relieve or give a permanent cure. Dr. Sanford's Invigorator, or Liver remedy is what we refer to. We always have been credulous about cures by patent medicines, but we are convinced that this medicine, for family use, is not over rated by the host of recommendations it has. Our advice is, for all troubled with Indigestion, Debility or Bowel Complaint, to get a bottle and try it; our word for it, relief will be experienced.

BLESSINGS To The Invalids who use Dr. Sanford's Invigorator, for it will relieve them of their pains as soon as it is taken into their stomach Pain and misery cannot exist where the Invigorator is used, for it will as surely drive them away, as daylight will banish darkness, of this there can be no doubt to those who try it, for it carries conviction with every dose taken. Another evidence is the thousands of certificates from those who use it or have been cured by it—Try one bottle, if it does not benefit, then we are mistaken

HEALTH OR SICKNESS.
CHOOSE BETWEEN THEM.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

The blood furnishes the material of every tone, muscle, gland and fibre in the human frame. When pure it secures health to every organ, when corrupt, it necessarily produces disease. Holloway's Pills operate directly upon the elements of the stream of life, neutralizing the principle of disease and thus radically curing the malady, whether located in the nerves, the stomach, the liver, the bowels, the muscles, the skin, the brain, or any other part of the system.

USED THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

Holloway's Pills are equally efficacious in complaints common to the whole human race, and in disorders peculiar to certain climates and localities.

ALARMING DISORDERS.

Dyspepsia and derangement of the liver, the source of infirmity and suffering, and the cause of innumerable deaths yield to these curatives, in [illegible] cases, however aggravated setting as a mild purgative, alternative and tonic; they relieve the bowels, purify the fluids, and invigorate the system and the constitution at the same time.

General Weakness—Nervous Complaints.

When all stimulants fail, the refreshing and bracing properties of these Pills give firmness to the shaking nerves and enfeebled muscles of the victim of general debility.

DELICATE FEMALES.

All irregularities and ailments incident to the delicate and sensitive organs of the sex are removed or prevented by a few doses of these mild but infallible alternatives. No mother who regards her own or her children's health should fail to have them within her reach.

The London "Lancet" the London "Medical Review" and the most eminent of the faculty in Great Britain, France and Germany, have eulogized the Pills and their inventor.

Firstly for Cash.
Secondly on Short Credit.
Thirdly, had to take Long Credit, Orders and Accounts.

Lastly, I have been compelled to wait for payment of Goods sold on Six Months time, long enough for a man to visit California, get rich, and return, before payment could be forced or coaxed.

Now I wish to say, to my numerous friends and patrons, that I am thoroughly convinced that the mode of buying goods on time is both injurious to the buyer and seller.

I will hereafter Sell for Ready pay, at such prices that will defy all competion in this Town, State, or the United States.

Lenawee County Farmer.

Tecumseh, Michigan, May 1857.

"Would you be Young Again?"

Composed by a Scottish nobleman, Caroline Baroness Nairn, in 1842, when in her seventy-sixth year;

Would you be young again?
So would not I—
One tear to memory given,
Onward I'll hie.
Life's dark flood forded o'er,
All but at rest on shore,
Say, would you plunge once more,
With bodies nigh?

If you might, would you now
Retrace your way—
Wander though stormy wilds,
Faint and astray?
Night's gloomy watches fled,
Morning all beaming red,
Hope's smiles around us shed,
Heavenward—away.

Where, then, are those dear ones,
Our joy and delight—
Dear, and more dear, though now
Hidden from sight?
Where they rejoice to be,
There is the land for me,
Fly time, fly speedily—
Come, life and light.

A Word to Farmers.

We have yet a few words for the times to utter, and will condense them as much as possible.

We have no desire to create a "pressure" or a "panic," but rather to prevent one. And this we consider the way to do it:

1. Let the farmer, or other man of moderate means, who meditates building a new house this summer, consider carefully his means as well as his needs, and be sure he has the wherewithal to finish before he is tempted to begin. If owes nothing which he is liable to be required to pay, and has means in hand sufficient to surely carry him through, let him go ahead with energy and confidence. If not let him fix up the old shelter and make it do another year. Don't let the new house eat up the old farm.

2. Let the country merchant about to buy a fresh stock, look carefully through his old one, and see whether he cannot cut down his orders considerably without impairing his assortment. If he bought $10,000 worth last spring, let him see if judicious and careful purchases of $6,000 worth would not replenish his stock this spring. Let him who sells $50,000 worth and him who sells $3,000 worth per annum make similar retrenchments in their spring purchases. And let all be sure that their customers will not only buy and consume, but pay for their entire stock before the season for replenishing again.

3. Let each consumer in moderate circumstances ask himself—"Have I paid for the goods I have already bought and used?" If not, let me stop short, and buy no farther than I can pay. The old score must be wiped off as I can afford it, but not a dollar's worth shall hereafter be charged to my "running account." If this constrains the wife and daughters to wear their old dresses, and the sons to wear their old dress boots and hats till the busy season shall have ended, they will manage somehow to survive the trial.

4. Let the farmer who lives under mortgage or chronic debt ask himself if he could not sell something that could pay off at least a part of that debt. Suppose he has one hundred acres of land, and owes one thousand dollars might he not sell off a quarter of his land, pay off his mortgage, and have as much land left as he has stock for, with means to till to the best advantage? But very many are worrying along under a load of debt who have much more than one hundred acres of arable land. To all such we say, sell off enough if possible so as to pay your debt, and provide you with adequate stock and implements for the residue, unless you are sure your crops will pay off your mortgage when due, and don't rely on the chance of your land rising rapidly in value. It may do so: in time, it probably will; but the sheriff may sell you out ere that time shall have arrived.

5. If you are pressed to take stock in a new railroad or other improvement calculated to benefit your locality, do not shrink behind your neighbors and try to reap a personal benefit at their expense, but consider what you can do, in justice to your family and creditors, and say; "If I can sell a piece off my farm for enough to pay up my subscription, and have a farm left worth more after your road shall be built, than the whole now is, I will go in; but if not, you must wait till next year—at all events, I must. I value railroads, but I cannot permit them to plunge me deeper into debt. Henceforth I pay as I go.

6. This is a good time to stop drinking liquor, using tobacco, and other noxious habits like these. There is a good deal might be said on this head, but we will leave our readers to suppose it. We are a prodigal people, and are always letting our expenses run ahead of our income. Let us resolve now to see the end of this, though this should bring us down for a season to old clothes and coarse fare.

We are heavily in debt to Europe. Our city merchants and bankers owe those of Great Britian; the country owes the cities; the farmers owe the merchants—in short, two thirds of us are in debt. To owe no man anthing is not the rule, but the exception.—The bare interest on our Foreign Debt is a heavy item in our annual outgoes: The Tariff Reduction, which takes effect in July, will inundate us with more goods, even though we do not order them. We may not be able to pay off much this year, but let us resolve to go in debt no further. Let us stem the current this year, that we may be able to roll it back thereafter. And as our Foreign Debt is mainly made of debts of companies, and individuals, let us sternly resolve that we will, individually and corporately, go in debt no further. It is high time that we recognized and enforced the the sound old maxim of pay as you go.—N. Y. Tribune.

Planting Potatoes

It appears from statements occasionly to be met with in the British agricultural journals, that there is no more uniformity of opinion or of practice, in planting potatoes among the farmers across the Atlantic, than there is among ourselves. The editor of the North British Agriculturist, says in the late issue, that he had the pleasure of witnessing at Cameron House, near Edinborough, the result of an experiment which had been instituted relative to the comparitive advantages of planting potatoes, whole or in sets. The first experiment was with six whole potatoes, weighing together one and a half pounds.

They were planted on the 28th of March, (the season there admitting of much earlier planting than here) three feet apart every way, and the produce three hundred and thirty four potatoes, weighing seventy five pounds or an average of twelve and a half pends for each tuber planted, and equal to about thirty two and a half tons per Scotch acre, or nearly twenty six per English acre.

The second experiment was with twenty eight pounds of potatoes planted in sets at the same time, two and a half apart in drills, and one foot between the sets. The produce was one thousand one hundred and fifty pounds, being a return of forty one for one in weight, and equal to twenty three and a half tons per Scoth acre, or about nineteen tons per English acre.

A poor women recently applied to a charitable institution in Philadelphia for assistance, giving as a reason why she needed relief that her husband followed politics for a living, and it did not support his family.

ASTRONOMICAL.—At this time Mars sets at eight in the evening, Jupiter at half past twelve in the morning and Venus at a quarter to eight in the evening; consequently all these planets are visible after sunset. Saturn is now a morning star.

A farmer was asked why he did not take a new paper. "Because," said he, "my father, when he died, left me a good many newspapers, and I have not read them through yet."

Patent Medicines.

ONE BOTTLE ONLY.
DR. SANFORD'S
INVIGORATOR.
OR LIVER REMEDY.

It is designed to cure any one who ails with Liver Complaint, unless the disease has reached a stage of confirmed organic disease, beyond the reach of medicine. We wish to call the attention of the invalid, that after for a series of years compounded by different men—and we will say a good Preparation for the Liver—we have at last succeeded in producing what it is hoped is a reliable being compounded with great care.

And from the strength of these gums may be formed what is known as the basis of the Invigorator containing as much strength as one hundred doses of Calomel without any of its disorderly effects.

One bottle is the surest thing known to carry away the bad effects of mercurial poison of any kind.

Only one bottle is needed to draw out of the system the effects of medicine after a long sickness.

One bottle taken for jaundice removes all yellowness of unnatural color from the skin.

One dose after eating is sufficient to relieve the stomach and prevent the food from rising and souring.

Only one dose taken before retiring prevents nightmare.

One dose taken at night loosens the bowels gently and cures costiveness.

One dose taken after each meal will cure Dyspepsia.

One dose of two tea spoonful will always relieve the Sick Headache.

One bottle taken for female obstruction removes the cause of the disease and makes a perfect cure.

Only one dose immediately relieves Colic, while One dose oft repeated is a sure cure for Cholera Morbus and a sure preventative of Cholera.

One dose taken often will prevent the recurrence of bilious attacks, while it relieves all painful feelings.

☞One or two doses taken occasionally is one of the best remedies for a cold ever known.

Thousands of cases of inflamation and weakness of the lungs have been cured by the Invigorator.

One dose taken a short time before eating gives vigor to the appetite and makes food digest well.

One dose often repeated cures Drought Diarrhœa in its worst forms while summer and bowel complaints yield almost to the first dose.

One or two doses cures attacks caused by worms, while for women in children there is no cure, safer and speedier remedy in the world as it never fails.

There is no exaggeration in these statements, they are plain an I sober facts, that we can give evidence to prove while all who use it are giving their unanimous testimony in its favor.

We wish all who are sick and debilitated to try this remedy, and test it thoroughly and any who are not benefited by its use we should like to hear from, as we have yet to hear from the first person who has used a bottle of invigorator without receiving benefit, for there are such astonishing medicinal virtues in it, that all no matter how long they have been affected if their complaint arises from a deranged liver will be benefited, if not entirely cured.

Holloway's Ointment.

THE GREAT COUNTER IRRITANT.

The virus of disease often makes its way to the internal organs through the pores of the skin. This penetrating Ointment, melting under the hand as it is rubbed in, is absorbed through the same channels, and, reaching the seat of inflamation promptly and invariably subdues it, whether located in the kidneys, the liver, the lungs, or any other important organ. It penetrates the surface of the interior, through the countless tubes that communicate with the skin as summer rain passes into the fevered earth, diffusing its cool and regenerating influence.

Skin Diseases and Glandular Swellings.

Every species of exterior irritation is quickly reduced by the anti-inflammatory action of this Ointment. Angry eruptions, such as Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Tetter, Ringworm, Scald head, Nettle Rash, Scabies (or Itch), &c., die out, to return no more, under its application. Hospital experience in all parts of the world proves its infallibility in diseases of the skin, the muscles, the joints and the glands.

ULCERS, SORES & TUMORS.

The effect of this unrivaled external remedy upon scrofula, and other virulent ulcers and sores, is almost Miraculous. It first discharges the poison which produces suppuration and proud flesh, and thus the cures which its healing properties afterward complete are safe as well as permanent.

Wounds, Bruises, Burns and Scalds.

In cases of the fracture of the bones, injuries caused by steam explosions, bruises; burns, scalds, rheumatism, stiffness of the joints, and contraction of the sinews, it is employed and warmly recommended by the faculty. This marvelous remedy has been introduced by it inventor in person into all the leading hospitals of Europe, and no private household should be without it.

UNDENIABLE TESTIMONY

The medical staff of the French and English Armies in the Crimea, have officially signed their approval of Holloway's Ointment, as the most reliable dressing for sabre cuts, stabs, and gun-shot wounds. It is also used by the surgeons of the Allied Navies.

Both the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following cases:

Bunions	Lumbago	Sore Legs	Swelled Glands
Burns	Mercurial	Sore Breasts	Stiff Joints
Chapped Hands	Eruptions	Sore Heads	Ulcers
Chilblains	Piles	Sore Throats	Venereal Sores
Fistulas	Rheumatism	Sores of all kinds	Wounds of all kinds
Gout	Salt Sheum	Scalds
	Sam Diseases	Sprains

Sold at the Manufactories of Professor Holloway, 80 Maiden Lane, New York, and 244 Strand, London, and by all respectable Druggists and Dealers of Medicines throughout the United States, and the civilized world, in Pots, at 25 cents, 62 1-2 cents, and $1 each.

Patent Medicines.

AYER'S
CHERRY PECTORAL,
FOR THE RAPID CURE OF
Colds, Coughs, and Hoarseness.

Reference, Mass., 1851, Dec. 1853.

DR. J. C. AYER: I do not hesitate to say the best remedy I have ever found for Coughs, Hoarseness, Influenza, and the several attendant symptoms of a cold, is your Cherry Pectoral. Its constant use in my practice and my family for the last ten years has shown it to possess superior virtues for the treatment of those complaints. HIRAM KNIGHT, M. D.

A. R. MORTLEY, Esq., of Utica, N. Y., writes: "I have used your Pectoral myself and in my family ever since you invented it, and believe it the best medicine for its purpose ever put out. With a full belief I should soon pay twenty-five dollars for a bottle than do without it, or take any other remedy."

Croup, Whooping Cough, Influenza.

SCHUYLERVILLE, Mass., Feb. 7, 1856.

BROTHER AYER: I will cheerfully certify your PECTORAL is the best remedy we possess for the cure of Whooping Cough, Croup, and the ghost diseases of children. We of your fraternity in the South appreciate your skill, and commend your medicine to our people.

HIRAM COGSLIN, M. D.

AMOS LEE, Esq., Monterey, Ia., writes, 24 Jan., 1855: "I had a tedious Influenza, which confined me in doors six weeks; took many medicines without relief; finally tried your PECTORAL by the advice of our clergyman. The first dose relieved the soreness in my throat and lungs; less than one half the bottle made me completely well. Your medicines are the cheapest as well as the best we can buy, and we esteem you, Doctor, and your remedies as the poor man's friend."

Asthma or Phthisic, and Bronchitis.

WEST MANCHESTER, Pa., Feb. 4, 1856.

SIR: Your CHERRY PECTORAL is performing marvellous cures in this section. It has relieved several from alarming symptoms of consumption, and is now curing a man who has labored under an affection of the lungs for the last forty years. HENRY L. PARKS, Merchant.

A. A. RAMSEY, M. D., Afton, Monroe Co., Iowa, writes, Sept. 6, 1855: "During my practice of many years I have found nothing equal to your CHERRY PECTORAL for giving ease and relief to consumptive patients, or curing such as are curable."

We might add volumes of evidence, but the most convincing proof of the virtues of this remedy is found in its effects upon trial.

Consumption.

Probably no one remedy has ever been known which cured so many and such dangerous cases as this. Some no human aid can reach; but even to those the CHERRY PECTORAL affords relief and comfort.

ASTOR HOUSE, NEW YORK CITY, March 5, 1856

DOCTOR AYER, LOWELL: I feel it a duty and a pleasure to inform you what your CHERRY PECTORAL has done for my wife. She had been five months laboring under the dangerous symptoms of consumption, from which no aid we could procure gave her much relief. She was steadily failing, until Dr. Strong of this city, where we have come for advice, recommended a trial of your medicine. We have his kindness, as well as your skill, for she has recovered from that day. She is not yet as strong as she used to be, but is free from her cough, and calls herself well.

Yours with gratitude as ever,
ORLANDO SHELBY, of SHELBYVILLE.

Consumptives, do not despair till you have tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It is made by one of the best medical Chemists in the world, and its cures all around us bespeak the high merits of its virtues. — Philadelphia Ledger.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills.

THE sciences of Chemistry and Medicine have been taxed their utmost to produce this best, most perfect purgative which is known to man. Innumerable proofs are shown that these Pills have virtues which surpass in excellence the ordinary medicines, and that they win universally upon the esteem of all men. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. Their penetrating properties stimulate the vital activities of the body, remove the obstructions of its organs, purify the blood, and expel disease. They purge out the foul humors which breed and grow distemper, stimulate sluggish or disordered organs into their natural action, and impart healthy tone with strength to the whole system. Not only do they cure the everyday complaints of every body, but also formidable and dangerous diseases that have baffled the best of human skill. While they produce powerful effects, they are at the same time, in diminished doses, the safest and best physic that can be employed for children. Being sugar coated, they are pleasant to take, and being purely vegetable, are free from any risk of harm. Cures Have been made which surpass belief were they not substantiated by men of such exalted position and character as to forbid the suspicion of untruth. Many eminent clergymen and physicians have lent their names to certify to the public the reliability of my remedies, while others have sent me the assurance of their conviction that my Preparations contribute immensely to the relief of my afflicted, suffering fellow men.

The Agent below named is pleased to furnish gratis my American Almanac containing directions for their use and certificates of their cures of the following complaints:—

Costiveness, Bilious Complaints, Rheumatism, Dropsy, Heartburn, Headache, arising from a foul stomach, Nausea, Indigestion, Morbid inaction of the Bowels and Pain arising therefrom, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, all Disorders and Cutaneous Diseases which require an evacuant Wash one, Scrofula or Kings' Evil. They also, by purifying the blood and stimulating the system, cure many complaints which it would seem could be suppose they could reach, such as Deafness, Partial Blindness, Neuralgia and Nervous Irritability, Derangements of the Liver and Kidneys, Gout, and the whole kindred complaints arising from a low state of the body or obstruction of its functions.

Do not be put off by unprincipled dealers with some other pill they make more profit on. Ask for AYER'S PILLS, and take nothing else. No other they can give you compares with them in intrinsic value or curative power. The sick want the best and there is for them, and they should have it.

No Family

Can afford to be without Mustang Liniment in their house. The many accidents we are liable to, may render it necessary any moment, and nothing is capable of performing such a certain cure. (Extract) "In lifting the kettle from the fire it caught and scalded my hands and person severely—one hand almost to a crisp. The torture was unbearable. It was a awful sight." "The Mustang Liniment appeared to extract the pain almost immediately. It healed rapidly and left no scar of account. Chas. Foster, 420 Broad street, Philadelphia." It is truly a wonderful article. It will cure any case of swelling, burns, stiff joints, Eruptions, or rheumatism. For Horses it should never be dispensed with. One Dollar's worth of Mustang has frequently saved a valuable horse. It cures galds, spavins, Ringbone, spavin and founders. Beware of imitations. Sold in all parts of the habitable globe.

The Great Family Weekly Paper

THE NEW YORK LEDGER has now attained the extraordinary circulation of One Hundred and Ninety Thousand copies. The LEDGER is devoted to POLITE LITERATURE, ORIGINAL TALES, SKETCHES, POETRY, ESSAYS, GOSSIP, CURRNET NEWS and maintains a high moral tone. It is every where acknowledged to be the best family paper in the world: hence its extraordinary and unheard of popularity. Mr BONNER, the Proprietor of the LEDGER, employs the best talent in the country, and by so doing makes the best paper. Such writers as Fanny Fern, Sylvanus Cobb, Jr., and Emerson Bennett, are permanently engaged on it, and will write for no other paper hereafter. Mrs. Sigourney, also, constantly writes for it; so do a host of other popular authors, including Mrs. Emma D. E. N. Southworth, Alice Cary, Mrs Vaughn, Mary W Stanley Gibson, Clara Sydney, &c. &c.. The LEDGER is beautifully illustrated.

The N. Y. LEDGER is printed on beautiful white paper, and is composed of eight pages, making the handsomest weekly paper it the country. It is published every Saturday and sold at all the news offices in every city and town throughout the country; and is mailed for subscribers at two dollars per annum; two copies are sent for three dollars. Any person obtaining eight subscribers at $1 50 each (which is our lowest club rates,) and sending us $12 will be entitled to one copy free. Terms invariably in advance. DR. Everson's Great American Remedy for Ague, or Chills and Fever, is the most popular and certain remedy now known. The people and the press speak of it in the highest terms of commendation. It is pleasant to take, does not purge, vomit or weaken, but invigorates the system. It contains no Arsenic, Strichnine, Quinine, or any other poisonous or injurious drug, but it is an originally discovered Antidote to Malaria and as an antidote Killer it has no equal. Call and get a circular containing certificates from Professional Physician, Clergymen and the press.

THE NEW SPECIAL
Topographical Map of
Lenawee county, Mich.,

From original surveys and actual measurment throughout the whole county, by Bechler and Wenig, Surveyors and Civil Engineers, Authors of Maps of Allegany, Schuyler, and Drumd County, N. Y., and Washtenaw Co., Mich.

The subscribers, who have been engaged in compiling a map of Lenawee County since 14 months, are about to review the whole work in order to correct even the slightest error, if any should have occurred. The same time they will obtain subscribers for the enterprise, which is connected with immense labor and expense."

The Map is about 4x5 feet in size, and contains every public road with all its variations, the localities of Dwellings, places of Worship, Post Offices, and School Houses, Stores, Mills, Shops, &c.; also, section and farm lines with the owner's name engraved to it; Views of Public buildings in every village in the County on the margin forming not only a correct and complete, but also an ornamental Map, and will be handsomely colored, mounted and furnished to subscribers for $6 per copy

BECHLER, WENIG & CO.,
Adrian & Philadelphia

The undersigned having examined Messrs Bechler & Wenig's Surveys of Lenawee Co., take pleasure in recommending their Map to the citizens of this County, as being in our opinion, a very accurate, reliable and practical Map, and complete County Directory, and well worthy their liberal patronage.—Considering the expense attending its surveying so accurately all the names, localities, distances, town plats, farm lines, views, etc., and the limited sale it must necessarily meet with "on account of its being entirely a local work" we think they offer it very reasonable, and have subscribed for the Map

MORE BOUNTY LAND.

THE ACT OF CONGRESS, passed March 3d, 1855, gives

160 Acres of Land,

To every Officer, Soldier, Musician, in the Army, or man, Marine, Clerk, or Landsman in the Navy, who served fourteen days, or was in any battle in any war since 1790, or to their widows or minor children—embracing officers and soldiers of

WAYNE'S WAR,
WAR OF 1812,
BLACK HAWK WAR,
PATRIOT WAR,
FLORIDA WAR,
AROOSTOOK WAR,
MEXICAN WAR.

ALSO, the Revolutionary Soldiers or their Widows. In cases where 160 acres have been received under former Acts of Congress, no more can be drawn; but those who have been allowed a Warrant for 40 or 80 acres are now entitled to a Warrant for enough more to make up 160 acres.

P. S. We have faithful and experienced Agents in Washington, and we make no charge in any case unless we obtain the land.

☞The second, third or fourth marriage of a widow, does not impair her claim under this act, if she is a widow at the time of her application.

Persons under the age of 21 years on the 3d of March, 1855, are regarded minors by this act.

Those having claims, will have them promptly attended to by calling on or writing (post paid), to BILLS & BAXTER, Tecumseh.

Religion—What is It?

'Tis not to go to church to day,
To look devout and seem to pray,
And ere to-morrow's sun goes down,
Be dealing scandal through the town.

Not every sanctimonious face
Denotes the certain reign of grace;
A plain that seems to scowl at sin,
Oft veils hypocrisy within.

'Tis not to mark our duty's walk,
Or of our own good deeds to talk,
And then to practice secret crime,
And so misspend and waste our time.

'Tis not for sects and creeds to fight,
And call our zeal the rule of right,
When all we wish is at the best
To see our church excel the rest,

'Tis not to wear the Christian's dress,
And love to all mankind profess;
Then treat with scorn the suffering poor,
And fast against them close the door.

Ah, no! Religion means not this,
Its fruit far sweeter, fairer is:
In heavenly soil alone it thrives,
And more than blossoms where it lives.

Religion! 'tis the rule of life,
The bond of love, the bane of strife,
Its precept this, 'to others do,
As you would have them do to you.'

It grieves to hear an ill report,
And soon with human woe to sport;
Of other's deeds to speak no ill,
But tell of good, or else be still.

From the New York Express,

Appearances are Deceitful.

In one of the narowest and dirtiest streets of Paris on the ground floor of a crumbling old house, is the shop of Monsieur Thomas, a rag-merchant. In the back part of this shop is a sort of glass office, in which an exceedingly pretty girl not long since transacted the business of the establishment. The young girl was Mademoiselle Julie, old Thomas' daughter.

Not a great while ago, an elegat looking young gentleman, chancing to pass through this dirty street observed the pretty bird in this glass cage, and involuntarily halted to admire her. The next day he came again: it was not chance which brought him this time; for after pausing in the street as before, he entered the shop, under pretence of asking his way, but in reality to approach nearer the object of his sudden admiration. A very few words sufficed to confirm and fasten first impressions, and he was about to go away, in a very disconsolate frame of mind, when amongst the old junk which the shop contained, he observed a pile of second-hand books. Seizing upon this excuse to prolong his stay, the young man turned over the tattered refuse, and purchased several of the books, promising to the fair saleswoman that he would from time to time replenish his "library" at her establishment. He must have been very studious that day, for early next morning, he returned and obtained another supply. So, too, the next and the next—until, at last, troubling himself no longer about the old books, he came and passed much of his time in soft conversation at the window of the glass cage, and finally wound up by asking M. Thomas to give him his daughter in marriage. As the old man, without being seen had witnessed all that had transpired, and liked the youth's appearance, he at once granted his prayer, on condition that the demand should be made officially, by the gallant's father. Here was the difficulty. The father of the lover M. Georges, was a dry-goods merchant, having a handsome store in one of the most brilliant quarters of the city, and looked for something better for his son than a rag merchant's daughter. However, as there was nothing else for it, the young man broached the subject to his parents. At first he was laughed at; but, as he frequently returned to the charge, the father and mother, in hope of diverting him by other means from his mad project, finally invited Thomas and his daughter to a public dinner, in order to talk the matter over. It was hoped that the ridiculous figure that the old man would cut, and his inability to give his daughter a respectable marriage portion, would put an end to the affair. The invitation was accepted and the parties came. At the desert the merchant endeavored to jest with old Thomas and turn him to ridicule. That didn't seem to work particularly well, and nothing remained but to try the financial question. This was Madame Georges' part, and she commenced by asking Thomas what amount he intended to give his daughter, on the day of her marriage.

"Oh, pray, mother," cried young Georges, who saw the trap, "don't talk about that. Another time"——

"Not at all, young man," interposed M. Thomas. "Let us talk of it at once, since your mother wishes it. A little ready money does a newly married pair no harm, ecatainly. If Madame will state how much it is proposed to give her son, I will try to furnish a like sum."

"We intend," observed Madame Georges, with a superb air, "to give our son fifty thousand francs, sir!"

"Well, well," said old Thomas, with a shrug "I must say I expected better than that for my little girl's husband; but as the young people like each other, I will throw no obstacle in their way.—Julie is my only child, and, on the day of her marriage, I shall give her four hundred thousand francs, money down!"

It may be readily imagined that the Georges "changed their gate" in a hurry about this time. But now came another difficulty. Expecting to frighten old Thomas off, Madame Georges had rather stretched the truth, in naming fifty thousand franks as her son's wedding present, and both she and her husband were anxious to see her son so richly married.—Sacrifices were made and loans negotiated, in order to get together the sum mentioned. Things went on this way for some time, and the day of the ceremony had been several times postponed, when, one morning, the merchant received a package containing fifty bank notes for a thousand francs each, and these few words:

"I see where the shoe pinches, and, for a trifle, I wont have things drag on any longer. I send you the needful.—Another time, be more candid with your friends, and don't put on any more airs with poor people. On the 15th of next month, the wedding"

You remember one of Shakspear's most celebrated apothegms—"All's not gold that glitters"—might it not be well also add—and the pure gold does not shine at all?

SHOCKING CALAMITY.—A most distressing occurrence transpired in this city, Sunday morning, between one and two o'clock, which resulted in the death of an amiable young woman named Laura Green, who lived in the capacity of a servant with the family of Thomas M. Howe, the news dealer, residing on Washington street. Mr. How was awakened by loud screams proceeding from the room directly over their own, where Miss Green lodged. Being greatly alarmed, and fearing that some one had entered the house, Mr. Howe called up one of his near neighbors before proceeding to the chamber, with which the girl's bed-room communicated, the smoke rushed out, and it was seen that the house was on fire.—The alarm was immediately given, and the fire soon subdued, when a most shocking spectacle presented itself. The lifeless, charred form of the unfortunate girl lay upon the foot of her bed, with her feet hanging over the rail. She was too much disfigured to be recognized, and her clothing was nearly burnt off. It was evident, however, that she had her usual clothes on, and not her night dress, and had either fallen alseep and left the lamp so that it set fire to her clothes or the bedding, or she had arisen and dressed herself, and accidently set fire to her clothing.—Auburn (N. Y.) Advertiser.

NEARLY BURIED ALIVE.—A letter from Cloves, Hamilton county, Ohio, says: Wat. Eckman, a wealthy citizen of this place, was taken violently ill on the morning of the 15th, and, by having the prompt and kind services of two erudite Esculpiuses, received his 'quietus' about five o'clock the same day. Next morning the defunct Eckman was kindly stowed away in his coffin, and jolted in a market wagon to the Berea church, a distance of two miles where a funeral sermon was preached by the Rev. Wm Lee. The solemn thing was about concluded, the last hymn was read, and the choir was about to 'strike up,' when they were suddenly annoyed by discordant and very unmusical sounds and kicks, which it seemed obvious were going on in the coffin. You may possibly imagine there was some consternation in that meeting house about that time—well there was nothing else for a few minutes. At least half the congregation broke for the door, and the balance were about to 'follow suit,' when the Rev Mr. Lee descended from the pulpit, and in a loud voice ordered the coffin to be speedily opened, which was done, when it was found that Wat. was not only alive and kicking but, was struggling to free himself from his—to him—mysterious confinement. The blood was flowing freely from his mouth and nose, but in a very few minutes he was able to speak. He was carried to the house of Abram Patterson, Esq., about two hundred yards from the church, and a physician sent for, who remained with him till the next morning, when he was able to walk about the room.—Philadelphia Bulletine, 8th.

A Well Governed State.

Where spades grow bright, and idle words grow dull,
Where jails are empty, and where barns are full;
Where church paths are with frequent feet worn out,
Law court-yard weedy, silent, and forlorn,
Where doctors foot it, and where farmers ride,
Where age abounds and youth is multiplied;
Where these signs are, they clearly indicate
A happy people and well governed State.

A Panther Fisticuffed and Booted to Death.

Mr. W. R. Stockend, a sinewy, stout, active young Scotchman, associated in farming with Mr. Linklater, Tanalquot Plains, in this county, recently killed quite a large panther, six feet seven inches in length, in a fair fist and boot fight—the circumstances of which are related as follows:

It seems that at the further end of a large field, about a quarter of a mile from the house, Mr. Stockend discovered quite a movement and disturbance among a lot of hogs that were kept in the field. He at once proceeded in the direction to ascertain the cause, when to his surprise, at a short distance from the hogs, he discovered that a favorite dog was engaged in a conflict with a panther. Determined to save the dog at all hazards, he resolved to interpose in the fight, expecting to frighten the panther up a tree that stood hard by, when he could return to the house for his rifle and bring it down. He accordingly gave the animal a substantial kick, when it ceased its engagement with the dog, straitening itself on its hind legs, and pitched into him. In the meantime the young dog made a hasty retreat for some distance.

The contest now seemed to be a desperate and very unequal one, but there was no escape from it for our friend Stockend. The panther made a furious dash at him, but retaining his full presence of mind, he met it with a furious kick. The fight now assumed the character of a 'rough and tumble,' and a volley of well directed blows and kicks somewhat disabled the animal. He called his dog back, and the faithful young animal, as if ashamed of having deserted its master in the hour of peril, and as if to make amends for its ungrateful conduct, entered into the conflict with unequaled fierceness. Mr. Stockend finally succeeded in getting one foot firmly planted upon the assailant, and keeping the other in rapid motion in the direction of the animal's head, soon brought the contest to a close. He has no doubt but that the long heavy boots he had on were the means of saving his life.

The fight lasted, first to last, about fifteen minutes, in the course of which Mr. Stockend was somewhat severely handled. His shoulder was badly scratched—he received a severe wound from the teeth of the animal in the thigh, and was badly scratced in several places, although by no means dangerously, or by which he will hereafter be disabled. Can any of our contemporaries beat the panther fight of our friend Stockend?—Olympia (W. T.) Pioneer.

A California Crusoe.

Narative of a Woman who lived 18 Years Alone on San Nicholas Island.

Captain C. J. W. Russell has contributed to Hutchings' Magazine, an interesting narrative of a woman who lived eighteen years alone upon the Island of San Nicolas, one of the Santa Barbara group, off the lower coast of California, and situated about 33° 15′ north latitude. While stationed in that quarter, making tidal observations for the United States Goverment, Captain Russell received from one George Nedevir, an old California resident, the following remarkable history:

Twenty years ago, the whole of the Indian tribes inhabiting the Santa Barbara group of islands were engaged in a fierce and exterminating war with each other, and to such an extent was this deadly hostility waged, that already the population had very much diminished, and would, in all probability, before many years, become entirely extinct. To prevent this, and at the same time to ameliorate the condition of the Indians, the Fathers of the Mission of Santa Barbara conceived the idea of removing them to the mainland, where they might be watched over, improved and preserved, under their immediate superintendence. For this purpose they visited the islands, in company with a few partially civilized Indians, and explained to them the advantages of removing to the Mission.—They listened attentively to the poposal, and finally consented to go, on promises of natural protection from thier natural enemies.

Accordingly, a small vessel was sent to the different islands, and the various tribes were taken one by one to the Mission of Santa Barbara. But while the last of the Indians were embarking, at the island of San Nicolas, and all were supposed to be on board, a child was missing, and its mother, in great distress, was seeking everywhere, without success. Each portion of the vessel was diligently searched; all the adjacent rocks were examined—but no child was found. Almost frantic, the mother requested the captain to wait while she went into the interior to search for her child, to which he reluctantly consented.

As night closed down in darkness, heavy masses of clouds rolled up from the horizon and gave threatening evidence of a coming storm. All were anxious for the return of the woman and her child before it broke upon them, but still they came not. The wind began to blow harder and stronger; the storm was rapidly increasing; and as the groups of Indians on board strained their eyes trying to discover in the darkness some object that resembled the returning woman and her child, yet saw them not, there were many sad hearts and anxious countenances that night, on their account. The storm at last came on in all its fury, tossing the little vessel up and down like a feather, and compelled them at last, though reluctantly, to put sea for safety, before any tidings of the absent one could be received. Although the cargo of living freight reached Santa Barbara in safety, before the vessel could return for the woman it was wrecked and entirely lost; and as no other could be obtained at that time, the poor woman had to remain on the island, where she lived alone for eighteen years; no doubt forgotten, or given up as long since dead.

After the discovery of gold in California, it was rumored that San Nicolas was inhabited, that several hunters had seen the prints of human footsteps, and they endeavored to discover the whereabouts of the individual, but could not. As all the footsteps were alike, they concluded that there could be only one person living upon it. Many attempts were made to find out and who where this stange being was, but without avail, until one of California's oldest pioneers, Mr. Nedevir—the one who related the story—went over to look for her. He having spent many years as a hunter and trapper in the Rocky Mountains, was expert as an Indian in following the trail, and consequently found but little difficulty in discovering the track, which he follow d until he saw a singular object among the rocks upon the sea shore, near the mouth of a ravine, upon its knees, skinning a seal. Upon approaching he found it to be a woman, clad in a singular dress of feathers. When she saw him, she jumped up and with excessive joy ran toward him, and seemed almost beside herself with wild delight at the sight, once more, of a human being. In her hand she held a rude knife-blade, that she had made from a piece of old iron, probably obtained from the fragment of some wreck, and which she evidently valued beyond anything else in her possession. She was unable to make herself understood, except by signs; in making which she showed a great amount of intelligence, and signified her willingness to accompany him to Santa Barbara. Her Father Gonzales, of the Mission, took the greatest pains to discover some of the Indians who had been taken from those islands eighteen years before, but not one of them could be found, and what became of them is a mystery unto this day. Not one of the Indians within a circumference of many miles could understand her; she could only communicate by signs.

It appears from her narrative, that after leaving the vessel in search of her child, she wandered about for several hours, and when she found it, the wild dogs which infest the island, even to the present day, had killed and nearly devoured it. We can better imagine the feelings of a mother at such a time, than describe them. When she returned to the spot where she had left the vessel, to tell her sorrows for the loss of her child, that too was gone, and was bearing away her kindred and friends from her sight. Could she have realized, then, that for eighteen years she must live alone in the world, without one kind word of comfort, one cheering look from a friendly eye, or one smile of recognition, it would have been too much for even her wild but womanly nature to bear, and with her, as with us, it is well that we know not the future. From day to day she lived in hope, beguiling the weary hours in providing for her wants. With snares made of her hair she caught birds, and with skins properly prepared, she made her clothing. Her needles were neatly made of boue and cactus thorns; her thread was of sinews, from the seal. In these and many other articles found in her possession, she exhibited much of the native ingenuity she possessed.

Whether she still remembered her own language or not, will forever remain a mystery. She was very gentle and kind, especially to children, and nothing seemed so please her so much as to be near them; and the poor woman would often shed tears while attempting to describe, by signs, her own little one which had been killed and eaten by the wild dogs. The sympathy felt for her welfare caused the people to supply her bountifully with every thing she chose, and the result was, that in about six months after her escape from her lonely exile, she sickened and died, having undoubtedly been killed with kindness.

Slander and Suicide.

A corespondent writing from Newport, Me., under date of May 20, furnishes the following sad particulars of the sad death of a young lady:

"Miss Mary Martin, a pretty and intelligent young lady of about twenty years of age, committed suicide by drowing herself in the stream at Det., the town adjoining this. She invited a young lady friend to walk with her, and seating herself upon a log near the stream, she told her she was going to drown herself, and the reason for so doing. She took off all her jewelry, and gave it to the young lady, saying, 'I want you to have those.' In a few moments after her friend persuaded her to return to the house, telling her that they would come down in the afternoon.

They had proceeded only about five or six rods, when Miss Martin caught hold of her friend and dragged her towards the stream a rod or two, but suddenly releasing her hold she ran jumped in. Her friend gave the alarm and a brother of Miss Martin came to her relief, but too late—life was extinct when body was taken out. The cause for this melancholy suicide was slander. During the past winter stories have been circulated to injure her chararter. She protestested her innocence, but a few weeks before while walking with the young man to whom she was engaged, she said (referring to her troubles.) 'If I thought there were no happier days in store for me I would jump in and drown myself.' Miss Martin was a very pretty, modest and highly respectable young lady, and her untimely death is deeply regretted. I hope it will serve as a warning to those who are ever ready to circulate evil reports."—From the Boston Traveler of Friday.

Je Suis Content Mourir.

Ask me not to tell thee why
I am thus content to die!
Oh, each sad and bitter token
Telling that the heart is broken,
Wasted cheek, and faded eye,
Silent tear, and stifled sigh,
While thy whispering lips confess
Of a name they dare not speak,
Pale hands wrung so pale because
In the heart's deep agony,
These have taught the heart to brave,
The still quiet of the grave.

'Tis enough,—the life is cast,
'Twas a dream,—the dream is past—
All this poor heart fondly cherished
Hath in one brief moment perished;
Hope and pleasure, youth and bloom,
Let them find one common tomb—
Who would struggle vainly on
When the life of life is gone?
Who would ask for added years
Spent in sorrows, sighs and tears?
Rather let the spirit dare
Shun the grief there's none to share,
Seeking in a watery shroud
Refuge from the heartless crowd.

Sun that in the gorgeous west
Sinkest to thy place of rest,
Gentle stars, whose silver rays
Greet us from eternal space,
Pensive Moon, o'er night's lone sky
Wandering sad and silently,
Mountain, forest, stream and dell,
I must bid you all, farewell,—
I will lay me down to rest
On the water's peaceful breast,
And within its silent wave
Find at last a quiet grave;
Fragrant lilies o'er my head
Shall their sweetest odor shed,
And the hoarse wave's broken surge
Chant alone my funeral dirge. R——N.

Murder at Brunswick.

Mr. J. Wood, proprietor of the Ogelthorpe House, at Brunswick, was murdered deliberately by Charles Moore, Marshal of that place on Saturday night last.—The circumstances are briefly as follows: Moore whipped a negro belonging to Mr Wood the afternoon of that day, whereupon a slight altercation took place, the latter considering the boy undeserving the punishment. The matter passed of and was thought nothing of, on Wood's part. About nine o'clock that night Wood, in company with several gentlemen, was sitting in the front room of the hotel, when Moore entered and remarked, "Wood we had a quarrel this evening, when I was unarmed, I am now prepared for you" Wood immediately arose from the table and remarked: "Charlie, we did have a slight difference, but I have thought nothing of it since, and regard the matter as forgotten." As soon as these words were spoken, Moore drew a pistol and deliberately shot Wood through the heart. The latter started from the room and reached the passage, when he fell down and expired immediately.

The Mayor was soon on the spot, and offered a reward of $1,000 for the arrest of the murderer, but up to the last accounts he had not been taken.

We have learned these facts from a gentleman who was in the house when the dreadful affair occurred.

Mr Wood was an excellent and most amiable man and leaves a wife with several small children.

ARREST OF CHARLES MOORE

Mr. C B, Wright, the Sheriff of Glynn county arrived in this city yesterday morning, in charge of Charles Moore who murdered J. R. Wood the keeper of the Ogelthorpe House in Brunswick, on Saturday night last. The following are the particulars of the arrest as near as we could ascertain them:

A passenger on the St John, which left Brunswick on Saturday night, took with him several of the handbills offering the reward for Moore's arrest, got of at St. Marys; and from thence along the line of his route through the interior he posted them. Arriving at Contriville, Camden Co., on Sunday it was ascertained that Moore was stopping there through indisposition, on his way to Florida. Gen Hilliard, with several others, immediately proceeded to take the prisoner. He was found at his boarding house, and made no resitance. He was taken to St. Mary's where the party met the steamer St. Mary's on her return from Florida.

The prisoner was immediately, on reaching the city delivered over to the jail-jailor, and is now in close confinement in Chatam jail.

The reward of $1000 was paid by the Mayor of Brunswick to arresting parties within an hour after Moore was placed in the hands of the Sheriff of Glynn couty.

AT ONE FELL SWOOP.—The Supreme court at Kalamazoo, we are informed decided that it is necessary for the county Treasurer, in making sale of lands by the State, to name the specific hour and place of sale. In other words, Judge Green's decision made at the Genesee circuit, is sustained. Under this decision, titles from the State for lands sold as delinquent for taxes, will be worth as much as a last years hornet's nest.—Advertiser.

Philosophy and Fact.

The world is quite sufficiently given to theorizing, and its theory is generally pretty nearly correct. But, while this is so, we are oftentimes quite at a loss to understand how it is that in practice, or in other words, in fact, it so commonly falls so far short of its theories.

There are a large class of reformers to whom while you listen, you are compelled to yield a general assent, who are admitted to hold to the abstract right, who nevertheless have very few nominal, and almost no practical followers.

We are very fond of eulogizing human nature, human intellect, instincts, motives and character, but after all it is in most cases a very common every-day sort of a thing.

Most men, and indeed we may say the world at large as it is, is for the most part governed by real or supposed interest, rather than any lofty theory of abstract right. There is poetry in human nature, it is true, but after all there is more arithmetic than poetry. Ungenerous and ignoble as may seem the declaration, the undisguised and unembellished fact is, that selfishness and appetite govern the world.

Men upon the spur of the moment, or under the impulse of strong protracted feeling, are ready enough to make sacrifices for theoretic right, but let it be once satisfactorily established that the support of this right is to result in no ultimate personal or individual gain, and its supporters will soon dwindle down to insignificance.

These are unpalatable truths, but is nevertheless highly important that in all our efforts to influence or control the public mind in any direction of popular progress or reform, they should be thoroughly understood and appreciated. A very small amount of selfish interest acting constantly, like the unseen forces of gravitation upon the individual mind, will go very much farther towards giving direction to its ultimate course, than any amount of theoretic impulse, acting only from time to time, under the influence of its immediate presentation.

We seem to forget this in our efforts to identify the masses with some abstract theory of right and good, and forgetting it, are oftentimes disappointed in the result. Enthusiastic reformers are too apt to set out with too high an estimate of the magnanimity and perfectibility of human nature, and therefore, to end by becoming infidel to both.

They begin by looking for an exemption from all the dross and selfishness of human character, expecting to find in every man an unflinching martyr to the right, who will not be restrained from offering himself as as a holocaust upon the altar of theoretic truth, and end by denouncing human government, human institutions, and human character, Court, and Church, and State, because forsooth they have formed an untrue and impracticable theory of human nature, and find at the last that the world does not; and will not come up to it.

Poetry and theory are all very well in their place, and may be well used to interest and instruct but when we come down to the plain common sense of the thing one column of simple figures, which a child might compute, will go much farther towards bringing about results, than the most beautiful theory of the most metaphysical mind, or the proudest flight of the loftiest imagination.

WASHINGTON, May

United States Consul Jenkins, has been discharged.

The news by telegraph, that New Grenada had ceded the Islands in the Bay of Panama to the British, is not credited in official quarters, nor is such a result apprehended.

Surgeon Caldwell, attached to the U. S. Ship Independence, under date of Panama Bay, May 8th, has unofficially advised the navy department that he had been informed, that there exists a practical route for a ship cannal, from the Gulf of San Miguel Rio Savana to Fuerto Del Principe, a few miles above which, the tide ebbs, thence, about North by East over low ground to the Atlantic ocean, to Caledonia Bay, or a little north of it. That the whole country is low, well wooded and watered and abounding in game, and that a small party can cross from Savana to the Atlantic ocean and return, making a path or road as they go in less than ten days, without fear of Indians or disease.

Surgeon Caldwell having obtained leave of Comodore Merrine hastily explored the route, and reports the summit level of the route from Fuerti-Del-principe northerly to the Atlantic within 8 miles of Savana, and would not prove insuperable to engineering skill in the construction of a ship canal.

Gen Walker has telegraphed he will be in Washington as soon as posible.

ST LOUIS, June 1.

Kansas letters to the Republican say that the Convention at Lecompton on the 25th, resulted in the nomination of Calhoun, Jones and Bolling to represent Douglass Co., in the Constitutional Convention. Resolutions were referred by Col. Bruerton and offered by a pro-slavery man taking strong democratic grounds.—Adopted. Governor Walker, Senator Wilson, Gov. Robinson, and others spoke at Lawrence Tuesday. Walker's remarks were read with applause. Walker reached Lecompton Wednesday and read his inagural, which reviews the action of the Free-State men and declares that the territorial l s shall be enforced and the position already taken be maintained by the whole power of the Government—The Governor pledges himself to use every endeavor to have the Constitution submitted to the people for ratification.

LECOMPTON, May 28.

Governor Walker arrived here yesterday, he was received very quietly, his inagural is a lengthy document. It declares that the territorial laws shall be enforced and criticizes the action of the Free-State men. Gov. Walker passed through Lawrence on his way here, and assured the people that everything would be fair.

The U. S. Consul to the Navigator Islands.

Johnathan S. Jenkins, U. S. Consul to the Navigator Islands, was arrested yesterday at 3 P. M at the instance of the D. S. under a warrant issued by Justice Goddard on a charge sworn to by A. VanCamp against him of piracy, for seizing and selling a large amount of property belonging to citizens of the U. S. Mr Jenkins was committed to jail to await the requisition of the Gov. of the State of New York, where the case must be tried, being the first place he touched at on his arrival on American soil.

Subjoined is a synopsis of Dr. Van Camps case:

Aaron VanCamp was (being a resident at the time in California) appointed by President Pierce to the consulate of the Somoan and Friendly Islands in the Pacific Ocean, in the month of October 1853 and proceeded to his consulate immediately. Having in April, 1856, a large amount of property belonging to friends in Nantucket, saved from the condemned ship Rambler, in Apia, and which was left with him by her captain to dispose of or ship to the United States, for the benefit of whom it may concern, he chartered a schooner called the Eudorus, for $4000 to convey it to Valparaiso, together with other property belonging to himself and V. P Chapin, his partner. This being done, and the cargo on borad, bills of lading and charter party signed, (copies of which are in the State Department) he left on the U S. frigate Independence, (May 1856, at the solicitation and suggestion of Com Mervine, to protect the property on its arrival at its destination, leaving his residence, furniture, private porperty of his lady's, his store, with goods, books, &c., &c., in charge of his partner, V. P. Chapin, with the determination of returning to Apia as soon as his mission was completed."

The Eudorus was ordered to follow him within four or five days.

"After waiting at Valparaiso for over six weeks, and fearing for the safety of the Eudorus and cargo, he was surpised with the information that a new consul had succeeded him at Apia, and who arrived three days subsequent to his departing on the Independence, and on the very hour the Eudorus was weighing anchor to proceed on her charter party."

"The new Consul, J. S. Jenkins, immediately on his arrival sent a person with an armed force whom he had brought with him from San Francisco, to take possession of the schooner and her lading.—He next proceed to organize an Admiralty Court, and styling himself Jude in Admiralty and Vice Commissioner, appointed other Judges, Clerks, Marshals, and soforth; issued process in and under the President of the United States to the aforesaid pseudo officers; confisicated the property on board the Edorus, as well as that, both real and personal found ashore belonging both to his predecessors and V. P. Chapin. Among these were a pair of noble bald eagles which belonged to a person named Cushing, in Massachusetts, supposed to be the late U S. Attorney Gen., and which had been sent from the U. S. Consul at Lahaina, to be forwarded to their owner; but the Rambler being not further seaworthy, they were taken in charge by the Consul Van Camp.

After the mock trial was confiscations made the wholeof the aforesaid were disposed of at public auction at great sacrifices; the low scoundrels who infest the beech of Apia, (Sydney escapes and others,) becoming the purchasers, with those who formed the aforenamed court. It will be here proper to remark that with a few exceptions, they were all Englishmen and who had assisted in concocting this affair in San Francisco. Mr. Van Camp the consul, had never been apprised of the intention of the President to remove him.

These contracts being concluded, Consul Jenkins, fearing that Van Camp was as rumored reappointed, and would soon be at Apia to call him to account, left; after appointing one Robert L. Swanston an Englishman or rather a Van Diemens Land man, as his vice consul, who appeared yesterday in this city when the aforesaid arrest was made. This Robert L. Swanston, we are informed, is the identical personage who figured as the clerk of the court, as well as counsel for certain claimants who, taking advantage of Van Camp's absence, instituted action in the Admiralty Court of Consul Jenkins.

To secure the cargo on board Eudorus the captain it is said was paid $4,000 by Jenkins the price agreed on for the charter party with Van Camp. His name is H Seaman. The property thus sacrificed belonging to the Nantucket persons, amounted to about $70,000, while that of V. P. Chapin & Co. and A. Van Camp was over $100,000. All this was done without authority from Government.—Somebody will have to foot the bill.

DIED

At his residence, near Tecumseh, May the 28th, SAMUEL LEWIS, of quick consumption, in the 83d year of his age.

Brother Lewis has resided in Tecumseh about three years, and was a faithful member of the M. E. Church. He exemplified in life the principles of Christ, and his grace supported him in death, for he died as the good man dieth: "Quite on the verge of Heaven." He has left a wife, one child, and a large circle of friends to mourn their loss; yet its living and dying testimony makes us expect to see him where suffering and parting never come. WM. FOX.

Tecumseh, May 5th 1857, n338w6.

There is an article selling throughout the country that has attained the widest celebrity ever known as a remedy for Liver Complaints. We have reference to Dr. Sanford's Invigorator, or Liver Remedy, that has performed cures almost too great to believe, were it not for the undoubted evidence that accompany the testimonials. It is, in truth, the greatest remedy known for Dyspepsia, Jaundice, or a general debility that so often baffles the skill of our most eminent physicians. Dr. Sanford has been for a long time one of the most eminent physicians of New York, and it is said; most of his cases were treated with the Invigorater with such invariable success that he has been induced to offer it as a family medicine, and let the world have the benefit of his discovery. If those who are troubled will try a bottle, we think they might save physician's bills, and days perhaps years of suffering.

Holloways Ointment and Pills.—Ulcerated Legs.—Every surgeon knows that sores deeply seated in the muscular fibre of the leg, defy all ordinary treatment; but ulcers of this class, however obstinate and virulent, invariable heal under the balsamic action of Holloway's Ointment. This preparation does not drive the virus of the sore from one part of the system to another; it cures not by repression, but expulsion. Hence, there is no fear of the re appearance of any eruption, tumor swelling or sore, that has once yielded to the healing proprieties of this curative. In cases of cancer its timely use has saved innumerable lives, and rendered the cruel process of excision unnecessary. Of the Pills it may be truly said that no disease of the stomach or liver ever resisted their operation.

HANEMANN RECONVERTED TO COMMON SENSE. At a meeting of "spiritualists," an invalid was brought forward dreadfully afflicted with ulcerous scrofula, that all the doctor had failed to cure. It was proposed to appeal to the spirit land for advice, and a Homeopathic physician present interrogated the departed spirit of Hanemann as to what remedy should be taken. Loud and distinct raps, audible to the whole audience, told off Ayer's Cathartic Pills. Homer N. Y. Whig.

☞ The hard case of a young widow with $20,009, compelled to give up her property if she ever married again, has been going the rounds of the papers. To offset it the Sandy Hill Herald relates how a gentleman residing in the town of Granville Washingtrn county, died recently and willed his wife a handsome sum—stipulating in his will, that in case she married again the sum was to be doubled! And,' pathetically adds the Herald, 'may the grass ever be green upon his grave!'

☞ Hiram Stone, of Cleveland, is getting up a monster musical gift entertainment in that city to come off July 2d—Wadsworth's entire corps of over a hundred musicians, has been engaged and efforts are being made to secure to ticket holders in his enteprise, half fare on the railroads.

☞ A tipsy customer who was seated on the box with the sage driver, swayed backwards until he tumbled off. 'The ground was deep and he felt soft. "There," he exclaimed, 'I knew you would upset if you didn' take care!' When told he had not upset, he said, with amazement. 'Not upset if I had known that I would not have got off.'

☞ AID TO THE NORTHERN COUNTIES. We believe the people would sustain Gov Bingham in lending to the Supervisors of the Northern Counties a part of the Kansas fund. The money could be replaced when the county orders were paid or the Legislature thought best, it could be given them. $3500, or 4000, appropriated in this way would save a great many families from starvation.

Lenawee County Farmer.

Tecumseh, Michigan, June, 1857.

The Wastes of the Farm

So much is said now in the agricultural journals about the wasting of manures, that its having a perceptable influence upon the practice of farmers in all parts of the country.—Barn cellars for the preservation of manure are now the order of the day No farmer who takes the papers, or observes what is going on around him thinks of buildding a new barn without setting upon a side hill, or in some place where he can have a manure cellar underneath. The worth of muck and absorbents is begining to be understood.

But there are other wastes, quite as valuable, that are still overlooked. If a farmer looses a sheep, or a cow, or hog, or horse, from disease, the dead bodies are very likely drawn off into a swamp, or distant pasture, and there left as food for the crows. This is a great waste of a much more valuable fertalizer than stable manure. A dead horse or cow is worth at least $5 for the compost heap, and with lab r and muck, to save its gasses, it will be worth twice as much before it reaches the field. The amount of muck a dead horse will charge with ammonical gas, and their fertilizers, is truly astonishing. DANA thinks twenty loads of good manure may be made from one animal. He is not wide of the mark if the heap be properly treate l.

The dead animal need not be carried to a distance. With six or eight cords of muck the work of decomposition may go on in your own garden without disturbing any one's olfactories. All animal and vegetable matter should be carefully saved for the com post heap. Labor spent in saving these wastes will be richly rewarded.

Work for Rainy Days.

The mechanic has no trouble on this score, if his work be under cover, but it is a serious question with the farmer. With all his contrivances, there are oft en many days lost. With a good barn cellar, and plenty of muck there al most always something profitable to be done in forking over. With the sheds for vehicles, there is always a paying job in greasing the wheels. This not only saves the wear of the axletrees, and boxes, but it adds a good deal to the power of the team. They can carry a much heavier load, and do it easier, with well oiled wheel. Yet many farmers forget the grease pot, and go half the time, at least, with squeaking axletrees. Such a noise is disagreeable to good husbandry.

The breaking up of old bones for manure is another rainyday job that will pay. The poorest of all jobs is that very common rsort of fishing.—The idea is homeopathic, only the doses are apt to be rather large. A thorough drenching, an empty stomach and a few fish to put in it, are the usual results of a rainydays fishing.

The manager of the farm can hardly spend his time better, at this season, than in reading up his agricultural works, and in laying his plans for the future. No work pays so well on a farm as head work. There is far too little of it done.

The Michigan Plow.

Of all implements we have ever tri. ed for preparing a green sward for corn this is the best. It is a double plow, that can be graded to cut the two furrows, of any desired depth from 3 to 20 inches. The first plow attached to the beam, turns over the sod merely, and the other follows, bringing up the remainder of the surface soil, and a portion of the subsoil, and completely buries the sod making the newly plowed field almost as mellow as an old stubble. The sod thus buried rots, and imparts its nutriment to the corn the first season. The tillage of the field very much facilated by this deep plowing and disinterigation of the soil. This sod and subsoil plow is one of the best implements which science has given to husbandry in modern times.

Home on the Farm.

The farm preserves the family in its integrity. The home has in it that charming word, and that more charming thing the fireside; around which parents and children gather, and where the bright and cheerful blaze upon the hearth is but a true type of the flame of love that glows in every heart. The parents have been drawn together not by the sordid motives of wealth, or by the ambitous desire of social display, but for the personal qualities seen in each other. The glory of the husband is that the wife is there, and to the wife that he is there, who is the head of woman, and the band in that home circle. Here they gather at morning and evening, and at noon. Their board is almost al ways surrounded by the same cirle. Here they spend the long winter evenings together, enlivened with the school books of the children, the newspapers and journals and works of science. A constant homogeneous influenece goes forth from this circle to the young hearts that are molding there. Parental viligence guards the young against wicked com panions. If the religious influences are right at home, they will all grow up to be good citizens to be the pillars of society wherever their lot may be cast. The sons follow the business of their father as soon as their labors are available. They are with him in the field, and by the way, and at home — They form industrious habits, and are prepared for the responsibilities of life.—Am. Jour. of Education.

Grafting Wax.

We made some remarks last week in relation to cutting and preserving young scoins. We will give this week a receipt for making the best kind of grafting cement. Take three parts of the best quality of rosin; two parts of beeswax, and one part of tallow; mel. them thoroughly together, and pour the composition while hot into cold water, and then work it like shoe makers wax, till it will spread like thin paper or draw like a gossamer.—Should the rosin precipitate when cooling in the water and remain in the wax in small lumps, it it must be melted over and worked again. In such case care must be taken that no water will remain in the vessel that the composition is melted in, as water will remain at bottom and when the wax becomes heated to acertain extent the operator will witness a rather unpleasant experiment of the expansive power of steam.

In rather cold weather, a little more tallow than in the above proportion may be added, and the cement will work very well, and in very warm weather a little more rosin will harden the wax, without material injury to its good properties. But for all seasons of the year, and all kinds of weather, we have never found any kind of grafting wax work so well as wax made according to the above proportions. In cold weather we keep our wax in warm water in order to have it well,—and in very warm weather it is necessary to keep in cold water. Care should be taken to keep pure beeswax for making cement.—Much of the beeswax that is purchased in the market is adulterated with tallow; such may be selected, by placing it in a temperature that will melt the tallow and not the wax.—Keene N. H. News.

STUCCO WHITEWASH.— To make a brilliant stucco whitewash for all buildings inside and out, take clean lumps of well burnt lime, slacked; add one pound of whiting, or burnt alum pulverized, one pound of loaf sugar three quarts of rye flour, made into a thin and well boiled paste, and one pound of the cleanest glue dissolved as cabinet makers do. This may be put on cold within doors but hot outside. It will be as brilliant as plaster Paris, and retain the brightness for many years. The east end of the President's house is washed with it.

Patent Medicines.

A Medicine that Never Debilitates

DR. SANFORD'S

INVIGORATOR.

OLIVER REMEDY.

HAS ALL THE GOOD QUALITIES OF A Purging medicine, answering the purposes of any Cathartic without the debilitating effects expected from them. It purges, it acts slowly and gently, but surely, moving by bowels to carry off all the accretid matter, at the same time eliminating the Liver to a proper performance of its functions

The Invigorator cures the Sick Headache Take one or two teaspoonful at each attack and it will soon disappear. For an overloaded stomache, or when food rises or sours, take the Invigorator after eating, and it will not prove disagreeable or oppressive For Heartburn, Palpitation, or difficult breathing take a teaspoonful once or twice daily. For Loss of Appetite, Langu or Listlessness, the medicine is invaluable It will restore the appetite and make the food digest well.—Nightmare take a teaspoonful on retiring, and the demons of dream-land will all be fairies After eating a heavy dinner, take a dose of Invigorator and it will relieve all oppression or fullness. The Invigorator is a Liver Remedy of unequalled virtue, acting directly on that organ, curing Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Bilious Attacks, Dysentery, Piles Worms, and all Female Obstructions, for which it has no equal.

"We know there is nothing new before the American public, prepared with such skill by a scientific man, particularly for diseases of the Liver, as Dr. Sanford's Invigorator, or Liver Remedy It has attained a reputation second to no other article in the world, simply because it vests on its own merit. To convince all by trial that it is all its proprietors claim it to be, if any of our readers are suffering from such diseases as are described in Dr Sanford's advertisement, we know of no remedy that will so surely cure as the Invigorator.

There has lately been brought to our notice a medicine that seems to possess wonderful, curative and healing properteies in diseases of the Liver, stomache and Digestive Organs. It came to us with so many testimonials in its favor that we have noted its effects in some of the worst cases of continual debility, caused by deranged liver, and in every instance the effect was to relieve or give a permanent cure. Dr. Sanford's Invigorator, or Liver remedy is what we refer to. We always have been credulious about cures by patent medicines, but we are convinced that this medicine, for family use, is not over rated by the host of recommendations it has. Our advice is, for all troubled with Indigestion, Debility or Bowel Complaint, to get a bottle and try it; our word for it, relief will be experienced.

BLESSINGS To The Invalids who use Dr Sanford's Invigorator, for it will relieve them of their pains as soon as it is taken into their stomach. Pain and misery cannot exist where the Invigorator is used, for it will as surely drive them away, as daylight will banish darkness, of this there can be no doubt to those who try it, for it carries conviction with every dose taken. Another evidence is the thousands of certificates from those who use it or have been cured by it.—Try one bottle, if it does not benefit, then we are mistaken

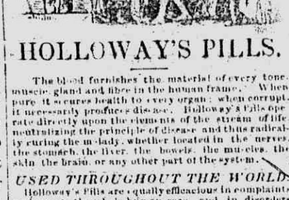
HEALTH OR SICKNESS.

CHOOSE BETWEEN THEM.



HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

The blood furnishes the material of every tissue, gland and fibre in the human frame; impure it secures health to every organ; when corrupt, it necessarily produces disease. Holloway's Pills operate directly upon the elements of the stream of life, neutralizing the principle of disease and thus radically curing the malady, whether located in the nerves, the stomach, the liver, the bowels, the muscles, the skin, the brain, or any other part of the system.

USED THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

Holloway's Pills are equally efficacious in complaints common to the whole human race, and in disorders peculiar to certain climates and localities.

ALARMING DISORDERS.

Dyspepsia and derangement of the liver the source of infirmity and suffering, and the cause of innumerable deaths yield to these curatives in ll cases, however aggravated acting as a mild purgative, alterative and tonic; they relieve the bowels purify the fluids and invigorate the system and the constitution at the same time.

General Weakness—Nervous Complaints.

When all stimulants fail the renovating and bracing properties of these Pills give firmness to the shaking nerves and enfeebled muscles of the victim of general debility.

DELICATE FEMALES.

All irregularities and ailments incident to the delicate and sensitive organs of the sex are removed or prevented by a few doses of these mild but infallable alterantives. No mother who regards her own or her children's health should fail to have them within her reach.

The London "Lancet," the London "Medical Review" and the most eminent of the faculty in Great Britain, France and Germany, have eulogized the Pills and their inventor.

AYER'S

CHERRY

PECTORAL,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Colds, Coughs, and Hoarseness.

BRIDGTON, MASS., July 8th, 1853.

DR. J. C. AYER: I have been afflicted many years with a severe cough, which finally settled on my lungs, and was attended with raising of blood, and other distressing symptoms of a fatal character. I was induced to try your CHERRY PECTORAL. Its constant use in my practice and my family for the last ten years has shown it to possess unquestionable virtues for the treatment of these complaints. EBEN KNIGHT, M. D.

A. H. MACKLEY, Esq., of Utica, N. Y., writes: "I have used your PECTORAL myself and in my family ever since you invented it, and believe it the best medicine for its purpose ever put out. With a bad cold I should sooner pay twenty five dollars for a bottle than do without it, or take any other remedy."

Croup, Whooping Cough, Influenza.

SPRINGFIELD, Miss., Feb. 7, 1856.

BROTHER AYER: I will cheerfully certify your PECTORAL is the best remedy we possess for the cure of Whooping Cough, Croup, and the chest diseases of children. We of your fraternity in the South appreciate your skill, and commend your medicine to our people.

HIRAM CONKLIN, M. D.

AMOS LEE, Esq., MONTEREY, Ia., writes, 24 Jan., 1856: "I had a tedious Influenza, which confined me in doors six weeks; took many medicines without relief, finally tried your PECTORAL by the advice of our clergyman. The first dose relieved the soreness in my throat and lungs: less than one half the bottle made me completely well. Your medicines are the cheapest as well as the best we can buy, and we esteem you, Doctor, and your remedies, as the poor man's friend."

Asthma or Phthisic, and Bronchitis,

WEST MANCHESTER, Pa., Feb. 4, 1856.

SIR: Your CHERRY PECTORAL is performing marvellous cures in this section. It has relieved several from alarming symptoms of consumption, and is now curing a man who has labored under an affection of the lungs for the last forty years. HENRY L. PARKS, Merchant.

A. A. RAMSEY, M. D., ALSON, MONROE Co., Iowa, writes, Sept. 6, 1855: "During my practice of many years I have found nothing equal to your CHERRY PECTORAL for giving ease and relief to consumptive patients, or curing such as are curable."

We might add volumes of evidence, but the most convincing proof of the virtues of this remedy is found in its effects upon trial.

Consumption.

Probably no one remedy has ever been known which cured so many and such dangerous cases as this. Some of the human aid can reach; but even to those the CHERRY PECTORAL affords relief and comfort.

ASTOR HOUSE, NEW YORK CITY, March 5, 1856

DOCTOR AYER, LOWELL: I feel it a duty and a pleasure to inform you what your CHERRY PECTORAL has done for my wife. She had been five months laboring under the dangerous symptoms of Consumption, from which no aid we could procure gave her much relief. She was steadily failing, until Dr. Strong, of this city, where we have come for advice, recommended a trial of your medicine. We bless his kindness, as well as your skill, for she has recovered from that day. She is not yet as strong as she used to be, but is free from her cough, and calls herself well.

Yours with gratitude and regard,

ORLANDO SHELBY, or SHELBYVILLE.

Consumptives, do not despair till you have tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It is made by one of the best medical chemists in the world, and its cures all around us bespeak the high merits of its virtues. — Philadelphia Ledger.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills.

THE sciences of Chemistry and Medicine have been taxed their utmost to produce this best, most perfect purgative which is known to man. Unanswerable proofs are shown that these PILLS have virtues which surpass in excellence the ordinary medicines, and that they win unprecedentedly upon the esteem of all men. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. Their penetrating properties stimulate the vital activities of the body, remove the obstructions of its organs, purify the blood, and expel disease. They purge out the foul humors which breed and grow distemper, stimulate sluggish or disordered organs into their natural action, and impart healthy tone with strength to the whole system. Not only do they cure the every-day complaints of every body, but also formidable and dangerous diseases that have baffled the best of human skill. While they produce powerful effects, they are at the same time, in diminished doses, the safest and best physic that can be employed for children. Being sugar-coated, they are pleasant to take, and being purely vegetable, are free from any risk of harm. Cures have been made which surpass belief were they not substantiated by men of such exalted position and character as to forbid the suspicion of untruth. Many eminent clergymen and physicians have lent their names to certify to the public the reliability of my remedies, while others have sent me the assurance of their conviction that my Preparations contribute immensely to the relief of my afflicted, suffering fellow-men.

The Agent below named is pleased to furnish gratis my American Almanac, containing directions for their use and certificates of their cures, of the following complaints: Costiveness, Bilious Complaints, Rheumatism, Dropsy, Heartburn, Headache arising from a foul Stomach, Sea-sea, Indigestion, Morbid Inaction of the Bowels and Pain arising therefrom, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, all Ulcerous and Cutaneous Diseases which require an evacuant Medicine, Scrofula or King's Evil. They also, by purifying the blood and stimulating the system, cure many complaints which it would not be supposed they could reach, such as Deafness, Partial Blindness, Gunshots and Nervous Irritability, Derangements of the Liver and Kidneys, Gout, and other kindred complaints arising from a low state of the body or obstruction of its functions.

Do not be put off by unprincipled dealers with some other pill that they make more profit on. Ask for AYER'S Pills, and take nothing else. No other they can give you compares with this in its intrinsic value or curative powers. The sick want the best and there is for them, and they should have it.

No Family

Can afford to be without Mustang Liniment in their house. The many accidents we are liable to, may render it necessary any moment, and nothing is capable of performing such a certain cure. (Extract) "In lifting the kettle from the fire it caught and scalded my hands and person severely—one hand almost to a crisp. The torture was unbearable. It was an awful night." The Mustang Liniment appeared to extract the pain almost immediately. It healed rapidly and left no scar of accident. Chas Foster. 420 Broad street, Philadelphia." It is truly a wonderful article. It will cure any case of swelling, burns, stiff joints. Eruptions, or rheumatism. For Horses it should never be dispensed with. One Dollar's worth of Mustang has frequently saved a valuable horse. It cures galds, sprains, Ringbone, spavin and founders. Beware of imitations. Sold in all parts of the habitable globe.

DR. EVERSON

DR. Everson's Great Ague Cure, or Ague King, for Ague, or Chills and Fever, is the most popular and certain remedy now known. The people and the press speak of it in the highest terms of commendation. It is pleasant to take, does not purge, vomit or sweat, but invigorates the system. It contains no Arsenic, Strichnine, Quinine, or any other poisonous or injurious drug, but it is an originally discovered Antidote to Malaria and as an Ague Killer it has no equal. READY-PAY & SHOE STORE

I would respectfully inform the citizens of Tecumseh and the surrounding country that they have entered into a copartnership for the purpose of carrying on the boot and shoe business in all its branches. They will give their personal attention to business, and by keeping none but good workmen and using none but prime stock, they have adopted the motto of Nimble Sixpence is better than slow Shilling; they have adopted the motto of Nimble Sixpence is better than slow Shilling; they have adopted the motto of Nimble Sixpence is better than slow Shilling;

Dream-land.

There's a land where the sunshine smiles ever,
A land where the flowers never fade,
Where the voice of the soft-sighing zephyr
Fills with music the green mossy glade.

There's a land where the sky is all bright-ness,
Where the cataracts of grief never fall,
Where the heart is all gladness and lightness,
Never aching with sorrow's dark pall.

And the name of that region is dream land;
And the pathfinder through fancy's dominions
Where spirits of light lead us o'er and
And love with us over the bright plains.

Love grows in that far off Elysian
In purity, here all unknown;
Hope changes to gladdest fruition,
And youth shares with beauty the throne.

At the time when the evening shadows
Fold the sunlight away from the hills
I roam through that land a gorgeous meadows,
While my heart with a strange rapture thrills.

I drink of its fountain of pleasure,
And list to its musical notes,
While my pulses beat time to each measure
That swells from its birds' tinny throats.

Let them smile at these dreamy romances,
Who never have felt their glad power,
And delight in the thorn and the bramble,
Who never have gazed on the flower.

But, for me, I am stronger and better
For the light although quickly 'tis flown,
For the warmth melts away the ice-fetter
Which grief round my spirit has thrown.

Then oh! while life glows in my bosom
Let me stray thro' the dream-gods bright realms
And perchance, I may pluck there a blossom
To clear from some eye the tear-films.

Darien Ship Canal Survey—Particulars of Dr. Caldwell's Expidition

Panama, May 19, 1857.

Dr. H. C. Caldwell, of the United States frigate Independence, having some time since obtained three weeks leave of absence, made a trip across the Isthmus between the Gulf of San Miguel and Caledonia Bay. Dr. Caldwell ascended the Darien and Savanna rivers to Principe, at the head of navigation, there being at high tide fifteen feet of water at Principe. Having reason to believe there existed a comparitively level tract of land between Fort Principe and the Atlantic, in a direction more northerly than that followed by Capt. Prevost, of the Virago, in 1853 he took up his line of travel in accordance with that idea.

The party cut their way through a thick undergrowth of palms, vines and thorny bushes, crossing the track of Capt. Prevost on the first day. The distance traveled from Principe, the first day, was estimated at six miles, and the elevation reached calculated at one hundred and sixty feet. The next three days the country crossed continued to be thickly wooded, but of an almost level character, not resected by numerous watercourse. Mr Hoosac, who resides at Chepigans, told Dr. Caldwell that this table land was reported to be partly covered with water during the rainy season. On the fourth day, Dr Caldwell's guides forsook him, and he proceeded on with only his own man from the Independence.

At evening, on this day, the Atlantic was seen from the top of a tree through a gap in the hills, in a northeast direction apparently about ten miles distant. The fifth day, the Dr. continued cutting his way with much difficulty through the bushes, suffering a good deal for want of water. On the evening of this day, ascending a tree, the gap in the Atlantic was again distinctly visible, the Atlantic being about six miles distant. Having had no water for forty-eight hours, and seeing no prospect of any ahead, and his provisions having been exhausted the day before, Dr Caldwell retraced his steps and on the 8th day reached Principe. He considers that he reached the summit, 160 feet, between the Atlantic and Pacific, on the 1st day after leaving Principe Capt Prevost's summit was about 950 feet.

Dr Caldwell thinks he has established three important facts that the depression of land by this route is much greater than has been supposed; the existance of a wide, almost level table land or plain; and what is very important, a deep gap in the Atlantic range. He will make a report to the Secretary of the Navy, and urge a government survey with a view to a canal which he believes to be eminently practicable.

REAL ESTATE IN SAN FRANCISCO.—As an example in the fall of prices in San Francisco, a correspondent writing under the date of the 18th of April, says:

"A certain hotel in this city, leased at $72,000 a year is now let at $7,200, or ten per cent, of the first sum; think to what disasters a man might be easily led predicating his movements upon the first named income! Not far from where I write there is a building under lease $30 per month that once paid $400 a month. But these instances are so common, the ruin and wreck in real estate long since so general, that they have ceased to attract notice."—N. Y. Post.

The Mercantile Library Association of New York has now some 5,000 members, and the library contains upwards of 47,000 volumes. The association was formed in 1820.

Factious Opposition.

It is right that any one should raise his voice his voice in opposition to whatever he may deem to be wrong, or injurious to the public good. It is not only right, but an absolute duty, and largely for the public interest, that he should do so.

But such is the infirmity of human nature and so apt are we to bend everything to partizan wishes or purposes, that this natural and wholesome regard for the right but too often degenerates into an opposition that is merely captious, partizan and selfish. No one can for any considerable length of time peruse a great majority of the political newspapers of the day, without becoming painfully and almost disgustingly cognizant of this fact.

The one party can see nothing in the other that is not wholly corrupt, and wilfully wrong, and does not hesitate to condemn in an opponent, what it would vociferously applaud in itself. If the object is only to embitter one portion of the community against the other, and and learn man to hate only and to traduce his neighbor, then this course is well adapted to the accomplishment of the end, but if on the other hand, as is more probable the case, the purpose and design is to secure political strength and influence, then is this course a sadly mistaken and unfortunate one.

Men are not often traduced into a regard for their traducers, nor does it add to the confidence of those already friends, to see those in charge of their party organs asserting from time to time that which they know and feel to be uncharitable, untrue and insincere. It is perhaps useless to say anything upon this subject, for there are a large class of politicians, who, having no moral sensibilities of their own to be offended by the utterance of an untruth, cannot be made to understand or appreciate the reactory influence of discovered falsehood upon the minds of those who have.

Yet the effect of this, is not only a serious loss to the party which they would fain build up, upon falsehood, rather than principle, but to the country also, in that, while there are evils and wrongs existing, which should be arrested and redressed, such is the common estimate of these faithless and fallacious partizans that no one will put faith in, or heed such as may be pointed out by them

The consequence is, that regarding the opposition made to wrong as factious and selfish, men are led the more readily to overlook and acquiesce in it, leaving party to perpetrate it with impunity, being well assured of an indiscriminate partizan support, whereas would they but think for themselves, or could they rely upon the sincerity of the the opposition coming from other sources, the design and course of the great majority of men would be to support only the right, and to oppose the wrong wherever it might be found

We cannot but regret that there is not in the management of our partizan journals a more liberal and charitable spirit, and are well assured that such a course, although it might not not perhaps at first, fully meet the vindictiveness of an embittered partizan taste, would in the end greatly subserve the true interests, as well as the amenities of an honorable partizan warfare Nothing sooner disarms a man than a spirit of liberal charity and manifest candor, or more surely invites him to a free investigation, and it may be to an honest conviction, while on the other hand nothing more surely steels the heart, and closes the mind against all hopes of either than a spirit of narrow selfishness or reckless in sincerity

General News.

WASHINGTON June 5.

It is untrue that Lord Napier officially denies the cession of the Island, in Panama Bay to Great Britain.

The Administration certainly did not interrogate him, nor did he volunteer a statement in relation to the subject. No one, however, in diplomatic circles, believes such cession has been made.

J. M. Knapp, resigned to-day, a lucrative office in the Treasury, intending to remove to Wisconsin and engage in banking, real estate and law business.

Col. Cummings, although resigning the Governorship of Utah, when in Missouri, would probably have accepted it on his arrival here, had not the President in the meantime selected another whose name will be officially concealed till it shall be known whether he will accept the appointment

QUEBEC, June 5

Robertson, messenger of the British Bank, had his pocket picked in Peter street this morning of $7,200. There is no clue to the thief.

Concord, June, 4.

Legislature elected Lemuel N. Pattee, Republican, secretary of State. The election of other State officers was postponed.

Boston, June, 5.

Ex Gov. Henry Hibbard, of New Hampshire, died in Charleston this morning.

NEW YORK, June 9

The Columbia Times, states that the Mission to Russia, has been tendered to N. W. Pickens, of South Carolina

The story of the intended visit of General Filibuster Walker to this city, is not credited here, as a writ awaits him from the United States Circuit Court of New York, at the suit of Com. Vanderbilt, for plundering the Transit Co.

The Board of Council last evening authorized the issue of Bonds for the purchase of the State Arsenal property, in the Central Park, for the sum of $275-000.

An extract of a letter is received in this city, per last steamer, from Professor Morse, says:

"All my investigation into the practicability of working the telegraph wire with commercial speed between America and Europe, and studying with Dr Whitehouse, the phenomena of the current in sub marine conductors, gives me only stronger assurance than ever, of its ultimate success, and a success realizing your most sanguine anticipations.

LOUISVILLE, June 9.

Gen. Walker was received here by the citizens this morning, at the house of Mr Richardson. His brother-in-law his father and the elite of the city were present to receive him. He attends the theatre this evening, accompanied by his staff He leaves for Cincinnati.

New York, June 9.

The Washington correspondence of the Times of June 8th says the President has declared that in matters relating to the Nicaraguan Transit Co., he will not recognize Costa Rica as having any control of it.

The Washington correspondence of the Herald of the same date says the Secretary of the Treasury is of the opinion that the close of the present fiscal year will find a surplus of twenty-two millions of dollars in the Treasury. The late reduction of the tariff, he thinks, will result in an increase of the revenue from increased importation, and he has already determined to recommend another large extension of the first list.

Chicago, June 9.

John Wentworth, the Mayor, was arrested this morning by the U. S. Marshal charged with stealing the mail bags. Hi-bail was put at $3,000 On examination this afternoon, mails bags were found up on his premises—proof said to be positive.

Washington, June 9.

There is not even a shadow of truth in the report that Gov. Walker will be recalled, from Kansas, to take the place of Gen. Cass.

Boston, June 9.

A fire broke out about 12 o'clock last night, in Chelsea, destroying 19 dwelling houses on Cedar street, mostly occupied by private families. A good portion of the furniture was saved. The houses were valued at $2,300 each, and were owned by Geo. W Gerrish.

Harrisburg, June 8

In the Supreme Court an injunction has been presented by the Canal Commissioners against the sale of the Main Line of the Public Works It was ordered that the complainants have leave to move the Court in Banco on Friday next, for a preliminary injunction, according to the prayer of the bill.

New York, June 5.

The Post contains a lengthy correspondence which passed between the American Minister to China, the American Commodore and the American Mercantile houses in Canton. The latter urged the Commodore to take measures to procure the local steamers which include some Americans from capture by the Mandarin Junks. Two of the said vessels having already been taken. The Commodore replied that he could afford them no protection owing to the limited force at his disposal. They then wrote to Minister Parker, as a protest against the action of the Commodore, asking him to lay the matter before the government at Washington. To this request Parker acceded.

The congregation of Dr. Cheever's church last evening, after a stormy debate adopted a report of the special committee supporting Dr. Cheever, and condemning the action of the deacons.

New York, June 6.

A letter from St. Paul, May 30th, to the Post, says orders have just been received from Washington for 600 of the 10th Infantry, under the command of Brevet Lieut. Col Camby, to proceed forthwith against the lower band of Dacotah Sioux, at Spirit Lake, and to Desmoines settlement, also against the Jaques River Indians, who are suspected of being concerned in the recent outrages.

The Colins steamer Columbia sailed to day for Liverpool, with 50 passengers and $300 000 in specie.

The Times of to-day contains the whole of Gov Walker's address to the people of Kansas. The material portions seem to be nearly identical with the address recently published in the Herald.

Accounts from Bathurst, Rives Gambia, state that a destructive fire had occurred there, April 15th, destroying a large amount of property, including sixty thousand bushels of pea nuts; in consequence of which none could be obtained for shipment

The great four mile race yesterday, over the Fashion course; was won by Nicholas I.

The Grand Lodge of Masons last eve, accompanied by a large number of ladies and gentlemen, proceeded to Dr. Chapins church, where appropriate and interresting ceremonies in honor of the lamented Dr. Kane took place.

The entire Furniture manufactory of Alexander Roux, 43 Mercer street, and a large portion of that of Mr. Campbell, were burned last night. 2 dwellings were much injured. Loss $50,000. Insured in Delaware city.

The Kansas correspondent of the Sun, who has conversed with Judge Stiles, Surveyor General Burr and others from Utah, says the Mormons laugh at the idea of the Executive sending companies of Federal troops to enforce obedience in Utah, of the people. They express determination to resist such an assumption of authority by the government.

Brigham Young with 350 followers, left Salt Lake City, April 25th, to visit and trade with the Indians in the northern part of his territory, the Bannacks, Flat Heads and Nez Perces. It is supposed that the object of his mission, is for the purpose of uniting these tribes with the Mormon forces, in preparation for a war with the United States, determined if it does commence to secure possession of the country thereabouts and put a stop to the emigrants across the plains.

The Mormons claim that they number 75 000 souls in Utah alone Gen Burr thinks their population will not exceed half that number. Every man and boy able to shoulder a musket is a soldier, and required to perform military duty almost daily. They are thoroughly acquainted with the country and all of the mountain passes, and in case of a rupture with the U. S. troops, they would be a very efficient force, and one that it would require a large army to conquer.

Washington, June 6.

Seth Kinnean, who presented a Buckhorn chair to the President, has received an appointment for assistant to remove certain Indians on the Pacific coast. The salary will be about $1,800 pr annum.

St. Louis, June 5.

The celebration to day was magnificent The excursionists were landed amid salutes of artillery, and escorted to carriages Omnibuses, &c., in which they were conveyed through the main streets of the city to the fair grounds. The procession was two miles in length.

The congregation in the ampitheatre numbered 10,000. It is the most complete buildings of the kind in the Union

The military firemen, turners and others, passed in review before the citizens, crowding the ampithestre to its utmost capacity.

The oration was delivered by Judge Bates—the dinner ensued—the State Representatives were toasted, and responses made Pennsylvania was toasted, but the speaker expected did not answer. Prof. Mitchell responded in a very amusing speech to Ohio.

Ex Governor Reynolds responded for Illinois

Virginia was represented by John R Thompson, and Baltimore, well and ably by Frazer and others.

Guests are loud in praise of the bounteous hospitality of the citizens.

The Steamship Great Eastern

Figures convey but a faint idea of the immensity of this mammouth ship. Those who have seen the Niagara may realize her bulk when we say that she is twice as long, and nearly five times the tonage of that giant of the navy. Four times up and down her deck will make a mile's walk. Seen afloat she will resemble a village adrift, with pipes and masts by way of trees.

She is built wholly of iron plates,—Each plate was separately designed by the builder, Mr. Brunel, as there are but a few amidships, out of the whole ten thousand which resemble each other in shape. He made an exact pattern in wood of each; steam shears cut plates of iron to match, a steam roller curved them to suit, and a steam punch punched holes for the bolts. These were applied at a white heat, and rivited close; the contraction which occurred when they cooled drew the plates together with irresistable force She is built in sixteen water-tight compartments; ten walls of iron, at distances of sixty feet from each other, divide her transversely; and a longitudinal wall bisects her for about half her length. Thus, were she, by any possible mishap, to run upon a rock, or be shattered by storms, she might dissolve into a dozen or more perfectly seaworthy craft.

One wonders what possible propelling power can be brought to bear on so vast a mass. Mr. Brunel has determined not to trust to one, but to combine paddle wheels screw, and sails The Great Eastern has two wheels, 56 feet in diameter, driven by four engines with a nominal power of 1000 horses, with cylinders six feet two inches in diameter, and stroke of fifteen feet. She has a screw of 24 feet diameter, moved by engines equal in power to 1800 horses The fans of this screw are so gigantic that a spectator said he could compare them to nothing but the blade bones of some hugh animal of the pre Adamite world. And finally she has 7 masts, two of which are square rigged; on the seven she can spread 6500 square yards of canvass The British engineers and ship builders calculate that her screw and paddle wheels will drive her through the water at the rate of 16 knots or say 19 miles per hour; so that except with a very strong breeze from the right quarter, she will not gain anything by hoisting sail

But the most wonderful part of this very wonderful vessel will be her arrangements for the carriage of passengers—They dwarf our largest river and lake craft into ridiculous insignificance. For passenger purposes she will be divided into three sections, the centre of the vessel will be appropriated to first class passengers, the after part to second class, the forward compartments to steerage passengers. The choice berths have been selected amidships, because it is believed that there will be no motion of any kind felt there; thus the most susceptible person will be able to perform a month's voyage in the first cabin of the Great Eastern without an hour's sea-sickness—As she is built for the Australian trade, and will cross the tropics, care has been taken not to crowd the berths; yet she is calculated to carry 800 first class, 2000 second class, and 1200 third class passengers. In case of need, the builders say that she could accommodate 10000 troops besides the crew of 400 men.

Each of these classes will be as separate and distinct as if they were on board different vessels. Each department will have its own saloons for feeding, reading room, galleys and bar; to communicate with passengers fore or aft, the first class people will have to climb the hatchway to the main deck.

The rates of passage fixed by the company illustrate the practical effect of this new plan of ship building. The voyage to Australia will, it is calculated, take from thirty three to thirty six days; yet the fare will be for first class passengers $325, for second class $175, for third class $125; in other words $10 per day for first class, and $4 for steerage passengers, including provisions

Nothing demonstrates the aptitude of the English to avail themselves of the progress of science better than the applications of late discoveries and inventions to the working of this ship. She is to be lighted throughout with gas, made on board; and on dark nights, the electric light, on the main top, will shed a spurious moonlight upon deck. To save labor the anchor will be weighed, and the sails hoisted by steam; in case of accident, the same steam power can be applied to the pumps. Finally, a system of electric telegraphs will enable the captain standing amid-ships, to communicate instantaneously, in any weather, with the man at the helm, the engineer, and the look out man forward. Modern science will indeed be epitomized and exhausted in this admirable vessel.

In order to provide against any possible accident, she is provided with two fine steamers in guise of paddle box boats, each ninety feet long, and a large number of patent bellows life boats. In these, should some unforeseen casuality destroy all the compartments, the whole complement of the passengers and crew can be rescued.

We trust these hasty memoranda may enable our readers to realize the great strides which steam navigation has taken in the construction of the Great Eastern. Doubtless she inaugurates a new era in ship building. The main principle which dictated her construction was the expouse of navigating steamers from England to Australia and the East Indies, when no coal for the return voyage had to be sent to meet them in sailing vessels. The mammouth ship will carry, besides passengers and 5000 tons freight, coal enough for the round voyage. The saving in this item alone will constitute a handsome dividend on the investment.

It is an established commercial maxim that cost diminishes in proportion to increase of consumption. A vessel which carries one thousand passengers can carry them at a far less price, in proportion to her cost, than a vessel which only carries one hundred; and the price is still further diminished when the capacity of the vessel is fifty thousand passengers. The Great Eastern draws too much water to enter the harbor of New York; but we have no doubt mammoth vessels will be built, of suitable draft, for the New York and Liverpool trade; and when they are, the rates of passage will fall. If the Persia can carry passengers for $120, a vessel of 20,000 tons could carry them for $50

We have briefly alluded to the superiority of the Great Eastern over smaller craft in respect of convenience. From the observations of Dr Scoresby on the height and length of sea waves, it is reckoned that, except in very severe storms, the Great Eastern will not be swayed by the motions of the sea—will neither pitch nor roll. In average weather when ordinary vessels toss about in the fashion so unpleasantly familiar to landsmen, she will be as steady as a wharf, and passengers may go from England to Australia in her without an hour's sea sickness. To nautical men, this may seem a trifle; but we feel satisfied it will be esteemed no slender boon by the bulk of the traveling public

The time will come—we trust it is not far distant—when the great passenger business between this country and Europe will be performed by vessels resembling floating cities, with all the convenience of our best hotels; without any of the standard nautic inconveniences, such as sea sickness, and unpleasant confinement; with libraries, reading rooms, gas, drawing rooms, suits of apartments, etc, the whole for a fraction of the sum which is now paid for a very comfortless voyage indeed.

A few weeks hence we shall have an opportunity of seeing the monster of the seas in the iron. Her trial trip will be made to Portland, Maine, no other harbor in the United States being capable of receiving her. She is to launched in August, and may be expected at Portland some time in September. Half the U S will, of course, flock to see her; they will not forget, we hope, in the pleasure of beholding so wonderful a work of science, the honor that is due to her builder—the immortal BRUNEL

HANEMANN RECONVERTED TO COMMON SENSE At a meeting of "spiritualists," an invalid was brought forward dreadfully afflicted with ulcerous scrofula that all the doctor had failed to cure It was proposed to appeal to the spirit land for advice, and a Homeopathic physician present interrogated the departed spirit of Hanemann as to what remedy should be taken. Loud and distinct raps, audible to the whole audience, told off Ayer's Cathartic Pills. Homer N. Y. Whig.

Holloways Pills.—Delicate females, who suffer from those peculiar distubances of the system incident to the gentler sex, will find these Pills a safe remedy for all the functional disorders under which they may labor. Acting specifically upon the local irregularity, and generally upon the system, this comphensive remedy will simultaneously remove the immediate cause of suffering, and invigorate all the body organs which have been affected by sympathy therewith. In the three most perilous phases of female existance, viz, the dawn of womanhood, the period of maturity, and what is termed the "change of life," the alterative and restorative properties of these Pills render them indispensible to the feebler sex.

Does any of our high livers ever eat too much dinner? If any of our readers have cooks who tempt their appetites a little too far, I will tell a secret that will lead them to the enjoyment of their dinners without a visit from that gouty old gentleman—Dyspepsia. Take a dose of Dr Sanford's Invigorator after eating and you will never be troubled with indigestion, but on the contrary, before the next meal time approaches the appetite will sharpen to appreciate any kind of food. If the food rises or sours, the Invigorator will fix the matter right at once, for there is something in it that to use a friend's expression, will let a man eat grave stones and take the Invigoritor and they will digest. We have tried it in double doses on one or two occassions, for sick headache, and it acts like a charm

What we want to say to our readers young or old, is, if any thing ails you, go without delay and get a bottle of Dr Sanford's Invigorator, and if it don't cure you come and tell us, for we want to see one person that it will not benefit.

☞ See first page for Subscription &c.

☞ We are printing BLANKS of all kinds, which will be found at J. E. Halls.

☞ The Marshall has commenced with a full gang to improve things generally. The hill at Brownville is 'done up' as it should have been done years ago; saw logs have retired to their respective places, &c. We hope the bridge across Evans' creek will not be overlooked.

☞ The citizens of Tecumseh are requested to meet at Union Hall, on Saturday evening next, at 7 o'clock, to make arrangements for the coming 4th of July; Let there be a general turn out.

☞ The marriage notice in this issue should have been published last week, but was mislaid.

☞ E. Tindall is receiving Wool at his ware-house, to be carded by G. W. Doty, of Manchester.

☞ D. Borden has his Ball tickets for the 3d, of July. He is known as a very liberal landlord and has gained a large circle of friends among the dancers, by prompt attention to their comfort. He intends to make things all right the 3d

☞ Dr. Entrikin is to be at the Michigan House, on Saturday next.

☞ Two hundred and fifty dollars was subscribed in this village, for the relief of the northern citizens.

☞ By reading the story on the first page, you will understand how Mr Buchanan became a president 'in a horn.'—Chair.

☞ We learn from the Allegan Journal that the Brass Band of that place have gone into the printing business.—Wonder if the Tecumseh Band could not be induced to do likewise—what say you Reed?

☞ Jones & Co., are fitting up an Ice Cream saloon over their store, which bids fair to become a favorite resort for lovers of cream, strawberries, &c.

☞ Eight racks of walnut and whitewood lumber, was shipped to New York city to day from this place.

☞ Jones & Scherer are very busy manufacturing fashionable clothing to suit their numerous friends.

☞ A Kentucky lady having been deserted by her husband, advertises him, and appends the following stanzas:

"Oh that his bed may be made of briers,
And his path beset with thorns;
And the balance of his days
Be haunted by the Beasts with 7 heads and 10 horns
Wedlock has been a woeful thing to me,
For marrying is not what it is cracked up to be:
I thought my pathway would be strewed with flowers and roses,
But the way old Bill has made me wretched
It is a sin to Moses;
I feel like a forest tree by the north wind Shaken.
Wretched, forlorn, sad and forsaken."

☞ It is said that bleeding a partially blind horse at the nose, will restore him to sight. To open a man's eyes, you must bleed him at the pocket.

☞ The man whose feelings were 'worked' has obtained a fresh supply.

☞ The first newspaper tolerated in Virginia was in 1879; the susscription price was $50 per annum for one copy; advertisements of moderate length were inserted for $5, the first week, and $7. each succeeding

☞ The Urbana (Ill) Constitution is trying to make the following bets:

1st—The Comet will not strike the earth; but

2d—If it does strike it will never do it a second time.

The first proposition—We will wager $10 000, more or less, that if the comet appears to strike we will dodge before it does.

A like sum, that if it does it will be picked hither nor a kite.

Twenty five times the above amounts, that in case the comet strikes, it won't dislodge the earth six inches.

A like sum that after the comet strikes the earth drops.

An optional sum that the earth can knock the comet further than the comet can knock the earth, nine times out of ten.

That after the comet gets through striking the earth, it will never want to strike anybody else.

All wagers to be decided by the Judges of the Supreme Court.

Money to be deposited in the Banks of Newfoundland.

Applicants for bets have a right to select any comet they choose.

Time of striking, and other arrangements, to be fixed by the parties.

I have tried during Nineteen Years of my life the various modes of doing business.

Firstly for Cash.
Secondly on Short Credit.
Thirdly, had to take Long Credit, Orders and Accounts.

Lastly, I have been compelled to wait for payment of Goods sold on Six Months time, long enough for a man to visit California, get rich, and return, before payment could be forced or coaxed.

Now I wish to say, to my numerous friends and patrons, that I am thoroughly convinced that the mode of buying goods on time is both injurious to the buyer and seller.

I will hereafter Sell for Ready pay, at such prices that will defy all competion in this Town, State, or the United States.

No one should buy a dollars worth of Goods without calling at the

Great Western Cash Store,

and get the prices. Some are so unfortunate as to be compelled to trade on long credit stores—to these I would say, Call and See what you can save by having the Ready or something as good, to use where you please.

The Potatoe Rot.

When the Potatoe Rot fell upon us in 1845, I went into my 'patch' and commenced a series of observations and experiments to ascertain the cause of it, and continued them in after years as opportunity offered. In watching the progress of the 'disease I noticed that top of the vines appeared to be first affected. The leaves turned brown, and soon dropped from the stems. Very soon afterwards the stems also died. On examining the withered stems, I found them in the incipient stages of decay. On chewing them I discovered that the juice contained a very nauseous and disagreeable acid, the scent of which was like a rotten potatoe.

On digging the potatoes I noticed that those which lay nearest the top ground were much the most affected by the 'rot.' Of those deeply imbedded, but few comparitively were rotten. Subsequent observations corroborated those first made, and in all cases where my potatoes rotted I found that the earth over and about them, was too warm to stand upon more than 10 to 15 minutes at a time during the hottest part of the season. Well knowing that excessive heat oftentimes did great damage in rusting wheat, in smutting corn, &c., &c, I soon came to the conclusion that the potatoe rot was owing to the same cause,—that the tender leaves and stems of the tops of the vines were over heated just at that critical time of their growth when the juice was being elaborated, and descending to swell out the tubers; which, as in the cases of other roots, increase in size with remarkable rapidity in the latter part of the season, and that the heat of the sun, (as is oftentimes the case with clover and buckwheat,) killed the tops, and acidified the juices. The circulation of these juices into the tubers caused a predisposition to decay, and if the extreme heat continued three or more days, an actual decay of the tubers before they were taken from the ground took place.

The predisposition and actual decay were in proportion to the degree and continuation of the heat, and the rapidity of the growth of the tops.—Where the potatoe tops were less exposed to the heat there was less 'rot,' and less predisposition to it, after the tubers were gathered. As a proof of this, (in addition to my own observations,) one of my neighbors planted potatoes late in season, in his cornfield where there was failures in the corn hills, the same year when the potatoes in this part of the country were most badly rotted, and the produce was sound, and without rot. Another neighbor planted his 'patch,' on the south side of his field, where the potatoes were shaded by an adjoing forest and his potatoes were nearly free from the 'rot,' before and after digging.—In another instance, I witnessed a man digging his potatoes from one of the most 'weedy' patches I ever saw. So large and dense were the weeds that, when digging the man could not be seen at a greater distance than 3 or 4 rods. The potatoes appeared to be all sound and good.

Excessive heat, I have no doubt, is the immediate cause of the 'disease.' In a future paper I may attempt to show the remote cause of that immediate cause.

To Form a Turf in Door Yards. The Country Gentleman gives the following directions: 'If too wet for ordinary crops, the soil must be under drained, then turned over deeply, so as to form a mellow surface. Then, as early in the spring as practicable, sow grass seed at the rate of two bushels per acre, and lightly brush it in and roll it smooth and even. The grass will come up thick so as to form a complete coat of green velvet in a few weeks from sowing. Red top and and white clover are best—a portion of timothy will do—but not red clover. If no other grass seed can be had, clear timothy may be sown, but it will not maintain its greenness so well, must of course be mown every week or two, to maintain its perfection.—One bushel of seed per acre will do, but will require a much longer time to form a close, smooth turf.

American Grape Vines in Europe.

It appears from a letter read before the Cincinnatti Wine Growers Association, by Mr. Robert Buchanan, one of the most extensive cultivators of the grape in that region, that the American ivines being subsituted to a considerable extent in vineyards of Europe, for the native varieties, on account of its exemption from the prevailing disease. We extract the following:—Jour. of Com.

Of late years, since the appearances of the disease called the 'Odium,' amongst the grape vines of Europe, the attention of wine growers of that continent has been anxiously turned to find out some means of arresting its ravages—or to discover such new grape vines, as are exempt from this alarming disease which threatens to destory the old varieties now in cultivation.

Recent experiments, have proved our Catawaba and Isabella vines, to be well adapted to the soil of many parts of Europe, and entirely free from the 'Odium.'

Mr. S. J. Kellogg, of this city, who resided for some years in France, has lately received an order from Bordeaux for cuttings and roots of our American varieties, and Col. M. P. Wilder of Boston, has been commissioned by the government of Belgium, to send over all our best selections grape vines and also samples of our wines.

Both these gentlemen are assured by their correspondents, that the American vines already tried, are quite healthy, and promising as wine grapes.

I am permitted to make the following extract from a letter received by one of the above named gentlemen; It is dated Bordeaux, 12 Feb., 1857, My friends to whom I had mentioned that I thought from the perusal of the book you gave me when there, that the vines of Ohio had been attacked by the 'Odium,' as well as our own, write to me that it is a mistake. The vines of German or European origin, they say may have attacked by the disease, but not the Catawaba, Isabella, and other American vines.

Some of these these gentlmen who in Languedoc and other parts of France, have cultivated these vines, affirm that in the midst of vineyards which are tainted, the Isabella, Catawaba, ect., have hitherto passed unscathed, and I have the same testimony from several other reliable quarters. These circumstances render the inquiries made in belgium, still more interesting, and I do not hesitate in imparting them to you.

I shall be anious to know when I may expet to get the vine plants I took the liberty ask for, if I have been intime.

This is a new item in the value of Grape culture in America. Not only is the Wine wanted for home consumption, but the vines for export abroad.

On the Mangement of Horses.

The colt should be kept tame. The field in which they are kept should be surrounded by good fences or they acequire unruly habits and much time be lost in hunting them when strayed from the pasture. The 1st and 2nd winters keep them in a warm stable if of brick or stone, it must be well ventilated from the top. Feed with good hay, and some bran, turnips or carrots but not on graid, either whole or crushed for it is binding and will make tenderfooted if not crippled horses. The 3d winter, if large and strong the colt may be harnessed and driven before a light sleigh, to get it tame and used to drawing. The 4th winter work it but not too hard and do not forget to feed well but not too much grain. With this treatment colts will by this time make good serviceable horses. Water often and but little at a time. In handling be mild but not timid. Do not drive too fast nor load heavy; groom well and bed at night, to prevent rolling in the stable and getting fast; many good horse has been lost in consequence of neglect in this repect after being driven in the strom or till bathed in perspiration.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Colds, Coughs, and Hoarseness.

Dorchester, Mass., 20th Dec., 1856.

Dr. J. C. AYER: I have used your Cherry Pectoral in my family for the last seven years, and have found it the best remedy I have ever found for Coughs, Hoarseness, Influenza, and the concomitant symptoms of a Cold, in my practice and my family for the last ten years has shown it to possess superior virtues for the treatment of these complaints. ERAS KNOWLTON, M. D.

A. B. MONTLEY, Esq., of Utica, N. Y., writes: "I have used your Pectoral myself and in my family ever since you invented it, and believe it the best medicine for its purposes ever put out. With a bad cold I should answer promptly twenty-five dollars for a bottle than do without it, or take any other remedy."

Croup, Whooping Cough, Influenza.

SPRINGFIELD, Miss., Feb. 7, 1856.

BROTHER AYER: I will cheerfully certify your PECTORAL is the best remedy we possess for the cure of Whooping Cough, Croup, and the chest diseases of children. We of your fraternity in the South appreciate your skill, and commend your medicine to our people.

HIRAM CONKLIN, M. D.

AMOS LEE, Esq., MONTEREY, Va., writes, 24 Jan., 1856: "I had a tedious Influenza, which confined me in doors six weeks; took many medicines without relief; finally tried your PECTORAL by the advice of our clergyman. The first dose relieved the soreness in my throat and lungs; less than one half the bottle made me completely well. Your medicines are the cheapest as well as the best we can buy, and we esteem you, Doctor, and your remedies, as the poor man's friend."

Asthma or Phthisic, and Bronchitis.

WEST MANCHESTER, Pa., Feb. 4, 1856.

SIR: Your CHERRY PECTORAL is performing marvellous cures in this section. It has relieved several from alarming symptoms of consumption, and is now curing a man who has labored under an affection of the lungs for the last forty years. HENRY L. PARKS, Merchant.

A. A. RAMSEY, M. D., ALMON, Monroe Co., Iowa, writes, Sept. 6, 1855: "During my practice of many years I have found nothing equal to your CHERRY PECTORAL for giving ease and relief to consumptive patients, or curing such as are curable."

We might add volumes of evidence, but the most convincing proof of the virtues of this remedy is found in its effects upon trial.

Consumption.

Probably no one remedy has ever been known which cured so many and such dangerous cases as this. Some to human aid can reach; but even to those the CHERRY PECTORAL affords relief and comfort.

ASTOR HOUSE, NEW YORK CITY, March 6, 1856.

DOCTOR AYER, LOWELL: I feel it a duty and a pleasure to inform you what your CHERRY PECTORAL has done for my wife. She had been five months laboring under the dangerous symptoms of Consumption, from which no aid we could procure gave her much relief. She was steadily failing, until Dr. Strong, of this city, whose skill is equalled by few as a physician, recommended a trial of your medicine. We bless his kindness, as well as your skill, for she has recovered from that day. She is not yet as strong as she used to be, but is free from her cough, and calls herself well.

Yours with gratitude and regard,

ORLANDO SHELLEY, of SHELLEY, BROTHERS.

Consumption, do not despair till you have tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It is made by one of the best medical chemists in the world, and its cures all around us bespeak the high merits of its virtues.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills.

THE sciences of Chemistry and Medicine have been taxed their utmost to produce this best, most perfect purgative which is known to man. Innumerable proofs are shown that these Pills have virtues which surpass in excellence the ordinary medicines, and that they win us unprecedentedly upon the esteem of all men. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. Their penetrating properties stimulate the vital activities of the body, remove the obstructions of its organs, purify the blood, and expel disease. They purge out the foul humors which breed and grow distemper, stimulate sluggish or disordered organs into their natural action, and impart healthy tone with strength to the whole system. Not only do they cure the every-day complaints of every body, but also formidable and dangerous diseases that have baffled the best of human skill. While they produce powerful effects, they are at the same time, in diminished doses, the safest and best physic that can be employed for children. Being sugar-coated, they are pleasant to take, and being purely vegetable, are free from any risk of harm. Cures have been made which surpass belief were they not substantiated by men of such exalted position and character as to forbid the suspicion of untruth. Many eminent clergymen and physicians have lent their names to certify to the public the reliability of my remedies, while others have sent me the assurance of their conviction that my Preparations contribute immensely to the relief of my afflicted, suffering fellow-men.

The Agent below named is pleased to furnish gratis my American Almanac, containing directions for their use and certificates of their cures, of the following complaints:—

Costiveness, Bilious Complaints, Rheumatism, Dropsy, Heartburn, Headache arising from a foul Stomach, Nausea, Indigestion, Morbid Inaction of the Bowels and Pain arising therefrom, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, all Ulcerous and Cutaneous Diseases which require an evacuant Medicine, Scrofula or King's Evil. They also, by purifying the blood and stimulating the system, cure many complaints which it would not be supposed they could reach, such as Deafness, Partial Blindness, Neuralgia and Nervous Irritability, Derangements of the Liver and Kidneys, Gout, and other kindred complaints arising from a low state of the body or obstruction of its functions.

Do not be put off by unprincipled dealers with some other pill they make more profit on. Ask for AYER'S PILLS, and take nothing else. No other they can give you compares with this in its intrinsic value or curative powers. The sick want the best and there is for them and they should have it.

MORE BOUNTY LAND.

THE ACT OF CONGRESS, passed March 3d, 1855, gives

160 Acres of Land,

To every Officer, Soldier, Musician, in the Army; or man, Marine, Clerk, or Landsman in the Navy, who served fourteen days, or was in any battle in any war since 1790, or to their widows or minor children—embracing officers and soldiers of

WAYNE'S WAR,
WAR OF 1812,
BLACK HAWK WAR,
PATRIOT WAR,
FLORIDA WAR,
AROOSTOOK WAR,
MEXICAN WAR.

ALSO, the Revolutionary Soldiers or their Widows. In cases where 160 acres have been received under former Acts of Congress, no more can be drawn; but those who have been allowed a Warrant for 40 or 80 acres are now entitled to a Warrant for enough more to make up 160 acres.

P. S. We have faithful and experienced Agents in Washington, and we make no charge in any case unless we obtain the land.

☞ The second, third or fourth marriage of a widow does not impair her claim under this act, if she is a widow at the time of her application.

Persons under the age of 21 years on the 3d of March, 1955, are regarded minors by this act.

Those having claims, will have them promptly attended to by calling on or writing (post paid,) to BILLS & BAXTER, Tecumseh.

A Medicine that Never Debilitates

DR. SANFORD'S

INVIGORATOR,

OR LIVER REMEDY.

HAS ALL THE GOOD QUALITIES OF A Purgative medicine, answering the purposes of any Cathartic without the debilitating effects experienced from most purgatives. It acts slowly and gently, but surely, moving the bowels to carry off all the secreted matter, at the same time, stimulating the Liver to a proper performance of its functions.

The Invigorator cures the Sick Headache. Take one or two tea-spoonsful at each attack and it will soon disappear. For an overloaded stomache, or when food rises or sours, take the Invigorator after eating, and it will not prove disagreeable or oppressive. For Heartburn, Palpitation, or difficult breathing take a teaspoonful once or twice daily. For Loss of Appetite, Langu or Listlessness, the medicine is invaluable. It will restore the appetite and make the food digest well—Nightmare take a tea-spoonful on retiring and the demons of dream-land will all be fairies. After eating a heavy dinner, take a dose of Invigorator and it will relieve all oppression or fullness. The Invigorator is a Liver Remedy of unequalled virtue, acting directly on that organ, curing Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Bilious Attacks, Dysentery, Piles, Worms, and all Female Obstructions, for which it has no equal.

We know there is nothing now before the American public, prepared with such skill by a scientific man, particularly for diseases of the Liver, as Dr. Sanford's Invigorator, or Liver Remedy. It has attained a reputation second to no other article in the world, simply because it rests on its own merit. To convince all by trial that it is all its proprietors claim it to be, if any of our readers are suffering from such diseases as are described in Dr Sanford's advertisement, we know of no remedy that will so surely cure as the Invigorator.

There has lately been brought to our notice a medicine that seems to possess wonderful, curative and healing proprieties in diseases of the Liver, stomache and Digestive Organs. It came to us with so many testimonials in its favor that we have noted its effects in some of the worst cases of continual debility, caused by deranged liver, and in every instance the effect was to relieve or give a permanent cure, Dr. Sanford's Invigorator, or Liver remedy is what we refer to. We always have been credulous about cures by patent medicines, but we are convinced that this medicine, for family use, is not over rated by the host of recommendations it has. Our advice is, for all troubled with Indigestion Debility or Bowel Complaint, to get a bottle and try it; our word for it, relief will be experienced.

BLESSINGS To The Invalids who use Dr. Sanford's Invigorator, for it will relieve them of their pains as soon as it is taken into their stomach. Pain and misery cannot exist where the Invigorator is used, for it will as surely drive them away, as daylight will banish darkness, of this there can be no doubt to those who try it, for it carries conviction with every dose taken. Another evidence is the thousands of certificates from those who use it or have been cured by it.—Try one bottle, if it does not benefit, then we are mistaken.

The First Snow.

BY MINNIE MARY LEE.

The snow showers down on Willie's grave,
O, God! the cold, cold snow,
Above that precious little form
That slumbers chill and low,
The little form so full of life
But one fleet year ago.

He stood where now I tearful stand,
And watched the feathery flakes,
And stretching forth his dimpled hand,
Cried, "see how fast it makes!"
His blue eyes opened with delight,
And now—it never wakes.

It never wakes at glorious morn
To glad us with his love;
We never list the winning words
Of our gentle-hearted dove.
They tell us that the angels have
Enfolded him above.

The dust is gathered on his chair,
And on his little sled,
On all his playthings everywhere,
The dust is ever spread.
Ah, me, dust lies on all the world
Since he lies with the dead!

Once all was bright and fair to me,
All tinged with roseate beam,
I thought that heaven could never have
More gladdening, glorious scene—
But night has fallen on the day,
And darkness on my dream.

Sometimes the blessed vision comes,
Of his brown, beautious hair,
I wake to fold him in my arms
But only clasp the air;
Then my weeping heart turns brooding
Upon its first despair.

I never saw his sinless soul
Save through his earthly form,
And hence it always seems to me
He feels the cold and storm,
Although I know he nestles close
In the Saviour's fold so warm.

Sauk Rapids, M. T., Thanksgiving day, 1856.

SAD OCCURRENAE.—A very sad accident occurred on the 12th inst, in the family of Lewis Hoag, of Farmington, N Y., which resulted in the death of a little daughter eight years of age. At the close of the afternoon school, she started for home in company with the other children, but having forgotten her dinner pail, returned. The door being fastened, she placed some blocks under the window, which she raised and attempted to climb in, when it fell across her head, killing her, no doubt, immediately. She was found hanging in this situation, with the neck broken, by two men who were passing soon after They tried to resuscitate her before calling any one, but life was extinct. The poor mother, who had buried another child a short time before, was nearly frantic with grief. After starting for school in the morning, the child ran back to bestow a smile and a kiss upon the mother—a last and beautiful memory of one she was soon to give back to Him who gave.—N. Y Tribune.

ADVICE TO YOUNG MEN.—Let the business of every one alone; attend to your own. Use every hour to advantage, and study to make even leisure hours useful. Think twice before you spend a shilling—remember you will have another to make for it. Buy low, sell fare and take care of the profits. Look over your books regularly, and if you find an error, trace it out. Should a stroke of misfortune come upon you in trade, retrench—work harder, but never fly from the track. Confront difficulties with unflinching perseverance, and they will disappear at last. Though you should even fall in the struggle you will be honored—but shrink and you will be despised.

CHINESE HUMOR.—The love of fun is not unknown amongst these serious-looking Chinamen. An English storekeeper, wishing to advertise his articles in the Chinese language, engaged a Chinaman to paint him a sign. It did not answer expecttation, for the only perceptible effect it had on the Chinese was to excite a grin. By a bribe he obtained a translation in English, and found it to be as follows:—"Don't buy anything here—store-keeper a rogue.

TO CLEAN SILK.—Pare and slice thin three washed Irish potatoes. Pour on them a half-pint of boiling water, and let it stand till cold. Strain the water, and add an equal quantity of pure alcohol.—Sponge the silk on the right side, and when dry iron it on the the wrong side.—The lightest colored silk may be cleansed and brightened by this process; also cloth, velvet, or crape.

THE BOWEN LIBEL SUIT.—The Jury in the case of Richard G. Fowles vs Henry C. Bowen brought in a vedict of $4,500 for plantiff. Defendant appealed.

GOING ABROAD.—GOV. MARCY will embark in a few days with his family, to pass a year in Europe.

A Thorn in Your Memory.

Bartley Bancroft was, in the general acceptation of the term, a kind-hearted man. His feelings were easily reached, and these gave usually, a ready impulse to his action. But quick feeling has in most cases a two-fold range, warning over kindly emotion, and now burning with sudden anger. Your so-called kind hearted men are often betrayed into cruel actions. But there is this merit about them; when the heat of passion subrides they repent, and sometimes seek to heal where they have wounded.

Such a man was Bartley Bancroft.—While a current of events ran smoothly along, the surface of his life reflected the unvarying sunshine, but a very little obstruction sufficed to ripple the waters, and then their aspect darkened.

One day Mr. Bancroft was sitting at his desk, with a pile of checks and bills before him, the sum of which he was taking preparatory to a deposit in the bank. It was late in the day for him to be figuring up his account; but he had usually heavy payments to make, and the amount nessary to lift his notes had been obtained with difficulty. Mr. Bancroft felt both hurried and worried, as his quick, nervous movements showed.

Just at this inauspicious moment a man entered the store, and walked quickly back to were Mr. Bancroft was sitting.

"Good day, Mr. Cartwright."

There was not a very cordial tone in the voice of Brancroft, although the other was a customor who had bought of his goods freely.

"Good day!" There was an embarrased air about Cartwright

"What can I do for you!" It was only a form of speech on the part of Bancroft, or rather a new form of saying, "Don't ask me for any such thing."

Now it happened that Cartwright was on that day in a very 'tight place' as it is called. It was two o'clock, and all of his efforts to get the full amount of money he needed had failed. Several notes had matured, and among them one of seven hundred dollars given to Bancroft. All but this he had succeeded in lifting; and now frightened at the aspect of things, he had come very reluctantly to his creditor, whom he only know as a kind hearted man, to state the extremity of his case, and ask a check for the amount of his note as a temporary loan.

"I am short of seven hundred dollars. Can you help me?"

"No!" was the answer, made in an emphatic tone, and with a knitting of the brows.

Bancroft noticed that his words seemed to stagger the applicant for money: he also noticed that he grew pale, and had a look of singular distress. But Bancroft was too much excited and annoyed for theses things to have upon him at the time any right influence.

"Then,' said Cartwright 'you will have to withdraw my note from the bank. I cannot lift it"

"I shall do no such thing,' angrily replied Bancroft. 'Take up your notes as I take up mine."

"I have failed in all my efforts to get money; and if you do not withdraw this note it will be protested" Mr. Cartwright said this very deliberately, and in a firm tone of voice, yet with a face like ashes.

"Very well!" was the unyielding answer, 'let it be protested then. If you can bear the operation, I think I can."

Coldly almost sneringly were these cruel words said. Cartwright urged his case no further, but turned away and went from the store of his unyielding creditor. Scarcely had he passed into the street before the better nature of Bancroft rose into ascendency, and he reflected his unkindness.

"William!" he called to a clerk.

The young man came instantly.

"Make this deposit, William; and at the same time withdraw Mr. Cartwright's note due to-day. Money's hard to get just now, and he is burdened with heavy payments. We must give him a helping hand. The merchant spoke kindly not fretfully. The clerk departed with the bank book, and the check of sufficient amount to lift the note that was, due.—Mr. Bancroft remained sitting at his desk, and from his attitude and the aspect of his countenance it was plain that self approval was not the pleasant state of mind in which he was indulging. The vail of a momentary angry excitement was removed, and now plainly before the eyes of his mind, stood his humbled and distressed debtor, toward whom not a single impulse of kind feeling had stirred. He tried to find a refuge from self-upbraidings in the fact he had done all his debtor asked—the note was withdrawn.

"Yes,' said a voice within him, 'you have cast a bone with curses, into the face of a beggar."

Mr. Brancroft started up hurriedly from his desk, walked the length of his store, returned and sat down again. A long deep sigh parted his lips.

"What could have possessed me that I so far forgot both duty and kindness? I would give twice seven hundred dollars to recall this act, were it possible to do so."

Drawing a sheet before him, Mr. Bancroft took up a pen and wrote—

MR. EDWARD CARTWRIGHT:

My Dear Sir,—

I have withdrawn your note. Forgive my rough unkindness. I was worried about money matters, and had but just made up my own bank account. We are not always proof against petty annoyances. They sometimes disturb more than larger things. Come in to-morrow, and we will arrange a renewal of the note, if you desire it, making the time to suit yourself.

Bancroft signed this apologetic letter and dispatched it forthwith. He felt more comfortable after that. Still he suffered some pain from having given pain, and no little humiliation for the unaimable weakness he had manifested.

"Did you see Carwright?" he inquired of the lad who had taken the note.

"No sir; he was'nt there," was answered.

"You left my note?"

"Yes sir." The boy looked agitated. He stood a moment, as if waiting for further questions, and then said.

"They were just driving him away in a carriage."

"What!" Bancroft tured pale.

"They said he had broken a blood-vesel."

Bancroft started to his feet with an exclamation of mingled surprise and pain.

"There was blood on the floor."

Brancoft groaned aloud. After reflecting for a moment he took up his hat and went out hurriedly. A walk of five minutes brought him to the store of Cartwright.

"What was the cause of this?' he asked of the one of the clerks. 'Did he fall? or was he lifting anything?"

"No,' was answered, 'he was sitting at his desk, resting his head upon his hands, when I heard him call in a quick voice, and turning round I saw the blood flowing from his mouth;"

"Had anything disturbed him?" asked Bancroft.

"Money has been hard to get during the past week,' the clerk answered 'and Cartwright's payments were unusually large. There is one note not lifted yet, and it is a few minutes of three o'clock." The clerk pointed to a bank notice lying on Cartwright's desk.

"That is withdrawn from the bank," said he.

"I am glad to hear of it,' replied the clerk; I think it was your note that did the harm. He had taken up others and went out two hours ago, after having been all the morning on the street to try and get the sum required to lift this one; but he failed: and the consequences were more than he had strength to look at calmly. He is a just man, and a kind-hearted man, Bancroft. We who live with him can bear that testimony."

Bancroft stood nearly motionless for a long time.

"Where does Cartwright live?" he inquired at length.

"At number.——Fifteenth Street."

To the dwelling of Cartwright he went in all haste. He found everything there to confirm his worst apprehensions. The hemorrage had been very profuse. Already so large a quantity of blood had been lost that the sick man was reduced to a state of insensibility, and still the bleeding continued. The family were of course, in the deepest distress. He saw Mrs. Cartwright for a moment the impression of her white, grief stricken face was transferred to a page in memory's book that no after event could dim or obliterate. A beautiful daughter, just on the verge of womanhood glided past him once, and her face of terror remained to haunt him for life. He saw the physician, and to his inquiries received no hopeful answers.

When Bancroft left the house of sorrow, he went forth almost stealthily, and with a feeling of guilt in his heart.

"My work! my work!" a voice within him kept repeating; and do what he would, he found it impossible to silence the accusing spirit.

"I can never forgive myself if he should die!' said Bancroft to himself. 'Oh! what evil is sometimes wrought by passion in an unguarded moment! Why did I not think before speaking?"

Alas! the dreaded evil came. Bancroft was at his store an hour earlier than usual on the next morning.

"Have you heard from Cartwright?" he inquired anxiously of a clerk.

"Yes sir."

"How is he?"

"Dead."

"Dead!"

Bancroft stepped back a pace or two as if a strong hand were bearing against him.

"Yes sir. He died at seven o'clock last evening so the papers says."

Bancroft sighed heavily; and then walking back to his desk, sat down, and remained in troubled thought for a long time. There was a single aspect of the case that gave him any relief, and this was the probable ignorance of any one but himself of the immediate cause of Cartwright's death. He had not it was presumed, mentioned the unfeeling repulse which he had received, when at the eleventh hour, and as a last resort, he had gone to one from whom he had confidently expected, not only kind consideration, but prompt relief; and so the secret had died with him.

Bancroft did not visit the house of mourning. He could not look upon the distress which his own conscience charged him with originating; but his heart was veiled in gloomy shadows.

There was no one to represent Cartwright in his business which had to be closed. An active, hard working merchant, he had succeeded in many disadvantages, in establishing a trade that, prosecuted with industry for a few years, would have given his family a moderate fortune But he was stricken down at an inauspicious moment. Serious losses occurred in the settlement of his affairs, and when all his debts were finally paid there was nothing over for his family

"Poor Mary Cartwright!" said Mrs Bancroft to her husband one day about six months after the death of Cartwright, 'I saw her at Mrs. Marvin's to day. She gives music lessons to her daughter Helen. How changed she was."

Bancroft made no reply, and his wife was in some doubt as to whether he had really heard her remark.

"She says that her mother has never been out of the house since her father's death."

Still Bancroft made no response. But the words did smite him! Ah! there was a thorn in his memory that time could never extract.

"There was not a dollar left for the family from poor Cartwright's estate!" said a fellow merchant.

"So I heard."

Bancroft answered with seeming indifference, but his heart quivered as if a blow had been given.

"It is said that the failure to raise money to lift one of his notes killed him!" said another.

"People will say almost anything," replied Bancroft, with assumed coldness.

Time moved steadily onward. The soothing spot on the surface of trade where Cartwright went down was obliterated by the onward-moving currents; and he was scarcely remembered in the busy circles where once his face was a familiar object.

But there was one man who could never thust aside his image; one man in whose memory his presence was a rankling thorn. Many times had he tried to pluck out this thorn by secret acts of kindness to the family of Cartwright. But the effort only seemed to make the anguish more intense; for the little he offered by stealth contrasted so poorly with the all sustaining life-deeds of a husband and father, that he was shamed back into impotence.

The case was hopeless. That single act of unkindness, so fatal in its consequences, was done forever. It had gone in its utmost reach; and there was no surgeon skilled well enough to extract the thorn it had left to rankle in his memory.

COSSACK, the horse Capt. Nolan rode when he was killed at Balaklave, (in the famous infamous charge,) is now the property of a gentleman of Cincinnati, and arrived in that city last week. He is a gray Arab Stallion, six years old and fourteen hands high. His groom who came with him is Edward Sleaper, one of the eleven survivors of a regiment of 900 British soldiers who landed in the Galipoli in Febuary 1854. He was at Alma, Balakalava, Inkermann, and the seige of Sebasto ol, and looks it said, as if he was made oak.

Incidents in the Life of a Felon.

The career of the youthful Ed Hawkins, who has recently been sentenced to death, in Estill county, Ky., for the murder of Land and Irvine, would furnish an exciting annal wherewith to embellish the lives of the Felons. He is only about twenty-two years of age, is robust and repossessing an air and feature well calculated to deceive ladies of susceptibility and verdancy. He has been married no less than half a dozen times to young and interesting females, and they are all yet living. At the time of his arrest he was promenading with a lady to whom he was engaged to be married, who was to have been the seventh victim to his arts. Young Hawkins is a grand-son of Tom Harper, the notorious brigand, who was prominant in the bloody scenes of early Kentucky history. About the 15th of March last the subject of this sketch stole a horse in Madison county, Kentucky. He had disposed of his small estate at Proctor, Owsley county, near which place he was apprehended by his unfortunate victims, Land and Irvin, on the 22nd of the same month. The prisoner having been conveyed some fifteen miles toward Estill county, Irvin had dismounted and given his horse to Hawkins, who rode by the side of Land. In an unguarded moment Hawkins caught Land's right hand, and reaching forward, drew his pistol (which was a self-cocking revolver) from his bosom. He immediately fired upon Irvin, who was walking by his side, the ball taking effect in the left temple and passing out through the lower jaw. Land and Hawkins then jumped or fell from their horses simultaneously; Land running some distance on his hands and feet.

Hawkins ran up to his second victim with his pistol presented, when Land raised his hands imploringly, invoking Hawkins not to shoot. Hawkins fired, however, and the shot took effect in Mr. Land's eye, killing him instantly. Irvin was still struggling in death when found a few minutes after the shooting. The murderer wandered about for several days after he had committed the double crime, and confesses that he rambled back to the scene of the encounter the following Tuesday, his path crossing the blood which had flowed from the wounds of his innocent young victims. He was finally traced to a cavern in the neighborhood, and was so closely pursued in his hiding-place, that he heard the conversation of his pursuers, and repeated a proposition made at the time to smoke him from his concealment. Discovering an opening into the cavern, he escaped to Ohio, whither he was pursued by some citizens of Estill county. They were close upon him at one time, when he eluded their vigilence by affecting to be a laborer, and proceeded to place some rails on a neighboring fence. His identity was so nearly recognised by one of the party that the remark was made by one of the pursuers to a companion that when they did find find Hawkins they would find a man that almost exactly resembled the individual laying the fence before them. They passed on, however, unconscious of the presece of the very individual whom they were so eagerly pursuing. He was subsequently identified and arrested near his father's residence, in Ohio, and conveyed to the Estill county jail. A popular meeting was then held, which appealed to Judge Pearl for an immediate trial of the prisoner. In accordance with the general wish the Judge convened his special term on the 27th ultimo In the meantime many citizens, who were impatient at the tardy administration of justice, informed Hawkins that if he should not be ready for trial at the appointed time, or should obtain a change of venue, they would themselves administer that summary justice which the nature of his crime demanded. But a jury was obtained without delay, and the young outlaw had a fair hearing. He had the benefit of the legal ability of four attorneys of distinction. On the 30th of March he was found guilty of murder in the first degree.—Louisville Democrat.

BAYARD TAYLOR in his last letter from the Arctic regions, says he was at first surpised to find the natives of the North so slow, indolent and improvident. We have an idea that the cold climate is bracing and stimulating agro, the further north you go the more active and energetic you find the people. But the touch of ice is like that of fire. The Tropics relax, the Pole benumbs, and the practical result as is the same in both cases.

Poetry.

ORIGINAL.

For the Tecumseh Herald.

Lines on seeing a Dead Rose.

O, not on gaudy garden bed,
Blest thou thy fragrant incense shed,
But o'er the loved and noble dead.

And every hour I'm thinking, then
The winds I love, are sweeping near,
Above that dear and pallid brow.

At night their music dies away,
Then rises like some mournful lay
Read on a sad and dreary day.

Such lays as hearts bereaved have said,
While vainly calling for our dead,
Who 'to the dark, cold grave are wed.

And yet sometimes it seems most sweet,
And for us, weary wanderers, meet,
To rest with roses at our feet.

O, friend beloved, such sleep is thine;
And still my waiting heart repines,
That death has made thee all divine.

To me time brings no sweet reprieve,
The love with all my life so wreathed,
How shall I ever cease to grieve!

I must not think of thee as dead,
But risen with our glorious head;
With no more pain or sin to dread.

Then rest in Christ, O, blessed rest,
His love and grace thy glorious dress,
Of God the everlasting guest.

Horrible Poisoning Case at Danville, Pennsylvania.

A few days since we published an item, stating that great excitement existed at Danville, Montour county, Pa., growing out of a horrible case of poisoning which lately transpired in that place. Since then, the Danville Democrat of Friday last has come to hand, from which we learn that the first case was in course of examination before Esquire Kitchen and a Corner's Jury during last week, and resulted in the committment of Wm. J. Clark, a puddler working at the Montour Rolling Mill, and a Mrs. Mary Twiggs.

The circumstances of the case as developed by the testimony, the Democrat states, are simply these:

On Tuesday, the 28th of April last, Mrs. Catharine Ann Clark, wife of the prisoner, returned from a visit to Philadelphia, and became sick a day or two after. She took some magnesia, and a neighboring female acquaintance gave her some oil with whisky. She continued to grow worse, when Dr. Simington was sent for, who treated the case as inflammation of the stomach and bowels, all of the symptoms indicating that disease. On Saturday evening, the 9th of May, she expired. During her illness she was principally nursed by her husband and the other prisoner, Mrs. Twiggs, who resided in the same house. Some mysterious conduct of these two nurses, their intimacy, &c., together with the unusual violence of Mrs. Clark's death—her vomiting, nervous twitchings, &c., aroused a suspicion of foul play among the neighbors, in consequence of which Clark and Mrs. Twiggs were arrested on last Monday, and a Coroner's Jury summoned by William Kitchen, Esq., to hold an inquest over the dead body. They caused a post mortem examination to be made by Doctors Magill, Strawbridge and Frick, who took out the stomach and a potion of the intestines. The body was much swollen about the face and very much discolored, features distorted, with open mouth, filled with a most offensive dark liquid; the abdomen was also much swollen and distended with gas, liver very much enlarged, and very dark, &c. The result of the partial analyzation of the contents of the stomach (which of course must be somewhat imperfect, for want of pure re-agents and apparatus,) the physicians all agree, justifies a strong suspicion of poisoning by arsenic, and Dr. Strawbridge gave it as his opinion that her death was caused by poison.

It was further ascertained, on examination, that Clark had bought at Chalfant & Huges' drug store, one ounce of arsenic about the beginning of April, one half ounce on or about Thursday of last week, and four grains of strychnine about the 1st of April, and four grains strychnine about four or five days after that—all for killing rats, as he alleged. Mrs. Twiggs also bought a quantity of arsenic at the same store from another clerk.

An infant child of Mrs. Clark, having been nursed by her up to within a few days of her death, is not expected to live, and shows all the symptoms of the same disease of which the mother died.

Mr. Twiggs, the husband of Mrs. T, the supposed paramour of Clark, died about a month ago, under very suspicious circumstances, complaining of great pain in the stomach and bowels, and nervous twitchings, vomiting, &c. He lived in the same house with Clark, and his body was disinterred on Thursday afternoon last, by direction of the District Attorney, Paul Leidy, Esq., and an inquest held over it by Coroner Elias Haas. The stomach was taken out by Drs. Simington and Schnitzler, for the purpose of having the contents analyzed.

Both Juries of inquest have been adjourned until Thursday, May 28, when they will meet to hear the result of a more thorough analyzation now in progress by several of our most eminent physicians.—The excitement in Danville is intense, and the verdicts of the juries are looked for with the greatest anxiety.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Retrenchment and Reform.

In alluding to this topic, we do not propose to inflict upon our readers a partizan, nor even a political essay, although these watch-words have often enough been assumed for the promotion of partizan purposes, and the promises which were thus held out to the people, just about as often been disregarded in the fulfilment. Nor is there any reason why this subject should not be well weighed, and carefully considered in connection with expenditures and administration of our national and State governments throughout all their departments and ramifications, but this has been so often heretofore alluded to that we have little inclination to dwell upon it now.

But the almost oppressive stringency of the times which cannot fail to have made itself seen and felt by every one, has seemed to us a fitting occasion to call the attention of the public to a consideration of the real causes of so wide spread pecuniary embarrassment in a community like ours. There may be sterile portions of the earth ever frowned upon by a frozen or a scorching sky, where there is some excuse for want, but with a genial climate and fertile soil like ours there is none at all.

All the embarrassment which we may ever be called upon to experience, even under the most unfortunate contingencies to which this favored land is or may be subject, we may rest assured are wholly self induced, and the result of our own extravagance. The experience of the world shows, that it matters not how profuse the gifts of nature may be, such is the infinity of human nature, that men will still anticipate beyond its power of bestowment, and find themselves embarrassed that those unreasonable anticipations are disappointed. There is always more squalid poverty and real suffering in those tropical climes where it is scarcely necessary to do more, than gather the fruits already furnished for the supply of human wants, than in the more sterile regions of the north, where preserving and continuous toil, are alone adequate to man's support.

It is not our own eyes, but the eyes of others, that fix the standard of our expenses, hence the necessity of common consent to any proposed measure of general retrenchment. It is extravagance not want that makes men poor. The most utter bankruptcy is usually among those who have been accustomed to receive any expend yearly incomes sufficient to supply all the actual wants of a township of men and women. It has been well said give a man a dollar a day and he will get along very well and live comfortably, but give him three dollars a day and nine out of ten will become bankrupt within a year.

At such a time as this men are apt to reflect upon the causes of a general embarrassment in the midst of plenty, and find reason to blame their own unthinking folly that it should exist at all, and to form many sensible resolves of a more cautious management for the future—but after all it will rest with those whose ability and means enables them to fix the standards of social and private expenditure to determine whether economy with all its independence and comfort, or extravagance with all its embarrassment and want, shall bless or curse the community in which they live. Their example others will follow, or at least attempt to follow, and until economy is held to be a public virtue, extravagance will continue to be a public curse.

CHILD BURNED TO DEATH.—The Ann Arbor Argus says an infant—an only child—daughter of Mr. Weinmann aged about 11 months, was burned to death on Monday afternoon, in that city. The mother was absent from the house, and the child asleep in the bed room. The mother requested the next door neighbor to step in and see to the child, and had been gone but a few minutes, when the woman complied with the request.—Approaching the house she heard the child's screams, and noticed smoke in the room. Hastening in she found the child's clothing and the bedding in flames. The child lived but an hour or two. The mother had been absent not more than ten minutes when the sad event occurred. No fire was in the apartment, and the only explanation that can be given of the accident is that the grand-father of the child, previous to leaving the house with the mother, visited the child's bed with a lighted pipe in his mouth.

The Pasha of Egypt has a bedstead of solid silver which weighs one ton. The mint value of it is about $40,000.

Execution of Return J. M. Ward.

HIS LAST WORDS.

Return J. M. Ward, who was convicted at the last term of the Court of Common Pleas, of the monstrous crime of killing his wife and destroying her body by fire was executed in the Lucas County Jail, in this city, yesterday. About fifty persons were present, among whom were several of the County Officers; prominent gentlemen of the county and city; reporters for the city papers; the spiritual advisers of Ward and others.

THE GALLOWS.

The gallows was erected in the north-west corner of the Jail. It is an ingeniously and strongly constructed frame, braced and bolted with iron and a platform so arranged that it will drop, with the quickness of a pistol shot from under the prisoner. The platform is 7 feet 4 ½ inches in height from the floor. The frame encompassing and holding the platform is 5 by 6 feet, and thus it exactly fills the space between the balcony or railed walk abode (with which it is level) and the outer wall of the Jail. The platform was carpeted, and the whole arrangement of the gallows, in a mechanical point of view was admirable.

WARD.

Ward slept little, if any, during Thursday night preceeding his execution. He was at times despondent, jocular, and prayerful. As the morning came he became deeply excited, but as the dread hour of his execution drew near, this excitement apparently calmed. He was ashy pale and fearfully weak, however; and his incherent conversation indicated plainly that the excitement of the night was succeeded by imbecillity or partial insanity.—He was shaved and his hair neatly brushed by a barber. While the barber was performing this labor, on the walk just outside of the doomed man's cell Ward recognized an acquaintance in the small crowd below, to whom he asked the question. 'Have you come to see me hung.—?' The gentlman replied in the affirmative Ward snapped his fingers in a facetious manner, and said: 'It's all right.' He then retired to his cell, where he prayed and bade farewell to those who were with him. His pulse, we learned was at this time as high as 130.

ON THE GALLOWS.

At 11 o'clock Ward was conducted from his cell by Sheriff Springer to the gallows, where he seated himself in one of the chairs that were on the platform.—His spiritual adviser, the Rev. Mr O'Connor, sat down beside him. Ward was dressed in pure white flowing robes, white pants and light slippers. He tremblingly grasped a cross in his right hand, and manifested the most intense emotion.

THE DEATH WARRANT.

Sheriff Springer, in a clear calm voice, now read the Death Warrant and the certified copy of the case from the Court.

WARD'S DYING SPEECH.

The Sheriff then informed the spectators that Ward would say a few words in regard to a confession contained in a book (issued from the Blade office yesterday morning,) that claimed to be an authentic history of his (Wards) life. (This book, we should here state, gives the details of two shocking murders which, it says, Ward is guilty of besides that of his wife, and assumes that Ward confessed these crimes to the gentleman who wrote the book.) Ward murmered incoherently for a few minutes, coughed and said "That confession is not true. I tell you the truth it is not true. God knows it is not true. (He then called wildly for the gentleman who wrote the 'Life,' and said he was very sorry he was not there. He then said the gentleman had deceived him.) They lie about me. I killed my wife, I confess that; that was awful. I killed no one else. I hope to meet you all in in Heaven—you will go there I hope. Oh, let me look back and see how Christ suffered for our sins! My heart was as black as any hat you ever saw, but I am now going home to Heaven. Yes—yes—to Heaven! But don't believe that confession. It is a lie. I hope no gentleman here will look at the book. It is all false.

I am going to my father and my mother! I am not much of a speaker gentlemen and can't talk as fine as some. But I hope God will hear me, I guess he will, any how. I hope you all have good feelings towards me. I hope this will be a warning to all not to commit murder.—[To Mr. Springer, with a laugh,] I will tell when I am ready. I think I've stood it pretty well, considering. I wish you would all pray for me. Won't somebody pray for me?" He then with great fervor repeated the confession of the Catholic Church, and prayed extemporaneously for several minutes, and then said;

"I think God will hear my prayer. I feel as if he would. I suppose a great many wonder how I became a Catholic.—I'll tell you: The Catholics came to me more genteel than others, and didn't want me to confess to murders I hadn't committed. Others wanted me to confess right off that I had killed two men, besides my wife. I didn't kill Mr. Hall.—I know about it, but I didn't kill him.—I was the the first man that found him.—I'm not going out of the world with a lie in my mouth, I can tell you. I wouldn't be likely to forget if I had killed two men—I don't think any one would. [He here directed his attention to the reporter of this paper, and said, with a slight laugh; "Give me something nice in tomorrow's paper,"] I don't consider myself a bad man, for I have always kept gentel company. I never stole any money at all and never gambled. I hope this will be a warning to all. Oh! I killed my wife and that's enough!—that's enough! I made up my mind that if I couldn't have her, noboby else should. I give my body to the preachers and my soal to God." He then commenced praying in rambling incherent manner. He arose to his feet, and remarked: 'I'm not afraid to die.'—Turning to the Sheriff, he said: You don't have so much trouble with this chap as they did with that fellow at Cleveland. He cut his throat' The white cap was drawn over his face by the Sheriff, he repeated a prayer after the Rev. Mr O'Connor and cried. 'Oh my God, I am thine!' when the fatal spring was touched, and he fell straightly down, and hung almost motionless. His limbs did not move, and he must have died easily. His pulse ceased to beat five minutes after the drop, and when he had swung thirty minutes he was pronounced dead by the physicians in attendance. The body was cut down placed in a coffin, and carried to the Catholic Church.

There was quite a crowd outside of Jail but no disturbance whatever was made.—The law was firmly and properly carried out by Sheriff Springer, and this community, we may venture to say, is assured that the perpetrator of a terrible crime—or crimes?—has been justly punished.—Toledo Commertial.

Negro Murdered in Ann Arbor.

We have received the following account of a murder in Ann Arbor, which we lay before our readers.

Ann Arbor, June 4, 1857.

MR. EDITOR:—There is considerable excitement in our city to-day, caused by the murder of a negro by the name of Henry Clay. The affair happened last night about ten o'clock, the perpetrator being his own father-in-law. It appears that they had had some difficulty previous to last evening, and the old man had been heard to threaten that he would put Henry out of the way. Last evening Clay was at the house of Prather (his father-in-law, and it is thought, got into some trouble with him, when the latter drew a loaded pistol, and, as the former was attempting to escape into the street, he shot him, the ball entering his right side and passing through the lungs and heart killing him immediately. Prater then cried "Murder!" and some gentlemen coming in, he exclaimed, "Here it is! I did it!" A crowd soon gathered around, and after some little resistance he was arrested, and is now in jail. The deceased was a whitewasher by trade, and was industrious and respected. The old gentleman takes it very coolly, and says they need not make so much noise about it—"it is only a nigger that's dead, and another will be dead soon." He contends that he was only ridding the community of its "pests." The man will be examined soon, when I will send you the result.

THE BRANCH RAILROAD.—The ties for the uncompleted portion of the road between this city and Napoleon are being delivered, and the iron for the track is also being sent forward to Adrian. We learn that the timber for the Depot in this city is all out and being framed at the Junction, and will be forwarded ready for erection and completion as soon as a "construction train" can run through.—The workman are grading between the "Fitch stand" and the river. The road will probably be opened by the 1st of July next without fail.—Jackson Citi.

THE WOOL MARKET.—By reference to our commercial column, it will be seen that the market for new wool has opened in fact; the prices paid here yesterday were about those of 1856, say from 30 to 35 cents. It is believed that those quotations will be sustained, notwithstanding the very apparent efforts to keep down prices. Manufacturers are sending money in small amounts, accompanying limited orders, with intimations that they shall not send more. This is merely feeling of the market, which cannot ultimtely be controlled by such influences.—Det. Advertiser June 13.

WASHINGTON, June 17.

The official documents show that no instructions were given by Secretary Dobbin to Commander Merwin or Capt. Davis, relative to General Walker and his men.

The language of Sec. Davis to Commander Merwin or Capt. Davis, was: It is prudent and for the interest of the country to have a man of war visit San Juan Del Sur.

The Navy Depatment have determined to build one of the five sloops of war by private contract, for which prepsals are soon to be issued.

Does any of our high livers ever eat much dinner? If any of our readers or cooks who tempt their appetites a little far, I will tell a secret that will lead to the enjoyment of their dinners without visit from that gouty old gentleman—dyspepsia. Take a dose of Dr. Sanford's Invigorator after eating and you will soon be troubled with indigestion; but on the contrary, before the next meal time appears the appetite will sharpen to appreciate kind of food. If the food rises or sours, Invigorator will fix the matter right at once for there is something in it that is, to a friend's expression, will let a man eat pine stones and take the Invigortor and they will digest. We have tried it in double dose on one or two occassions, for sick headache, it acts like a charm.

What we want to say to our readers is, if or old, is, if any thing ails you, go without delay and get a bottle of Dr. Sanford's Invigorator, and if it don't cure you come and see us, for we want to see one person that is not benefit.

Went early—waited several hours—nobody came—fell into a snooze—dreamed of the glorious 4 with its vicissitudes—was going to hear the oration, but accidently woke up, and thot we would'nt—got mad and passed the following resolutions:

No 1—That if any person had come to this meeting, they had forgot to stay.

No 2—That the 4th of July 1857, need not stop at Tecumseh.

No 3—That the Tecumseh Band go where they can get a call, be good boys, and come home "all right."

No 4—That mayor Hyde notify all those that don't want to celebrate, to work on the road the 4th.

On motion we resolved to publish the proceedings of this meeting in the Herald.

☞ The Methodist are holding a camp meeting six miles west of this village.

☞ Miss Loccy continues to supply the community with a choice stock of Millinery Goods.

☞ A horse took fright last evening near the Episcopal church, and tried to run with a carriage containing two daughters of Mrs Ream; fortunately the ladies had time to clear themselves from the carriage without injury.

☞ We give our readers the new time table of the Railroad, also the change of mails, at the head of this column.

☞ B. Preil is paying cash for Wool, delivered at the Tecumseh Clothing store

☞ We received three communications this week, K, L, and A B. We will not publish communications without knowing the writer. Two of these are puffs for large establishments, and rich men. We will publish them among the sending for effects a line, when we find out who will be so kind as to pay it.

☞ We have in press Dr. McCrum's Horseman's Friend, which can be had together with other valuable receipts, of David Henderson, Esq.

☞ J. C. Satterthwaite & Co., are receiving Wool to be Carded at the Waterloo mills of Monroe.

☞ Our exchanges from nearly every part of the State give cheering accounts of the growing wheat.

☞ John Cummins, is prepared to Insure property in reliable and Prompt Companies.

☞ Alf, please accept our thanks for Ice Cream, we received yesterday.

☞ Among the improvements we notice an excellent one nearly completed, opposite the Episcopal Church, which is intended to drain a miserable mud-pond and save the hill. Strong & Drew, Bills & Anderson, are finishing their stores as fast as possible; they intend to open their Fall Goods in them. The new sign of S. A Baldwin, hanging at the lower door of Metropolitan Hall, displays good taste.

☞ The rain of this week has spoiled about 40,000 Brick on the yard of Hicks & Brown; this will effect the progress of buildings contemplated by Richards, Hall and others, and try the 'grit' of Frank and Theoph.

☞ The furniture of the National Hotel, Washington city, valued at $100,000, is to be sold at auction. This is the result of the "poisoning," excitement.

☞ The Boston Council has appropriated $3,000 to pay for music on the common semi-weekly, throgh the warm season.

☞ John S. Dye, in the last number of his Wall Street Broker, gives a fac simile of the coin which Judas received for the betrayal of the Savior, with the history of the same. Dye has also had a set of dies made from the piece in his possession, so as to cast perfect copies of it. These copies he sells at $15 per hundred, or $8 for fifty. If cast in silver $1,50 per piece, or $12 per dozen.

☞ Dr. J. C. Ayer, the world renowned Chemist of New England, is now stopping at the Burnet House in this City. He has been making a tour of the Western States, with scientific associates, to investigate their remedial productions, or such as he can make remedial. We notice he has been received with marked distinction by our leading citizens of the West, and are rejoiced to find they have shown a proper estimate of the man who has done more for the relief of human ills than any other American.—Daily Journal Cincinnatti.

Dry Goods and Groceries,

and shall be receiving from week to week, through the Season, any Goods that may be wanted, from the Eastern Manufacturers, and Jobbers of

New York, Boston,

and Other Cities in the East.

I have tried during Nineteen Years of my life the various modes of doing business.

Firstly for Cash.
Secondly on Short Credit.
Thirdly, had to take Long Credit, Orders and Accounts.

Lastly, I have been compelled to wait for payment of Goods sold on Six Months time, long enough for a man to visit California, get rich, and return, before payment could be forced or coaxed.

Now I wish to say, to my numerous friends and patrons, that I am thoroughly convinced that the mode of buying goods on time is both injurious to the buyer and seller.

I will hereafter Sell for Read, pay, at such prices that will defy all competion in this Town, State, or the United States.

No one should buy a dollars worth of Goods without calling at the

Great Western Cash Store,

and get the prices. Some are so unfortunate as to be compelled to trade at long credit stores—to those I would say, Call and See what you can save by having the Ready or something as good, to use where you please.

Management of Root Crops.

Messrs. Editors.—The following plan of growing root crops may be new and useful to some of your readers.—Say five acres of ground are to be planted for winter use; prepare the ground early, plow deep reduce it to a good tilt; harrow, and use it when wanted. In the meantime the weeds will start, but one hot day with the horse hoe will kill them. The land is now ready for sowing, which do if possible before the rain. Mark out the rows regular two feet apart for rutabagas, beets, turnips, leas for carrots before sowing; the lot should be restored, and the seed mixed with sand or mold a few days to start it. Get the best seed at whatever price; rutabaga and turnip, will grow four or five years old if kept aright. Break a few seeds if dry, reject them, as no oil or vitality is left. But frequently the seed grows and is eaten off by the turnip fly in twenty hours, to obviate this, collect the weed in three or four heaps at different points over the lot; look for the wind to smoke your lot, by firing the heaps with the wind in the evening the smoke will settle and check them. Horse hoe as soon as you can see the rows. You must not wait for the weeds to grow, as the soil requires to be constantly worked in dry weather to keep your plants growing, and they will soon cover the space between the rows. A good horse hoe and seed drill can be got at the agricultural stores.

It is easier to have five acres of root averaging twenty five tuns per acre, than many of the half acre lots producing twenty five bushels and any quantity of weeds to be pulled by hand, on the broadcast plan. If the lot is not all planted before August, sow turnips (with three or four barrels of bone dust dust applied at the same time,) or else have cabbage plants in reserve to fill up with. One man and horse will work five acres per day well; one man can set out one acre with the hand hoe per day, six or eight inches apart in the rows; if not sown too thick this is all the hand labor to be done.—Scientific American.

Renovating Grass Lands.

The very best way, undoubtedly, to improve meadows or pastures that have become impoverish, is to plough them up, manure heavily, and seed them down again. If infested with daisies or other weeds they should be broken up in the fall, and planted with potatoes or other root crops for sveral years, and then laid down to grass.—If however, the land is low and wet, and weeds not very troublesome, they may be plowed thoroughly and in September sowed with grass seed.—In most cases a fair crop of hay will be realized the next season.

But when it is not convenient to pursue this thorough treatment, a good effect may be produced qy top-dressing. Spread a good layer of compost or rotten manure on the sward scarify it with a heavy harrow, and sow with a mixture of six quarts of Timothy and one half bushel each of red top and rye grass seed to the acre and follow with a light harrow to cover the seed. The manure should be applied quite early in the Spring so as to be washed in by the April rains. Where barn yard manure is not abundant, various other fertilizers may be used to advantage. Guano may be applied at the rate of two to three hundred pounds per acre, It should be mixed a week before it is wanted for use with dry vegetable loam, at the rate of four parts of loam to one of guano, and applied broadcast very early in the Spring. Lime (air slacked) is useful to cold clayey soils; it is death on mosses and sorrel. Muck and lime, mixed at the rate of five cords of the former to 7 bushels of the latter often produces surprising effects on worn out grass fields. Muck, mixed with unleached ashes, at the rate of five cords of the first to ten cords of the last, is nearly as good as barn yard manure. Where the land has long been devoted to pasturage, it is recomended to give a dressing of bone dust ten bushels to the acre. A mixture of plaster, ground bones and powdered charcoal has also been used with very gratifying results.

We hope our readers, in this matter, will try some of these plans, and send us reports of their success.

Sugar Prospect.

What are we to do? Sugar is selling now at almost prohibitory prices and the last advices leave room for but on one conclusion—that these rates will be advanced. The New Orleans Price Current of May 16th, says the arrivals of sugar continue of a very limited character, and that the crop is nearly exhausted, it being estimated that the whole stock in Louisiana does not exceed 1200 or 1500 hhds against about 25,000 at the same period last year. Under these circumstances, prices are very full in the limited transactions which take place the inquiry for consumption being almost wholly for the Louisiana product. The sales of the week in New Orleans including re sale from second hand sum up about 700 hhds, against 3,000 in the corresponding week last year.—The prospect is gloomy enough for we must wait five months before the next crop can come in.

The supply of foreign sugar offers the same limitation. Cuben sugars since the 8th of April have advanced two and a half cents per pound. And such are the anticipations of the scarcity in Cuba, that Cuban sugar speculators have gone into the New York market to buy and hold on Cuban account.

If the experiments making this season with the Chinese Sugar Cane should be successful, we may hope for some relief from the burdensome rates at which sugar now rules, with prospects of still greater pressure before the the summer is past. The spur of necessity has operated in producing what may be regarded as an extensive planting of the Sorghum this spring.—We hear of one gentleman in South Carolina who has one hundred acres planted with it. In Illinois, we hear of a score who have planted from one to fifteen acres and of a like number in Missourri. Of course, there are hundreds whom we do not hear of who are experimenting with this sugar cane, so that by next September we shall know what relief may be expected from that source. Mr. Hedges well known through his relation to the corn mill, agricultural steam boilers, &c., with others, is engaged in forcing a large quantity of the Chinese sugar cane in hot houses. It is expected it will be ready for the mill and the boiler early in July, when a thorough experiment will be made with the syrup to see whether granulated sugar of a marketable quality can be produced from it in sufficient quantities and at such a cost as will justify the future cultivation of the crop. We learn that quite a company of those interested in sugar will meet at Cincinnati in July, to witness the result of this experiment, as it will have a material effect in controlling the movements of those who will then be waiting on their field crops. If it should prove satisfactory, due preparations will be made by northern sugar growers for making sugar in the fall from such crops as they have. We hope soon to have some interesting information from Mr. Hedges in reference to this subject, which we shall then lay before our readers.—St. Louis Rep.

How to Cook Rhubarb.—It is a common error in cooking rhubarb to peel it. This should never be done, as the skin contains the aroma of the plant and is not at all fibrous, but cooks as readily and becomes pulpy. We have derived this information from a French cook of note, experience and skill. The same cook tells us that asparagus should be cut into pieces about three quarters of an inch long before cooking. It should be boiled with a piece of salt pork, and served up in the same manner as peas.

AYER'S

CHERRY PECTORAL,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Colds, Coughs, and Hoarseness.

Rehoboth, Mass., 20th Dec., 1855.

Dr. J. C. AYER: I do not hesitate to say the best remedy I have ever found for Colds, Hoarseness, Influenza, and the concomitant symptoms of a Cold, is your Cherry Pectoral. Its constant use in my practice and my family for the last seven years has shown it to possess superior virtues for the treatment of these complaints. EBEN KNIGHT, M. D.

A. B. MORTLEY, Esq., of Utica, N. Y., writes: "I have used your Pectoral myself and in my family ever since you invented it, and believe it the best medicine for its purpose ever put out. With a bad cold I should sooner pay twenty five dollars for a bottle than do without it, or take any other remedy."

Croup, Whooping Cough, Influenza.

Springfield, Miss., Feb. 7, 1856.

Brother Ayer: I will cheerfully certify your Pectoral is the best remedy we possess for the cure of Whooping Cough, Croup, and the chest diseases of children. We of your fraternity in the South appreciate your skill, and commend your medicine to our people.

HIRAM CONKLIN, M. D.

Amos Lee, Esq., Monterey, Ia., writes, 3d Jan., 1856: "I had a tedious Influenza, which confined me in doors six weeks; took many medicines without relief; finally tried your Pectoral by the advice of our clergyman. The first dose relieved the soreness in my throat and lungs; less than one half the bottle made me completely well. Your medicines are the cheapest as well as the best we can buy, and we esteem you, Doctor, and your remedies, as the poor man's friend."

Asthma or Phthisic, and Bronchitis.

West Manchester, Pa., Feb. 4, 1856.

Sir: Your Cherry Pectoral is performing marvellous cures in this section. It has relieved several from alarming symptoms of consumption, and is now curing a man who has labored under an affection of the lungs for the last forty years. HENRY L. PARKS, Merchant.

A. A. RAMSEY, M. D., Atkins, Monroe Co., Iowa, writes, Sept. 6, 1855: "During my practice of many years I have found nothing equal to your Cherry Pectoral for giving ease and relief in consumptive patients, or curing such as are curable."

We might add volumes of evidence, but the most convincing proof of the virtues of this remedy is found in its effects upon trial.

Consumption.

Probably no one remedy has ever been known which cured so many and such dangerous cases as this. Some no human aid can reach; but even to those the Cherry Pectoral affords relief and comfort.

Astor House, New York City, March 5, 1856

Doctor Ayer, Lowell: I feel it a duty and a pleasure to inform you what your Cherry Pectoral has done for my wife. She had been five months laboring under the dangerous symptoms of Consumption, from which no skill we could procure gave her much relief. She was steadily failing, until Dr. Strong, of this city, where we have come for advice, recommended a trial of your medicine. We bless his kindness, as we do your skill, for she has recovered from that day. She is not yet as strong as she used to be, but is free from her cough, and calls herself well.

Yours with gratitude and regard,

ORLANDO SHIRLEY, of Shirleyville.

Consumptives, do not despair till you have tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It is made by one of the best medical chemists in the world, and its cures all around us speak the high merits of its virtues.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills.

The sciences of Chemistry and Medicine have been taxed their utmost to produce this best, most perfect purgative which is known to man. Innumerable proofs are shown that these Pills have virtues which surpass in excellence the ordinary medicines, and that they will unprecedentedly upon the esteem of all men. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. Their penetrating properties stimulate the vital activities of the body, remove the obstructions of its organs, purify the blood, and expel disease. They purge out the foul humors which breed and grow distemper, stimulate sluggish or disordered organs into their natural action, and impart healthy tone with strength to the whole system. Not only do they cure the every-day complaints of every body, but also formidable and dangerous diseases that have baffled the best of human skill. While they produce powerful effects, they are at the same time, in diminished doses, the safest and best physic that can be employed for children. Being sugar-coated, they are pleasant to take, and being purely vegetable, are free from any risk of harm. Cures have been made which surpass belief were they not substantiated by men of such exalted position and character as to forbid the suspicion of untruth. Many eminent clergymen and physicians have lent their names to certify to the public the reliability of our remedies, while others have sent me the assurance of their conviction that any preparations can contribute immensely to the relief of my afflicted, suffering fellow men.

The Agent below named is pleased to furnish gratis my American Almanac, containing directions for their use and certificates of their cures, of the following complaints:—Costiveness, Bilious Complaints, Rheumatism, Dropsy, Heartburn, Headache arising from a foul Stomach, Nausea, Indigestion, Morbid inaction of the Bowels and Pain arising therefrom, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, all Bilerous and Cutaneous Diseases which require an evacuant Medicine, Scrofula or King's Evil. They also, by purifying the blood, and stimulating the system, cure many complaints which it would not be supposed they could reach, such as Deafness, Partial Blindness, Neuralgia and Nervous Irritability, Derangements of the Liver and Kidneys, Gout, and other kindred complaints arising from a low state of the body or obstruction of its functions.

Do not be put off by unprincipled dealers with some other pill they make more profit on. Ask for Ayer's Pills, and take nothing else. No other they can give you compares with this in its intrinsic value or curative powers. The sick want the best aid, there is for them, and they should have it.

Patent Medicines.

A Medicine that Never Debilitates.

DR. SANFORD'S

INVIGORATOR,

OR LIVER REMEDY.

HAS ALL THE GOOD QUALITIES OF A Purgative medicine, answering the purposes of any Cathartic without the debilitating effects experienced from most purgatives it acts slowly and gently, but surely, moving the bowels to carry off all the secreted matter, at the same time, stimulating the Liver to a proper performance of its functions.

The Invigorator cures the Sick Headache. Take one or two tea-spoonsful at each attack and it will soon disappear. For an overloaded stomache, or when food rises or sours, take the Invigorator after eating, and it will not prove disagreeable or oppressive. For Heartburn, Palpitation, or difficult breathing take a teaspoonful once or twice daily. For Loss of Appetite, Langa or Listlessness, the medicine is invaluable It will restore the appetite and make the food digest well.—Nightmare take a teaspoonful on retiring, and the demons of dream-land will all be fairies. After eating a heavy dinner, take a dose of Invigorator and it will relieve all oppression or fullness. The Invigorator is a Liver Remedy of unequalled virtue, acting directly on that organ, curing Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Bilious Attacks, Dysentery, Piles Worms, and all Female Obstructions, for which it has no equal.

We know there is nothing now before the American public, prepared with such skill by a scientific man, particularly for diseases of the Liver, as Dr. Sanford's Invigorator, or Liver Remedy. It has attained a reputation second to no other article in the world, simply because it rests on its own merit. To convince all by trial that it is all its proprietors claim it to be, if any of our readers are suffering from such diseases as are described in Dr. Sanford's advertisement, we know of no remedy that will so surely cure as the Invigorator.

There has lately been brought to our notice a medicine that seems to possess wonderful, curative and healing properties in diseases of the Liver, stomache and Digestive Organs. It came to us with so many testimonials in its favor that we have noted its effects in some of the worst cases of continual debility, caused by deranged liver, and in every instance the effect was to relieve or give a permanent cure. Dr. Sanford's Invigorator, or Liver remedy is what we refer to. We always have been credulous about cures by patent medicines, but we are convinced that this medicine, for family use, is not over rated by the host of recommendations it has. Our advice is, for all troubled with Indigestion, Debility or Bowel Complaint, to get a bottle and try it; our word for it, relief will be experienced.

Blessings To The Invalids who use Dr. Sanford's, Invigorator, for it will relieve them of their pains as soon as it is taken into their stomach. Pain and misery cannot exist where the Invigorator is used, for it will as surely drive them away, as daylight will banish darkness, of this there can be no doubt to those who try it, for it carries conviction with every dose taken. Another evidence is the thousands of certificates from those who use it or have been cured by it.—Try one bottle, if it does not benefit, then we are mistaken

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

The Blood furnishes the material of every tone muscle, gland and fibre in the human frame. When it comes to us from the kidneys, diseased, it necessarily produces disease. Holloway's Pills operate directly upon the elements of the stream of life, destroying the principle of disease and thus radically curing the malady, whether located in the nerves, the stomach, the liver, the bowels, the muscles, the skin, the brain, or any other part of the system.

USED THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

Holloway's Pills are equally efficacious in complaints common to the whole human race, and in disorders peculiar to certain climates and localities.

ALARMING DISORDERS.

Dyspepsia and derangement of the liver, the source of infirmity and suffering, and the cause of numerous fatalities, yield to these curatives in all cases, however aggravated, acting as a mild purgative, alterative and tonic: they relieve the bowels, purify the blood and invigorate the system and the constitution at the same time.

General Weakness—Nervous Complaints.

When all stimulants fail, the renovating and bracing properties of these Pills give firmness to the shaking nerves and enfeebled muscles of the victim of general debility.

DELICATE FEMALES.

All irregularities and ailments incident to the delicate and sensitive organs of the sex are removed or prevented by a few doses of these mild but infallible alteratives. No mother who regards her own or her children's health should fail to have them within her reach.

The London "Lancet," the London "Medical Review," and the most eminent of the faculty in Great Britain, France and Germany, have eulogized the Pills and their inventor.

DR. B. GASKILL'S

RESTORATIVE BALSAM,

This Balsam has a direct operation upon the lungs, removing all obstructions to a free circulation of the air and blood, increasing the expectoration of all obnoxious matter from the lungs, and producing a healthy perspiration, and by these means preventing a disposition to Consumption in those who are hereditarily disposed to it, and is particularly applicable to Coughs, Asthma, Difficulty of Breathing, Whooping Cough, &c.

As an external remedy, it has not its superior in the annals of medicine, for the cure of Burns, Bruises, Cuts, Inflamed Sores, Sore Throat, Croup, Ague in the Face and Breast, Chilblains, Rheumatic Pains, Ear Ache, and external applications are necessary, it will be found a valuable preparation. A certain and sovereign remedy for the Piles, to be used externally and internally.

DIRECTIONS.

For an adult, persons of strong constitution may commence with one-half tea-spoonful twice a day, morning and evening. For weak and feeble constitutions, those with weak stomachs, &c. should commence with but three or four drops twice or three times a day, increasing the quantity with returning health from day to day, up to a full dose, half a tea-spoonful. If it should produce weakness or faintness, take a less quantity, and not as frequent. For Inflamation in the Lungs, from one to one and a half tea-spoonful should be taken two or three times a day until inflamation ceases, then in smaller doses twice a day until restored. For Ague and Fever, two tea-spoonsful when the chill is coming on, and one tea-spoonful morning, noon and evening. For Croup or Sore Throat, Ague in the Face or Breast, it should be applied on flannel dipped in the Balsam, as warm as can be borne, and a speedy cure will be the result. Children should take less in proportion to their age. Prepared and sold, wholesale and retail, by

I'm Growing Old.

I'm growing old—'tis surely so;
And yet how short it seems,
Since I was a sportive child,
Enjoying childish dreams.

I cannot see the change that comes
With such an even pace,
I mark not when the wrinkles fall
Upon my fading face.

I know I'm old, and yet my heart
Is just as young and gay
As e'er it was before my locks
Of bright brown turned to gray.

I know these eyes to other eyes,
Look not so bright and glad
As once they looked: and yet 'tis not
Because my heart's more sad.

I never watched with purer joy
The floating clouds and glowing skies,
While glistening tears of rapture fill
These old and fading eyes.

And when I mark the check where once
The bright rose used to glow,
It grieves me not to see instead
The almond crown my brow

I've seen the flower grow old and pale,
And withered more than I;
I've seen it lose its every charm,
Then droop away and die.

And then I've seen it rise again,
Bright as the beaming sky,
And young and pure and beautiful—
And feel that so shall I.

Then what if I am growing old—
My heart is changeless still,
And God has given me enough
This loving heart to fill.

I love to see the sun go down,
And lengthening shadows throw
Along the ground, while o'er my head
The clouds in crimson glow.

I see, beyond these gorgeous clouds,
A country bright and fair,
Which needs no sun; God and the Lamb
Its lights and beauty are.

I seem to hear the wondrous song
Redeemed sinners sing;
And my heart leaps to join the throng
To praise the Heavenly King.

I seem to hear three cherub boys,
As hand in hand they go,
With golden curls and snowy wings,
Whose eyes with rapture glow.

When I was young I called them mine—
Now heaven's sweet ones are they,
But I shall claim my own again,
When I am called away.

Perhaps, when heaven's bright gate I've passed
They'll know from every other,
The one who gave them back to God,
And haste to call me mother.

O! I am glad I am growing old!
For every day I see,
Shall bring me one day nearer that
Bright day that has no end.

The Maiden's Resolve.

Oh! I'll tell you of a fellow,
Of a fellow I have seen,
Who is neither white nor yellow,
But is altogether green,
Then his name, it isn't charming,
For it is only common "Bill,"
And he wishes me to wed him,
But I hardly think I will.

He has told me of a cottage,
Of a cottage 'mong the trees,
And don't you think the gawkey
Trembled on his knees,
While the tears the fellow wasted,
Were enough to turn a mill,
And he begged me to accept him,
But I hardly think I will.

Oh he whispered of devotion,
Of devotion pure and deep,
But it seemed so very silly,
That I nearly fell asleep,
And he thinks it would be pleasant,
As we journey down the hill,
To go hand in hand together,
But I hardly think I will.

He was here last night to see me,
And he made so long a stay,
I began to think the blockhead,
Never meant to go away,
At the first I learned to hate him,
And I know I hate him still,
Yet he urges me to have him,
But I hardly think I will.

I am sure I wouldn't choose him,
But the very deuce is in it;
And he says if I refuse him
That he could not live a minute;
And you know the blessed Bible
Plainly says, "we must not kill,"
So I've thought the matter over,
And I rather think I will.

BRIGHT HOURS AND GLOOMY.—Ah, this beautiful world! I know not what to think of it. Sometimes it is all sunshine and gladness, and heaven itself lies not far off; and then it suddenly changes, and the clouds shut out the day. In the lives of all of us, there are bright days, when we feel as if we could take the great world in our arms. Then come gloomy hours, when the fire will not burn on our hearths, and all without and all within is dismal, cold and dark. Believe me, every heart hath its secret sorrows which the world knows not; and oft-times we call a man cold when he is only sad.—Longfellow.

From the Olive Branch.

Only a Husband.

BY T. S. ARTHUR.

'Thank you!' What a musical ring was in the voice of Mrs. Archer; what a pleasant light shone in her eyes. She had dropped a glove which a gentleman had lifted from the floor and placed in her hand.

Mr. Archer, the lady's husband, saw the little act of courtesy, and noticed its reward. He would have given almost anything for just such a musical 'thank you!'—for as bright a glance as she had thrown upon a stranger. Once, tones and glances like these, had been his reward for any little attentions he might happen to offer; now all the courtesies of life were withdrawn, and no matter what the act or its quality, his wife received it with cold indifference, singularly in contrast toward other men.

Was it a defect of love! Did Mrs. Archer really think more highly of other men, who showed her polite attentions, than she did of her husband? Sometimes a chafed feeling of impatience—sometimes of jealousy—and sometimes of mournful regret for sunnier days in the far away past, would trouble the husband sorely. But these were passed aside, or suffered to die for the lack of aliment and the dull, cold routine of every day life permitted to have its usual course.

On the occasion referred to above, Mr Archer and his wife were spending an evening at the house of a friend, where company had been invited. For days previously the countenance of Mrs. Archer had worn its usual dead calm, its imperturbed placidity—its matter of course aspect. She had talked with her husband in a kind of dead level tone and manner on all subjects that happened to come up, whether of first or third impotence. Or, if interest happened to rise into anything approaching enthusiasm, it was accompanied by something of sharpness that left on the mind of Archer, an uncomfortable feeling, as if he were blamed for something. And this he had been the wife's aspect even after she had doomed her company attire, and up to the moment when she had made her appearance among the guests of the friend to whose house she brought, tied up as it were in a closely compacted bundle, her smiles and courtesies for public dispensation.

As he had noticed on many occasions, so did Archer notice on this, the remarkable difference between his wife's home and company manners—between the treatment of her husband, and the treatment of other gentlemen who happened to enter into conversation with her, or offer any polite attention. The answer to their words always went forth from her lips wreathed with smiles and eyes sparkling with pleasures; to his words, from a cold placid mouth, and with half indifferent or averted glances. And yet Mrs. Archer was a faithful wife in all her dutiful relations; and in heart a loving wife to her husband. If smiles did not play in sunny circles over her countenance as in former times, she made the household smile with order and comfort, arranged and secured by her ever busy hands.—Her thoughts were no wandering truants to other and forbidden fields, but home guests; nor were they busy for herself, but for the children in whom her own life was bound up. It was not that love for her husband had grown dull—answering not as a mirror answereth the face—that her countenance did not light up at his coming—that she did not meet his word and attention with smiling glances Had she not given her heart when she gave him her hand—had she not promised to be a faithful wife? Was she not true to her relations? What more was required of her? It never entered her thoughts that her husband was weak enough to desire a daily repetition of the love glances with which, in the season of young love's ardor, her eyes were ever beaming when they turned upon his countenance.

And yet even so. It was because he hoped to live all his after life in the warmth of those glances, that he had wood and won her in the bright days of her young womanhood. And when he saw the light growing daily dimmer, and felt its genial warmth diminishing, a shadow fell upon his spirit. Very kind, very attentive the husband remained; but the wife became aware of a certain coldness towards herself that was far from being as pleasant as the love-like manner with which he had formerly treated her; and many times she sighed for the tones and glances she saw him give to other ladies, and he sighed for like tokens of interest from herself. Both were in error, and both in a certain sense do blame.

On the evening referred to, the contrast beween the manner of his wife to himself and to other men who showed her little attentions, was felt with more than usual distinctness by Archer. He was not jealous, for he knew the truth of her character; nor offended, but hurt. Al most any price would he have paid for the bright return another received for a simple act, the double of which on his part, would scarcely receive a passing notice.

Not long after this, Mr. Archer saw his wife drop her handkerchief Stepping forward, from where he stood talking with a lady, he lifted it from the floor and placed it in her hand His eyes were fixed upon her countenance, but she did not so much as return his look, nor make the slightest acknowledgement, merely receiving the handkerchief with a quiet indifference, in striking contrast with the way in which she had taken the glove from another's hand. Archer was disappointed The drooping flowers in his heart were pining for sunbeams, and he hoped for a few bright rays. But they were not given

A lady to whom Mrs. Archer had been introduced that evening, and who was a stranger to both herself and husband, sat by her side. They had been conversing with some animation, and were interested in each other. The lady was struck by the marked difference with which Mrs. Archer received these two slight attentions from different gentlemen. She had observed the polite response made when the glove was handed to its owner, and was pleased with the graceful manner of her new acquaintance. The cold, almost repulsive way in which she accepted the handkerchief, was, therefore, noticed the more distinctly. She saw that the individual who presented it, was disappointed if not hurt. Her indifference was natural.

'The gentleman is no favorite of yours,' she remarked.

'What gentleman?' Mrs. Archer looked curious.

'He who lifted your handkerchief just now.'

'Why do you think so?' There was a slightly amused expression in the corners of Mrs. Archer's mouth.

'You treat him very coldly—almost rudely, I thought—pardon me for saying so—quite differently from the way in which you treated the gentleman who picked up your glove a few minutes ago.'

A smile spread over the countenance of Mrs. Archer

'Oh, he's only my husband!' she made answer.

'The one who lifted the glove?'

'No—the one who gave me my handkerchief.'

'Only your husband!'

The lady spoke in tone that Mrs. Archer could not help feeling as a rebuke.

'He's my husband,' said she, 'and does not expect me to be particularly ceremonious—picked up my handkerchief as a thing of course. The other was a mere acquaintance, half a stranger in fact—and a mere formal acknowledgement of his polite attention could not have been omitted without rudeness.'

'I'm afraid, said lady guardedly, so as not to give offence, 'that some of us are scarcely just to our husbands in this matter of exterior courtesy. I know that I had not been; and a lesson I once received will never be forgotten.'

The eyes of Mrs. Archer turned, by a kind of instinct, towards her husband.—He was standing near a brilliant gas lamp, the light of which was falling clearly on his face His glance was upon the floor. There was a shadow on his countenance which the strong light instead of obliterating, made more distinctly visible—a look of disappointment, that was almost sad.

A new thought flashed into the mind of Mrs. Archer, and touched her with a feeling of tender self upbraiding. Was it possible that her husband had felt her manner as cold, or indifferent? Was it possible that he had noticed the blandness of her manner towards one who was but little less than a stranger, and contrasted it, as the lady had done, with her seeming indifference to himself? Her eyes was still on his face, when he lifted his own from the floor and turned them full upon her. They were dull and spiritless A little while they lingered upon her, and then moved slowly away, as if seeking some object pleasanter to look upon.—For some time Mrs. Archer continued gazing at her husband, but he did not look towards her again. She sighed, and letting her eyes fall, remained lost in thought for some moments. Then turning to the lady who sat by her side, and who was observing her closely, she said with a smile half forced—

'You have set me to thinking.'

'And in the right direction, I hope,' was frankly responded.

'I think so.'

Watching for a good opportunity, when he knew her husband was near her, and could not help noticing the fact, she purposely disarranged a light scarf that was laid over her shoulders. Instantly he stepped forward and drew it into place.

'Thank you, dear,' she said quickly, a smile on her lip, and pleasant light in her eye They were not counterfeit—but real; for Mrs. Archer truly loved her husband, and was pleased with any little attention at home or abroad. But he being 'only husband,' she had, like far too many others, omitted the form of acknowledgement, because he must know that the feeling was in her heart.

What a change came instantly into her husband's face! What a look of pleasant surprise, almost grateful in its expression Verily she had her reward? How tenderly he leaned towards her, and what a new meaning was in his tones, as he remarked on some topic of the hour And did not her heart leap up at those signs of the affection that was in his heart, still warm and lover like—still pleased with tokens of kindness, and ready to reward them twenty fold. Away back through many years, her thoughts went to the May time of their young love, when they lived in the light of each other's voices

The time seemed long to Mrs. Archer that they were required by etiquette to remain; she desired to be alone with her husband. Not so much was said by either as they walked homeward that night; but the hand of Mrs. Archer clung with closer pressure than usual to the arm of her husband—and the arm held the hand with a returning pressure firmly against a heart that beat with quicker pulsations.

Both time and place were soon propitious. They stood in their own chamber, looking with new expression in their eyes into each other's face.

'Dear husband! I love you, and I am proud of you! You are not like other men!' Mrs. Archer drew an arm around his neck, and laid her lips upon his lips.

'God bless you for those words!' he answered with a joyful thrill in his voice.

'You did not doubt my love?' she said, in half surprise

'No—no. But words and tokens of love are always grateful. You are dear to me as life. Let us keep the golden links that bind our hearts together, bright as the beginning, burnishing them daily with small sweet courtesies. Forgive me, if, in ought I have seemed cold or indifferent—there has been neither in my heart.'

Ever after, the golden links were kept bright, burnished daily by the small sweet courtesies of which the husband had spoken.

Putnam as a Spy.

Among the officers of the Revolutionary army, none, probably, possessed more originality that General Putnam, who was eccentric and fearless, blunt in his manners, the daring soldier without the polish of a gentleman. He might well be called the Marion of the North, though he disliked disguise, probably from the fact of his lisping, which was very apt to overthrow any trickery which he might have in view. At that time, a stronghold called Horseneck, some miles from New York, was in the hands of the British.—Putnam with a few sturdy patriots, were lurking in the vicinity, bent on driving them from the place. Tired of lurking in ambush, the men began to be impatient, and importuned the General with the question as to when they were to have a bout with the foe. One morning he made a speech something to the following effect, which convinced them that something was in the wind: "Fellows, you have been idle too long, and so has the ox-team and bag of corn. If I come back, I will let you know the particulars; if I should not, let them have it, by hookey."

He soon afterwards mounted his ox-cart, dressed as one of the commonest order of Yankee farmers, and was soon at Buck's tavern, which was in possession of the British troops. No sooner did the officers espy him than they began to question him as to his whereabouts and finding him a complete simpleton as they thought, they began to quiz him and threatened to seize his corn and fodder.—"How much do you ask for your whole concern?" asked, they. "For mercy's sake, gentlemen," replied the mock clodhopper, with the most deplorable look of entreaty, "only let me off and you shall have my hull team and load for nothing, and if that don't do, I'll give my word I'll return to-morrow, and pay you heartily for your kindness and condescension." "Well, said they, "we'll take your word. Leave the team and go over with us, and we won't require any bail for your appearance" Putnam gave up the team and sauntered about for an hour or so, gaining all the information he wished. He returned to his men and told them of the foe and the plan of attack. The morning came, and with it sallied out the gallant band The British were handled with rough hands, and when they surrendered to Gen Putnam, the clodhopper, he sarcastically remarked: "Gentlemen, I have have kept my word. I told you I would call and pay you for your kindness and condescension.—Revolutionary Reminiscences.

Distribution of the Primary School Fund for 1857.

The superintendent of Public Instruction has just completed the apportionment of the Primary School Money among the several counties in the State. Below we give a list of this apportionment, showing the number of children of the proper age to attend school, in the different counties, and the amount of money to which each county is entitled. The basis is just 53 cents to each scholar. We understand that the State Treasurer has directed the amount to be paid. The Superintendent of Public Instruction has been somewhat delayed in making the apportionment, in consequence of the inaccuracies in many of the returns. The amount of the school money is yearly increasing. The amount distributed in 1854 was about $70,000—in 1855 about $80,000—in 1856, $99,649 12, and this year it will be noticed, the amount is $106,669 38 The steady increase of the primary school fund will be a source of gratification to every friend of education:

PLEASE NOTICE.—A Western editor, a little tight, going home with his wife, on a beautiful moonlight night, his better half, more enthusiastic than himself cried out in rapture, "Oh John, please notice the moon." "Can't do it," was the reply, "short of te-te-ten cents a line."

THE WEATHER.—The following conversation between two jolly sons of the Green Isle, has a point to it:

"I say, Jimmy, did you ever see such a summer as this?"

"Faith and I have."

"When?"

"Last winter, be jabers."

Stray Thoughts.

Why is it that I'm sad to night,
That bitter tears my pale cheeks wet,
For I ever make things right,
—Do not they heart will not forget.

The bright pure smiles of hope,
In sunshine clouds are cast;
They cannot pierce the misty veil,
The memories of the past.

My heart they haunt like spectres grim,
They'll shut the light of day,
They'll furrow stamp upon my brow,
And cause my mind to stray.

But let alone my life pass here,
For prouder will I tread,
And teach my lips to wear a smile,
If grief my heart o'er spread.

Our Country.

Financial affairs in this country, in the opinion of many shrewd observers, are approaching a crisis. There has been a vast deal of speculation in Western lands and in unproductive railroad companies. Within the last three years, millions of dollars have been abstracted from the marts of more active trade, to invest in lands in the far west territories. The high rate of interest paid for capital engaged in these speculations, has attracted from every other section of the Union vast sums of money. All the more wealthy counties in this State, and so of almost all the other States in which reside money-making farmers, have sent forward all the cash they can conveniently spare, loaning it on new farms at from 20 to 30 per ct., per annum, and to make the investment doubly safe, as they supposed lending it in amounts of not more than a half or a fourth of the present market price of the security. Lenders seem to forget that current prices are the result of speculation—that when payment is demanded, and the land thrown on the market, as it is very sure to be, it will not command a fifth, probably a tenth, of the mortgage claim against it. Ten times as much land has been sold as will be wanted by actual settlers for years, and more city building lots have been dotted off on paper, and labeled with Chestnut street and Broadway prices, than will find builders and occupiers for at least half a century.—These speculations have absorbed millions of money, and piled up ten times as much of liabilities. Credit is stretched to its utmost tension. The banks here and elsewhere feel and see that these things are true, and know the fearful consequences of any further agravations of them.—How effectually to check this dangerous course of things, and not immediately produce a financial convulsion, we know is a source of anxious solicitude with many gentlemen prominently connected with the actual financial business of the country. The land speculation in Illinois, Indiana and Michigan, some 15 or 20 years ago, should not be lost sight of by operators now in the newer fields offered by Kansas, Nebraska, &c. Then, as now, almost fabulous prices were obtained.—Failures were innumerable, and the am't of money lost and promises dissipated, carried ruin and misery to thousands.—It is likely to be so now. Like causes produce like effects, and the result of speculation and idleness was never other than bankruptcy and ruin. The remedy is a little more reality and less fiction—more work and less speculation. There are too many consumers for the number of producers. We want more tillers of the soil. Wheat, potatoes, beef, pork, sugar, and almost every commodity that we eat, have been run up two prices.—Speculators eat as well as producers, but speculators are not content with simply eating what others produce; they must needs have facilities—bank accommodations, more banks and more paper money. These add to the volume of currency, depreciate its value, and correspondingly increase prices. As a first step towards retrenchment, and a more reliable state of affairs, let us have no more banks—new banks just now are not only an evil, but a very doubtful speculation.—Philadelphia Ledger.

☞ Jefferson Randall, who had been sent from Rockingham county, Va., by a vigilance committee for numerous alledged lawless acts, such as burning barns, robberies, and planning the assassination of certain prominent citizens in that county, returned there on Friday last. He was immediately arrested by the vigilance committee, and held in custody to see if he could not be surrendered into the hands of the law on legal proof. Not being able to accomplish that object, the committee on Tuesday took him out and hung him on a tree until he was dead.—The Richmond Dispatch states that Randall was a man of extraordinary physical strength, and when captured was armed with a gun and pistol, but did not offer any resistance to his captors. Jones, a son in law of Randall, was also in the custody of the committee, and was to have been hung on Wednesday.

THURSDAY, JUNE 25, 1857.

Rowdyism and Filibustering.

From the developments of the last few years, it would seem that the real danger to our Republican Government, and to the permanency of our free institutions, is to be mostly apprehended from a too great license of individual freedom, resulting in lawlessness and anarchy.

That the tendency has of late been strongly in this direction no one can for a moment doubt, while at the same time the imminent danger most likely to result therefrom, is we fear for the most part overlooked or disregarded. We look to our sympathies and feelings, rather than to our judgement to determine our approval of disapproval of any enterprise, while in the spirit of true philanthropy and true citizenship, we owe it ourselves, and to our county, to set our face as a flint against any enterprise no matter how desirable or how dear its success may be to us, which looks for triumph in overriding the peaceful and legitimate enactments and execution of civil law.

The events recently transpiring in the city of New York in the conflict betwixt the municipal and State authorities, which which had nearly involved the whole of that great city of the nation in bloodshed, is a practical lesson, how unsafe, as well as criminal it is, in any case, except in absolute defence of life and limb, to appeal to brute force, instead of the sure protection of civil law.

The mob at Seguine's Point against the action of the New York Quarrantine commissioners, are only another indication of the strong tendency of the popular mind towards anarchy and insurrection.

Now it is not so much that there is more lawlessness and violence in the land, as that the public at large look upon these things with more complacency and when called forth in a direction corresponding with their sympathies, afford them in fact a tacit encouragement and impunity, that that they are increasing upon us with such startling frequency and recklessness.

We forget what civil anarchy is, and how certain it is to overtide every right, and lay waste every fireside, and run riot in crime and blood, when we allow ourselves to look upon such outbreaks as these with any other feelings than those of horror and detestation. If we have received from our country any protection, and from her institutions any enjoyment or advantage—if we owe to our laws the the peace and prosperity which have thus far been ensured to us, if we esteem it any advantage or any honor to have enrolled ourselves as citizens of, (with all her faults) the freest and justest government upon the face of the earth, then do we owe it to ourselves, and to our country to stand by her laws at all times, and and under all emergencies, and to count that man our enemy, and that cause only treason, which any way proposes to override or disregard them.

This is the only safe, and more than that, it is the only honorable course. If our laws are any of them unequal, or unjust, as many of them may no doubt be, for all human institutions are imperfect, then it is the peculiar privilege of an American citizen, that there is open to him a peaceful and legitimate means for amending them. But while they stand, it is at all times, alike our duty and our privilege to stand by them as they are, alike claiming for protection for ourselves and guaranteeing that protection to others. We must remember that there is and can be no half-way course in this matter, either law and peace must prevail, or anarchy and violence are all that is all that is left to take their place.

Every smile of encouragement, every word of approbation, even the lethargy of indifference, towards these scenes of lawless violence that are so frequently disgracing, and disturbing society with terror and alarm, are not only treason to the law, but are direct agencies, in bringing upon us a re-enactment of that reign of terror, which robed France in humiliation and mourning and by its startling ferocity drove back the trembling nations of Europe to all the humiliation of abject despotism, rather than trust to the unbridled extravagance of a freedom that has proved so insatiate in cruelty.

PRESIDENT TAPPAN.—We see by the New York papers that the Trustees of the Columbian College in New York city are endeavoring to rob our State University of her President, in which we hope for a most utter failure—the best wish we can offer under the circumstances. The Post says: "The Professorship of Mental Philosophy is not yet filled, but Chancellor Tappan, of the University of Michigan is spoken of as the probable incumbent.—The salaries of all the Professors are fixed at four thousand dollars per annum."

The wheat in this county looks promising

For the Tecumseh Herald.

Perfection of Mental Vigor.

We may safely say, there are three things which cause perfection in man,—nature, reason, use. Reason I call discipline; use, exercise; and if any one of these are wanting, certainly there is also wanting perfection; for nature can avail nothing without discipline, and discipline acting upon any other grounds than that of nature, is more feeble. If nature play not be part in vain is labor.

Nature should be studied: I am well aware that there are some who deem it it unnecessary, whose superficial knowledge of mankind, show forth, not nature but her corruptions,—and imitations of her based upon pride. Nature is a great, fixed, unchangeable study, suited for all classes, and all conditions of men; it expands itself into all occupations, and is attained as easily by the humble as the great. Yet without reason or discipline, the dark vail of skepticism, which obscures very many truths, will thwart all natures great designs, and leave the mind of man in its primitive childhood. Indeed that vigor with which the mind dives deep into the hidden laborynths of concealed knowledge, seeks out and applys to use great moral truths must be guided by reason, exercised by discipline, and founded on nature, otherwise we have an imperfection. The phenticisms which have such a strong hold on the popular mind at the present day, is an instance in which irrational minds wander; and in those wanderings many times produce most dire effects. The insanity with which mortal man rush headlong, regardless of the well being of future ages, seems to show the training of mind to be selfish, and the vulgarism "look out for number one" to be the supermost of human thought. All exposes a dispated and perverse education of the mental faculties.

There are many ways in which this dispation may be produced, ways into which the young are apt to fall.

Perfection of mental vigor is not to be achieved by becoming a recluse, and pouring over musty volumes from one years end to another, not by any means, for that would be a taxing of the mind to heavily, and worn out with it own labor it would sink in to that legarthy which would weaken it ever after. Bodily exercise is as indispensable to the growth of the mind as it is to the growth of the body. "A sound mind in a sound body is the thing to be sought."

The exercise of the mental faculties, should be for the happiness of the soul, and yet not at the expense of the physical system. To work the mind too much or to work it not enough are sins equaly great; nevertheless there are very many who are guilty, for among the vast number which attend our schools, and colleges, there are but two classes, viz., those who tax the mind too much, and those who tax it too little. There should be reason used in all things, for we were created thinking, rational beings. The mind should grow in strength, and cannot be expected to use its greatest power in its childhood, nor can it come to perfection at once—but as it takes time for the majestic oak to attain its size, and strength, so is it with the mind; It should be pruned and trained to aid its healthy growth. Nature should be its study: Reason its teacher; and exercise its pastime, then we may hope for Perfection of Mental Vigor. ALEX

A CONFIDENCE MAN REBUKED.—A confidence man visited Worcester Mass., last week, with a lady. They were booked at the Bay State House as Mr. Thompson and Lady, but he gave out privately that he was no less a personage than Major R. Thompson of the British Army, and that he was in this country to make a large cantract for fire arms of our approved pattern. He had all the necessary documents with him and apparently armed with authority endeavored to negociate with Col. Asa Waters, of Millbury, for $250,000 worte of Joslyn's breech-loading rifles. Col. Waters showed his papers to a legal gentleman, who pronounced them genuine, and things went on nicely with him till he was introduced to Mr. B. F. Joslyn, who at once recognized him as the well known confidence man, Gulpin, who, under the title of Lieut. George Marmaduke Reeves, had been trying to make similar contracts in New York and Worcester, a year or two ago. When informed he was known, Gulpin begged to be let off, and having left an over coat as security for the hotel bill, he and his companion sneaked of out town Thursday evening, on the freight train for Springfield, leaving two trunks at the depot, on which fifty cents were due for freight.—Boston Herald.

THE FINAL ARCTIC SEARCH.—The vessel selected by Lady Franklin for this enteprise is a new screw steam yatch, the Fox, schooner rigged, and diagonally planked, built for Sir Richard Sutton and now lying at Aberdeen. This vessel is to be strengthened for the service she is now to enter upon, and at once got ready for sea. She sails about the first of June and will be commanded by Capt. McClintock of the Royal Navy, who has already conducted one expedition in search of Sir John Franklin.

Public Meeting in Raisin.

At a public meeting of the inhabitants of the township of Raisin, held at the Brick Church, June 9th, 1857, for the purpose of concerting measures for the relief of the sufferers in Northern Mich., Eli Chatfield was called to the Chair, and H. Raymond appointed Secretary.

The object of the meeting having been stated, on motion of D. B. Raymond, a committee of five were chosen to visit the several portions of the township, to solicit subscriptions for the furtherance of the object of this meeting.

The following gentlemen were chosen said committee: O. Roges, H. Raymond, T. J. Faxon, E. H. Holdridge and Jeremiah Westgate. Authority was conferred upon the committee to fil any vacancies, provided absence or inability shall prevent any from acting.

Resolved, That the committee act promptly and report their doings at the next meeting to which this shall adjourn. On motion, adjourned to one week from Thursday next at 6 o'clock P. M. Eli Chatfield, Ch'n. H. Raymond Raisin June 9th 1847. Sec'y.

Raisin, June 18.

Met pursuant to adjournment. Meeting called to order by the Chairman,—On motion, the report of the committee was read by the Sec'y and John Richard and Richard S. Horton appointed a committee to see to the packing and forwarding the contributions to the General Distributing committee at Detroit.

On motion, the Sec'y. was requested to make out a report of the proceedings for publication in the Herald.

Putnam's Monthly.

Jackson and Lansing Railroad.

We can now set this project down as a fixed fact—and our long deferred hopes now sure of accomplishment. All the local and other interests are now combined; every stumbling block is removed out of the way, and the early completion of the line is rendered a certainty.

At the meeting on Wednesday evening last, it was determined to throw out the old Grand River Valley Charter, under which we have thus far operated, and to organize under the General Railroad law, the Jackson and Lansing Railroad Co.' This action was rendered necessary from certain prejudices which existed against the old company and the utter impossibility of uniting the public confidence in it and some of its operators.

The committee appointed at the previous meeting submitted a report, which was read and adopted by the meeting, and ordered published in the city papers.

The meeting was ably addressed by Messrs Loomis, Root, Blair, Beebe and Gridley, after which the books were opened, and about $12,000 of stock subscribed on the spot, though the number of capitalists present was very limited.

Propositions were received from ten citizens of Leshe agreeing to build at least four miles of road between that place and this, and a proportionate subscription for the other side of the village. We understand that the people of Mason and Lansing are also moving in the measure, and will subscribe their full quota of stock in the enterprise.

An efficient committee were appointed to procure subscriptions and take such other measures as they might think advisable to promote the success of the undertaking.—Jim. Citizen

RELICS OF THE UNITED STATES BANK.—It is stated that all the old books papers, drafts, notes of hand, &c., formerly the property of the United States Bank to the amount of forty tons, have been purchased by Messrs Bottom & Co, of Trenton, and are to be ground up and converted into paper. The True American of that city says ten tons of this vast amount of correspondence, autograph letters of the first statesmen, politicians, and financial men of this and other countries. Drafts upon the Rothchilds for hundreds of thousands of dollars, certificates of stock transfered to leading bankers in Europe, checks and drafts from Clay, Webster, Adams, Calhoun, Crockett, Cass, Houston, &c., &c., all lie scattered ready for the important transformation into clean, unsullied white paper. This huge mass of books and papers strikes the visiter with astonishment. A fain idea may be formed of the colossal character of the institution which at one time occupied so important a part in the history of the country.

PANA, Ill. June 15.

The terrible storm at this place on Saturday 13th, appears to have been much more destructive than those in New York. It levelled 25 houses and damaged 50 others. The new Presbyterian Church was removed from its foundation, but not wholly destroyed. Strong men stood aghast; women and children screamed with terror. Many were hurled headlong to the ground, and rolled forward by the merciless element.

Our pleasant town is in a sad plight—battered torn and destroyed. Many of our people are left wholly destitute, escaping from their dwellings with nothing but the few clothes upon their bodies, all their household furniture and other property having been swept away or destroyed by the atmospheric deluge."

The value of property destroyed is variously estimated at fifty to one hundred thousand dollars.

"The air was dark when the tornado broke upon us, and the scene was terrific while the storm lasted."

General News.

NEW YORK, June 20.

The Collins steamer Atlantic sailed for Liverpool to day, with 126 passengers and $1,128,581 in specie.

The steamship Vanderbilt left at the same hour for Southampton and Havre, with 150 passengers and $85,000 in specie.

The screw steamer New York also left for Glascow.

The steamer Star of the West will sail at 2 o'clock for Aspinwall with California mails and the usual compliment of passengers.

The Washington correspondence of the Herald of the 19th says, a letter has been received by a person of high standing here, from a gentleman in Havana who has access to sources of information which says that the letters sent thence by the last steamer for Spain will reach Madrid in time; that the Spanish Government will not make any kind of arrangement with the Government of President Comfort; and that Santa Anna offers to make a treaty.

PROVIDENCE, R. I. June 19.

The fifth trial to elect a Mayor has resulted in the choice of Wm. M. Rodman, the American candidate, by 983 majority over all. Every ward gives him a majority.

LOUISVILLE, June 19.

The trial of Agricultural implements for prizes of National Agricultural Society, takes place at Syracuse, N. Y., July 13.

QUEBEC, June 19.

The Governor General of Canada and suite, left for England by the steamer North America.

NEW YORK, June 19.

By the arrival of the Steamship Black Warrior, Havana dates to the 15th, are recieved.

Santa Anna had not arrived at Havana. The Spanish fleet intended for the Mexican difficulty is said to near the Island and soldiers are arriving by vessels from Spain.

The steamer Kangaroo from Liverpool June 3d, arrived at this port last night.

BOSTON, June 20.

The committee of merchants and ship owners appointed at the recent meeting to consider the subject, reported in favor of abolishing advance wages to Seamen.—The rule takes effect on the 1st of July.

AUGUSTA, GA., June 19.

The Hon. F. M. Pickens, of South Carolina, has positively declined the mission to Russia. He will probably be returned to the U. S. Senate, vice Mr. Butler, deceased.

ALBANY, June 22.

As Walker R. Clough, Sheriff Brayton, with two deputies, and others were proceeding on Saturday afternoon to make sale of property in the town of Berne twenty two miles from this city, in the Anti Rent district, they were fired upon by some person in Ambush. They immediately gave chase, and arrested a young man named Shultz, a son of the person whose property was to be sold, and found him with a gun. One of his shots passed through the hat of one of the Sheriff's party. No one was injured.—The sale was then conclued without any further trouble.

ST. JOHNS, N. F. June 22.

The following dispatch was received at the telegraph office 21 Wall street at 10-34 A. M.—A fishing smack, which arrived here this morning, reports seeing yesterday a large steamer, heading west, supposed to be the Persia. If this supposition is correct, she will be in New York on Tuesday or Wednesday afternoon.

NEW YORK, June 22.

A terrific hail storm visited the city of Washington yesterday afternoon, and caused an immense destruction of glass and sky lights, conservatories, windows, &c. Trees were stripped of their foiliage and grain, vegetables, &c, beaten to the earth.

The storm was about twelve miles in breadth, and extended from the south west to the north east.

Some of the hail stones were so large as to weigh 5 or 6 ounces. It is feared that the crops throughout its course are much injured if not entirely ruined.

Detroit, June 22.

A mob of 5 or 600 hundred made an onset, Saturday night on the houses of ill fame in the upper part of the city, burning three, demolishing two, and driving the inmates from another.

A large crowd gathering compelled the rioters to desist. One person was stabbed. No arrests were made.

PITTSBURG, June 22.

Yesterday the paper mill of James Howard, Manchester, was burned to the ground, together with all its contents.—It was the work an incendiary. Loss $25,000. Insured $10,000 in the Pittsburg offices.

ALBANY, June 22.

Only 5 Judges present in the Court of Appeals. It is still thought probable a decission will be rendered to-morrow in the police case.

Arrival of the Persia.

NEW YORK, June 23.

The steamer Asia arrived at Liverpool on the 8th inst.

The steamer Queen of the South arrived out on the 10th.

The steamers Arago and City of Manchester arrived out on the 11th, and the Circassian on the 12th.

The Jason sailed from Southampton for New York on the 11th.

GREAT BRITAIN.—The proceedings of Parliament possess little more than local interest.

In the House of Commons, Lord Palmerston announced that the French Government had given no opportunity for remonstrance in regard to the firing upon a British merchant vessel by a French war schooner at Belle Isle, but had promptly expressed regret at the unjustifiable occurrence, and had dismissed the officer who ordered the shot to be fired.

The Oath Bill of the Government, intended for the admission of Jews into Parliament, was read a second time without discussion, although Sir F. Theriger announce his intention of moving in Committee that the existing objectionable sentence should be inquired into.

Several members, headed by the Duke of Norfolk, have risen in opposition to the measure, and resolved to support amendments to the bill in committee embodying the views of the Catholics, and memoralize Parliament to frame an oath for all classes, irrespective of creed. It was feared that this movement would jeopardize the bill, and some of the Catholics opposed the interference.

A numerously attended meeting had been held in Liverpool, for the purpose of helping on the movement to obtain an increased supply of cotton. Speeches were made and resolutions adopted.

Messrs. Newell & Co., of Birkenhead, have completed their half of the Atlantic cable. Experiments through it had demonstrated in the most satisfactory manner that telegraphic communications along the whole length of the wire was perfect.

It is rumored Sir W. P. Williams the hero of Kars is to be promoted to the Governorship of Malta.

FRANCE.—The Election movement is the all pervading topic in French politics.

Official influence in all shapes was being exerted in favor of the Government candidate.

The King of Bavaria has quitted Paris. The political object of his visit had reference, it was supposed, to the succession to the crown of Greece.

The returns of the Bank of France are favorable and a reduction of the rate of discout is looked for.

Harvest prospects continue most satisfactory.

SWITZERLAND.—The Federal Assembly met on the 9th.

The treaty of Peace was referred to a committee—the Federal Council having recommended its satisfaction.

PERSIA.—The text of the Treaty of Peace in Persia recognizes the independence of Herat and the people of Afghanistan, and the British government is to be the arbitrator, in case of any difference between these Governments. Ample provision is made for the satisfaction of British honor.

ST. LOUIS, June 22.

The Republican learns that the counties of Doniphan, Atchison, Leavenworth, Johnson, Jefferson, Shawnee, and Douglass, in Kansas, elected 41 democratic delegates to the constitutional convention.

A letter to the Democrat says the vote of Leavenworth was 225. The whole county will not exceed 500. Jefferson county gives 50, Douglass, 75, and Franklin, so far as heard from, gives 30.

PHILADELPHIA, June 22.

Collector Baker has made his appointments in the Custom House, including several old Whigs. There is, in consequence, a good deal of dissatisfaction among the faithful democrats.

CHARLESTOWN, June 22.

Chas Cowlan, a clerk in the Post Office here, has been arrested for robbing letters containg $5000. He has acknowledged his guilt. About $2,200 has been recovered.

ELMIRA, June 19.

The storm of the last two days has been unusually severe. The streams are very much swollen, and the houses on the banks are considerably injured. A freight train was literally blown off between this place and Corning, yesterday, by a gust of wind with rain. No persons were injured.

The travel by the Erie Rail Road is obstructed by the washing away of banks.

The weather is now clear and the streams are subsiding. The Rail Road will be in running order to-morrow.

The number of seamen of all nations is estimated at nearly two millions. The commercial marine throughout the world was stated in the year 1855 to embrace about 15,000,000 tons. Of this amount Great Britain has 5,000,000; the U. S., 5,200,000; and other nations of the earth—in Asia and Europe—had the residue.

LITERARY NOTICES.

The July No. of Putnam is duly received. Its three first articles, A Season at the White Mountains, The Embroidered Handkorchief, and the Old Museum, are liberally illustrated, the former with some very fine cuts. Witching times is also continued, The Baby Exterminator, The Last French Novel, Ideals in Modern Fiction, Female Cooperage, are also among its articles worthy of note. It is published monthly by Messrs. Miller and Curtis, No. 321 Broadway, N. Y. Terms $3 per annum. Household Words and School Fellow are also published by the same house, but for some reason failed to arrive with Putnam, probably stolen or miscarried.

Waymark's in the Wilderness.

The June No. of this religious and literary Magazine is promptly received.—Among its articles worthy of note are the Typical Nation and its Institutions, by James Inglis. The Pharisees and Sadducees by John Hogg, and Chapters from an unpublished Biography, by James Inglis. Published by Inglis & Jones, St. Louis, Mo. Terms Two Dollars per annum.

DIED

SUDDEN DEATH.—It is with no ordinary feelings of sorrow that we announce the death of DAVID BIRKELL, the Chief Clerk in the Freight Department of the Michigan Southern Road. He died this morning at 4 o'clock, after a brief confinement to his house of four days. His disease was congestive fever. In consequence of a pressure in his department, more labor had been devolved on him than he was accustomed to perform, and he was, for this reason, detained at his office when he ought to have been at rest; and the disease thus obtained a hold which contributed greatly to its fatal termination. His remains are on their way to Detroit, where they will be interred. The whole force connected with the road escorted his body from his house to the depot. The funeral services will take place at Detroit.—Toledo Bade.

☞ It is a most undoubted fact that Sanford's Invigorator, or Liver Remedy, one of the greatest discoveries made in medicine the past century. It has been the study of the Dr. during twenty years' practice to find what particular organ, when deceased, caused the greatest number of ills of the human and his conclusion is, that the liver is the greatest regulator of the system and the most liable to disease, while if kept free from disease is a preventative of Dyspepsia, Jaundice, general debility, &c., while last but not least from least we mention consumption; for from experience is that more cases of consumption occur from deceased liver than from all other causes put together. Taking this to be a correct hypothesis, we have but to find a remedy with which to correct the liver. Now we have a cure of nearly all the diseases we are subject to by simply using a preparative. That the Invigorator is such a remedy is beyond a doubt to all who try it, for the virtues are such that for all complaints arising from liver derangements, it is an unfailing remedy, while as a family medicine for all diseases of the stomach or bowels, where are caused in a greater or less degree by derongement, it is the safest, surest and most efficacious remedy known.

ADRIAN GUARDS.—We understand that this fine company has accepted an invitation from the Hillsdale Light Guard to celebrate the coming Fourth, at Hillsdale. We regret this very much, for there is not a finer company in the State than ours, and they will be much missed by all.—Adrian Watchtower.

It is with pleasure we inform our friend of the Watchtower, that the Tecumseh Sax Horn Band have accepted a call from the Advian Guards, to accompany them to Hillsdale the coming Fourth Tecumseh is proud of her Band, and will be happy to learn that they are engaged by the Adrian Guards.

☞ DeMott has Harpers' for July.

☞ By paying Mr. Wellman your fare you will receive a return pass. See special notices.

☞ Our friends are preparing to have a Pic Nic, on the banks of Washington Lake, one-half mile east of S. Walker's We notice many speakers, music, &c engaged for the occasion.

☞ David Marshall, intends to thresh Lenawee County, at least he has the machines on hand Persons wishing to get a good Machine, will do well to call at the Railroad Depot and examine those of D. Marshall.

FALSE REPORT.—It has been reported that the Bank of Tecumseh was in an unsound condition, but we are glad to learn from the most undoubted authority, that no cause whatever for distrust exists in regard to its entire soundness.—Toledo Blade

We will issue an extra for the benefit of Toledo, as soon as the Tecumseh Bank refuses to Cash Keep your eye open for Blade, but don't cut your fingers.

☞ We notice some four or five very nice specim us of Ambrotye pictures at the Post Office, taken by Mrs. Bissell She takes pains to keep up with all the improvements of pictures, and is prepar'd to suit her friends with the latest styles.

☞ Keep a look out for Strawberries Mr. Jones has a good eye for this kind of fruit, and serves them up as sure as they grow

☞ The citizens of Niles were favored by a Concert, directed by I. L. Rhue formerly teacher of Tecumseh Band We listen once a week, to his style of music and well know the concert was a treat especially the after piece "Song—My Mary Ann," accompanied by the "Patent Wood Organ."

☞ A. M. Wimple is receiving one of the best assortments of Boots and Shoes this market ever had. Any person can be accommodated with just what they want, in this line. Among the New styles, we notice somethin nice for the Children.—Mr. Wimple, has seen LILY smile, therefore he don't refuse Tecumseh Money.

☞ Mr Hyde continues to improve" the village, "between the showers."

☞ Persons can take train No 1, which leaves Tecumseh Station 7,22 A M and go to Toledo and Detroit, spend several hours and return from Toledo at 8.25 P. M, from Detroit at 7 P. M., arriving at home on No. 6 the same day

☞ Dr. Barr, of the firm of Barr & Beam, has arrived in town, and is prepared to do their work in style. Persons having work in the Dentist line, are invited to call and examine their work,

☞ In the Indiana House of Representatives, on Tuesday, Mr. Laurue presented the following petition:

Dated Petersburg, Tipton county. To the Senate and house of representatives now in session: I pray you to grant me a bill of divorce from my wife, Caroline Bunch, as I want one, or to be free from me and I want to be free from her. She has violated the vows of husband and wife. We have separated. The violation is bad. So I pray you that you have all authority, to send us a bill of divorce, as this is your business. I pray you to grant me this request Send it to Peru, Tipton county Indiana Send it when she wants to go to Ohio as soon as it is obtained.

W. S. BUNCH

The petition was refered to the committee on benevolent institutions.

☞ A young lady engaged to be married getting sick of her bargain applied to a friend to help her untie the knot before it is too late. Oh, certally, he replied, it is easy to untie it now, while it's only a knot

The income of the Marquis of Westminster it is estimated is £100,000 per annum, equal to $5,000 per day, or over $3 every minute of time night and day through the year. Every tick of the clock throws a half dime into his purses.

Milk.

The importance of milk as a article of diet, particularly for the young, is attested at once by the intimation of of nature and the experience of all nations. But artificial modes of life have been so assiduously cultivated among civilized nations, as in many instances almost to banish it from the table; inasmuch that now, when it is recommended for the benefit of persons of impaired health, the taste for it has sometimes to be cultivated.—The health of the present generation, and of that which is coming on, would doubtless be much improved if the habit of drinking milk at the table, instead of tea, coffee, malt liquors, and cider, were universal. It should be used in the same form at every meal.

The chemical analysis of milk as given by Dr. Johnson, in his work on Agricultural Chemistry, is as follows:

Casein, or Cheese	4,58
Butter	3,13
Sugar of Milk	4,77
Inorganic matter	0,50
Water	87,02
	100,00

Butter is the oily particles of the milk, which as a food supplies the oleaginous substances of the animal economy. The butter in the milk is the same as pure butter in its consolidated form after it is churned. The particles of butter in the milk are held in little sacs or bags, very small and of an almost infinite number.—This oil or butter is specifically lighter than the other portions of the milk and hence will rise to the top when the milk is permitted to stand for a few hours. The moment the milk is in a state of repose, the particles begin to rise; but they do not all rise for a number of hours, depending some what upon circumstances. These particles gathered on the top, constitute cream. The cream, then, is composed of butter and of the material of which the sacs which hold it is composed, which chiefly of is the nature of casein, and such particles of casein, water, other materials, ar mav have to it. Butter is the chief ingredient. Cream is the gathering of the oleaginous parts of the milk, as closely as they will consolidate without the use of mechanical means. Cream may be regarded as the natural product of milk; while butter is a mechanical product. Butter is a forced and unnatural consolidation of the oil of milk and in our opinion is not useful nor so healthy an article of food as cream; nor is cream so valuable and healthy as milk itself. Milk contains many essential qualities of food in such proportion as our bodily wants require.—Pure butter contains but one essential, and that such an one as is found in all our foods, in about such a proportion as our bodily wants require.—If, then, we eat butter, we eat more of this oily element than we require and load our stomachs with an offensive amount of oily matter, which must be disposed of at the expense of much waste of time and strength on the part of the digestive economy.—And the more butter we eat, the greater is this useless and destructive tax on the power of digestion. It is not that butter is bad but that it affords a superabunance of a good thing. Too much of a good thing is an offense. Too much food is an offense. Too much lime, too much albumen, or any other essential food, is injurious. The office of food is to supply the waste and for the growth of the system. All above the needed supply is useless and injurious. It is in the way that we regard the use of butter as unnecessary and hurtful. Better far to use cream. This in a great mesure lessens the evil. Cream is as delicious to the taste as butter can be; is accepted most cheerfully by the stomach is often recommended by physicians for weakness of the digestive system, and supplies other materials for the nourishment of physical powers. But even cream is too oily unless sparingly used. All substances furnish more or less oil, and if we use the one which is chiefly oleaginous, we get more than the needed supply.

The sugar of milk is essential as an element of food. Sugar in all its form is a useful and nutrious food.—The water, too, held in milk, is useful as a dilutant. Our systems require much water. If they get it in the food, it is not required as a beverage.—Homi Circle.

JACKSON CO. AG. SOCIETY.—We have received a neat pamphlet containing the premium list of the Fifth Annual Fair of the Agricultural Society of Jackson couty. The fair is to be held on the 7th, 8th and 9th of October next. The annual address is to be delivered by the Editor of the Michigan Farmer.

The Society of Jackson county is one of the most spirited in the State, and its grounds are a model from which other societies may take many useful hints. Five hundred shade trees and Golden Willows have been set out; a house for the accomodation of ladies attending the fair has been built, finished and furnished in beautiful style with chairs and settees. The grounds now produce hay enough to feed all the stock which comes to the fair. The whole grounds tracks and drives have undergone a complete system of grading; it is designed to enclose the ring which is a very large one with a substantial railing, to set out several hundred more shade trees, to erect substantial stalls and racks for cattle and horses, and to make other improvements of a permanent nature. The people of Jackson city have acted very liberally towards the society, and they are about to reap the reward, by getting in return the use of a beautiful park, diversified with shaded drives, which will excel anything of the kind there is in the Western States.

WHAT OLD BONES AND BITS OF SKIN MAY BE GOOD FOR.—How to get a pennyworth of beauty out of old bones and bits of skin is a problem which the French gelatine makers have solved very prettily. Does the reader remember some gorgeous sheets of colored gelatine in the French department of the Great Exhibition? We owed them to the slaughter houses of Paris. Those establishments are so well organized and conducted, that all the refuse is carefully preserved, to be applied to any purposes for which it may be deemed fitting. Very pure gelatine is made from the waste fragments of skin, bone, tendon, ligature and gelatinous tissue of the animals slaughtered in the Parisan abattors, and thin sheets of this gelatine are made to receive very rich and beautiful colors.

As a gelatinous liquid when melted it is used in the dressing of woven stuffs, and in the clarification of wine, and as a solid, it is cut into threads for the ornamental uses of the confectioner, or made into very thin white and transparent sheets of paper glace, for copying drawings, or applied to the making of artificial flowers, or used as a substitute for paper, on which gold printing may be executed. In good sooth, when an ox has given us our beef, and our leather, and our tallow, his career of usefulness is by no mean ended; we can get a penny out of him as long as there is a scrap of his substance above ground.—Household Words.

CHEESE.—Old Squire J———, of Addison County Vt., was famous for bringing to market a better article of cheese than any of his agricultural neighbors, which occasioned a merchant to enquire "how it happened"

I think I can tell you the secret of it, said the squire." You may not notice that when the milk stands for a while in the pans, there is a kind of Yellow Scum that rises on the top of it. Now some women are so dreadful neat that they skim this all off; but my wife ain't so particketer, but stirs it all in together, and ra-als, I think the cheese is all the better for it."

Patent Medicines.

AYER'S
CHERRY PECTORAL,
FOR THE RAPID CURE OF
Colds, Coughs, and Hoarseness.

BOSTON, Mass., 20th Dec., 1853.
DR. J. C. AYER:

Our remedy is found the best remedy we have ever known for the Cough, Hoarseness, Influenza, and the consequential symptoms of a Cold, is your Cherry Pectoral. Its constant use in our practice and my family for the last ten years has shown it to possess superior virtues for the treatment of these complaints. EBEN WRIGHT, M.D.

S. B. MORTLEY, ESQ., of UTICA, N. Y., writes: "I have used your Pectoral myself and in my family ever since you invented it, and believe it the best medicine for its purpose ever put out. With a bad cold I should sooner pay twenty-five dollars for a bottle than do without it, or take any other remedy."

Croup, Whooping Cough, Influenza.

SCARSDALE, Miss., Feb. 7, 1856.

BROTHER AYER: I will cheerfully certify your Pectoral is the best remedy we possess for the cure of Whooping Cough, Croup, and the chest diseases of children. We of your fraternity in the South appreciate your skill, and commend your medicine to our people.

HIRAM CONKLIN, M.D.

AMOS LEE, ESQ., MONTEREY, TN., writes, 30 Jan., 1856: "I had a tedious Influenza, which confined me in doors six weeks; took many medicines without relief; finally tried your PECTORAL by the advice of our clergyman. The first dose relieved the soreness in my throat and lungs; less than one half the bottle made me completely well. Your medicines are the cheapest as well as the best we can buy, and we esteem you, Doctor, and your remedies, as the poor man's friend."

Asthma or Phthisic, and Bronchitis.

WEST SPRINGFIELD, PA., Feb. 4, 1856.

SIR: Your CHERRY PECTORAL is performing marvellous cures in this section. It has relieved several from alarming symptoms of consumption, and is now curing a man who has labored under an affection of the lungs for the last forty years. HENRY L. PARKS, Merchant.

A. A. RAMSEY, M.D., ALTON, MONROE CO., IOWA, writes, Sept. 6, 1855: "During my practice of many years I have found nothing equal to your CHERRY PECTORAL for curing ease and relief to consumptive patients, or cutting such as are curable."

We might add volumes of evidence, but the most convincing proof of the virtues of this remedy is found in its effects upon trial.

Consumption.

Probably no one remedy has ever been known which cured so many and such dangerous cases as this. Some no human aid can reach; but even to those the CHERRY PECTORAL affords relief and comfort.

ASTOR HOUSE, NEW YORK CITY, March 5, 1856.

DOCTOR AYER, LOWELL: I feel it a duty and a pleasure to inform you what your CHERRY PECTORAL has done for my wife. She had been five months laboring under the dangerous symptoms of Consumption, from which no aid we could procure gave her much relief. She was steadily failing until Dr. Strong, of this city, where we have come for advice, recommended a trial of your medicine. We bless his kindness, as we do your skill, for she has recovered from that day. She is not yet as strong as she used to be, but is free from her cough, and calls herself well.

Yours with gratitude and regard,
ORLANDO STERLING, OF SHELBYVILLE.

Consumptives, do not despair till you have tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It is made by one of the best medical chemists in the world, and its cures all around the globe the high merits of its virtues.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills.

THE sciences of Chemistry and Medicine have been taxed their utmost to produce this best, most perfect purgative which is known to man. Innumerable proofs are shown that these PILLS have virtues which surpass in excellence the ordinary afflictions of disease, and that they win an unprecedentedly upon the esteem of all men. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. Their penetrating properties stimulate the vital activities of the body, remove the obstructions of its organs, purify the blood, and expel disease. They purge out the foul humors which breed and grow distemper, stimulate sluggish or disordered organs into their natural action, and impart healthy tone with strength to the whole system. Not only do they cure the every-day complaints of every body, but also formidable and dangerous diseases that have baffled the best of human skill. While they produce powerful effects, they are at the same time, in diminished doses, the safest and best physic that can be employed for children. Being sugar-coated, they are pleasant to take, and being purely vegetable, are free from any risk of harm. Cures have been made which surpass belief were they not substantiated by men of such exalted position and character as to forbid the suspicion of untruth. Many eminent clergymen and physicians have lent their names to certify to the public the reliability of my remedies, while others have sent me the assurance of their conviction that my Preparations contribute immensely to the relief of my afflicted, suffering fellow-men.

The Agent below named is pleased to furnish gratis my American Almanac, containing directions for their use and certificates of their cures, of the following complaints:—Costiveness, Bilious Complaints, Rheumatism, Dropsy, Heartburn, Headache arising from a foul Stomach, Nausea, Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, Foulness of Blood, Ulcerations, Tetters, Tumors, Loss of Appetite, all Ulcerous and Cutaneous Diseases which require an external Medicine, Scrofula or King's Evil. They also, by purifying the blood and stimulating the system, cure many complaints which it would not be supposed they could reach, such as Deafness, Partial Blindness, Scalds and Burns, Nervous Irritability, Derangements of the Liver and Kidneys, Gout, and other kindred complaints arising from a low state of the body or obstruction of its functions.

Do not be put off by unprincipled dealers with some other pill they make more profit on. Ask for AYER'S PILLS, and take nothing else. No other they can give you compares with this in its intrinsic value or curative powers. The sick want the best and there is for them and they should have it.

Patent Medicines.

A Medicine that Never Debilitates.

DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR,
OR LIVER REMEDY.

HAS ALL THE GOOD QUALITIES OF A Purgative medicine, answering the purposes, of any Cathartic without the debilitating effects experienced from such purgatives. It acts slowly and gently, but surely, moving the bowels to carry off all the secreted matter, at the same time, stimulating the Liver to a proper performance of its functions.

The Invigorator cures the Sick Headache. Take one or two tea-spoonsful at each attack and it will soon disappear. For an overloaded stomache, or when food rises or sours, take the Invigorator after eating, and it will not prove disagreeable or oppressive. For Heartburn, Palpitation, or difficult breathing take a teaspoonful once or twice daily. For Loss of Appetite, Langu or Listlessness, the medicine is invaluable. It will restore the appetite and make the food digest well—Nightmare take a teaspoonful on retiring, and the demons of dream-land will all be Elfrits. After eating a heavy dinner, take a dose of Invigorator and it will relieve all oppression or fullness. The Invigorator is a Liver Remedy of unequalled virtue, acting directly on that organ, curing Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Bilious Attacks, Dysentery, Piles Worms, and all Female Obstructions, for which it has no equal.

We know there is nothing now before the American public, prepared with such skill by a scientific man, particularly for diseases of the Liver, as Dr. Sanford's Invigorator, or Liver Remedy. It has attained a reputation second to no other article in the world, simply because it rests on its own merit. To convince all by trial that it is all its proprietors claim it to be, if any of our readers are suffering from such diseases as are described in Dr. Sanford's advertisement, we know of no remedy that will so surely cure as the Invigorator.

There has lately been brought to our notice a medicine that seems to possess wonderful, curative and healing proprieties in diseases of the Liver, stomache and Digestive Organs. It came to us with so many testimonials in its favor that we have noted its effects in some of the worst cases of continual debility, caused by deranged liver, and in every instance the effect was to relieve or give a permanent cure. Dr. Sanford's Invigorator or Liver remedy is what we refer to. We always have been credulous about cures by patent medicines, but we are convinced that this medicine, for family use is not over rated by the host of recommendations it has. Our advice is, for all troubled with Indigestion, Debility or Bowel Complaint, to get a bottle and try it; our word for it, relief will be experienced.

BE SURE To The Invalids who use Dr. Sanford's Invigorator, for it will relieve them of their pains as soon as it is taken into their stomach. Pain and misery cannot exist where the Invigorator is used, for it will as surely drive them away, as daylight will banish darkness, of this there can be no doubt to those who try it, for it carries conviction with every dose taken. Another evidence is the thousands of certificates from those who have used it—Try one bottle, if it does not benefit, then we are mistaken.

Nothing is Lost.

Nothing is lost; the drop of dew
Which trembles on the leaf or flower,
Is but exhaled, to fall anew
In Summer's thunder shower—
Perchance to shine within the bow,
That fronts the sun at fall of day;
Perchance to sparkle in the flow
Of fountain far away.

Nothing is lost; the tiniest seed
By wild birds borne, or breezes blown,
Finds something suited to its need,
Wherein 'tis sown and grown.
The language of some household song,
The perfume of some cherished flower,
Though gone from outward sense, belong
To memory's after hour.

So with our words; or harsh or kind,
Uttered, they are not all forgot;
They leave their influence on the mind,
Pass on, but perish not!
So with our deeds, for good or ill,
They have their power scarce understood;
Then let us use our better will
To make them rife with good

Deborah Lee.

'Tis a dream or so of years ago,
Somewhere in the west countree,
That a nice girl lived, as the Hoosiers know,
By the name of Deborah Lee;
He, sister was loved by Edgar Poe,
But Deborah by me.

Now I was green and she was green
As a summer squash be;
But we loved as warmly as other folks,
I and my Deborah Lee;
With a love that the lasses of Hoosierdom
Coveted her and me.

But somehow it happened long ago,
In the aguish west countree,
That a chill March morning gave the "shakes"
To my beautiful Deborah Lee;
And the grim Steam Doctor (curse him) came,
And bore her away from me;
The Doctor and Death—old partners they—
In the aguish west countree

The angels wanted her up in heaven,
(But they never asked for me,)
And that is the reason, I rather guess,
In the aguish west countree,
That the cold March wind and the Doctor and Death
Took off my Deborah Lee,
My beautiful Deborah Lee,
From the warm sunshine and the opening flowers,
And hid her away from me.

Our love was as strong as a six horse team,
Or the love of folks older than we,
And possibly wiser than we;
But Death, with the aid of the Doctor and steam
Was rather too many for me—
So he closed the peepers and stopped the breath
Of my sweetheart, Deborah Lee;
And her form lies cold in the parairie mold,
Silent and cold—ah me!

The feet of the hunter shall press her grave,
And prairie's sweet wild flowers
In their odorous beauty around it wave,
Through all the summer hours,
The still bright summer hours;
And the birds shall sing in the tufted grass,
And the nectar-laden bee,
With his dreamy hum on his gauze wings pass—
She wakes no more to me!
Ah, never more to me!
Ah, never more to me!
Though the wild birds sing and the wild flowers spring,
She wakes no more to me.

Yet oft, in the hush of the still dim night,
A vision of beauty I see,
Gliding soft to my bedside, a phantom of light—
Dear, beautiful Deborah Lee,
My bride that was to be;
And I wake from the dream that the Doctor and Death
And the cold March wind should stop the breath
Of my darling Deborah Lee,
Adorable Deborah Lee;
That the angels should want her up in heaven
Before they wanted me.

The Coal deposits in Jackson Co.

Sandstone, May 18, 1857.

EDITOR FREE PRESS.—A wrong impression has been going the rounds of the newspapers respecting a coal mine discovered on my farm this spring. The facts of the case are these: A gentleman by the name of Batcholder, in passing over my fields a short time since, thought he discovered strong indications of coal, and by boring down about 20 feet, struck the slate on the surface of the coal.

I then leased him between three and 4 acres of land for the purpose of prospecting and mining. He commenced on the bank of the Sandstone Creek, on a level with the water, when he struck a vein of poor coal about one inch thick. This he followed into the bank, it constantly increasing in thickness and the quality improving, till he now has a vein of excellent coal, about three feet thick, some 6 rods from the creek.

The mine is located about one-fourth of a mile from the railroad. The coal sells readily on the bank at $5 per ton, of which several tons have already been got out and sold.

From present indications the coal deposit would seem to be very extensive, and with the facilities for getting it off to market, we think it may pay well for working.

Yours, &c., DARIUS BOYNTON.

Visit to a Sugar Plantation.

We made but one hasty visit to a large sugar estate—that of Manga, about seven miles up the valley. The road was not unlike that over Western prairie, our calecero driving hither and thither among dry grasses, and thickets, and cane fields; where tall spikes of bloom showed here and there like pennons on lanceheads, from which resemblance they obtain the Spanish name of bandera or banner. Through a thousand acres of canefields partly cut and bare; and partly yet where gangs of negroes were chopping it with heavy knives, and loading the stripped stalks on bullock carts, we drove to the 'ingenio' of Manga—a handsome residence, probably 100 ft., in front, but low, and not containing the space which its size suggests to a northerner, fronts a and overlooks a broad open yard: surrounded by half a dozen buildings, low walled, but very large on the ground, and covered by broad roofs of red tile. The trains of bullock carts deposited their loads of cane stalks by one of these. From the great heap it was brought in armfuls by negroes chained in pairs, probably culprits set at this heaviest labor in this disgraceful way, as penalty for some offenses. Passed rapidly between iron rollers driven by a powerful steam engine, the stalks came out squeezed almost dry, while rivulet of turbid juice ran away below through a covered channel, for 100 feet, where it was received in two large copper kettles or reserviors, each being filled alternately. Partially purified by lime it ran through these reservoirs into the kettles, of which there were two trains, of, I think, five each, and ladled from one to the next as it becomes and more concentrated until from the last it is dropped into a large cooling vessel. If allowed to granulate perfectly here, it becomes hrdinary Muscovada sugar; but at this establishment it is bleached. For this purpose it is placed, yet warm, in conical vessels, earthen or, metal about fifteen inches high and set (points down of course,) in holes cut in the upper floor of a large building.—Troughs running in all directions under this floor catch the lucious brown drippings of the sugar, and convey it to a huge subterranean molasses vat.

For the purpose of purifying the sugar, the surface of each loaf or cone as it lies in the mold, is covered with a cake of marvelously dirty looking clay, churned up in a mill, or tsodden (on the smaller plantations) into a thin paste by cattle working in a pit. By some mysterious process, the moisture from this dirt cake as it precolates through the sugar, extracts from it the coloring matte. (I will not say the impurities) and when the hardened form or loaf is turned out from the mold, it is found to be bleached, excepting the lower portion. It is divided into three parts, of varying color, white, stained and brown (being the base, middle and apex of the once) broken up and put up in the well known hide bound boxes for shipment. The whole process is perfectly simple and at most mills got over cleanly.

The molasses, pumped up from its reservior, goes to the distilling house where thirty six huge puncheons of potent rum stood in array.

I have only to add that the cane stalks are made to furnishing most of the fuel instead of being wasted as is common in Lousiana, where wood is cheap. The crushed sralks are carted away from the rollers spread thinly in the hot sun, and after a day or are thoroughly dried. Carried on hand barrows, or in baskets on the heads of negro women, they go to the furnace and there supply nearly all the heat to drive the engine, or evaporate the syrup.—N. Y. Tribune.

On the Western rivers in 1856 there were lost by snags, 58 steamboats; by burning, 23; by collision, 7; by ice, 34 by explosions, 8 by other casualities, 21; total steamers lost, 152. Flat boats and barges lost, 59; aggregate loss of property, $3,637,000. In addition there were some 40 or 50 accidents by flood, fire, snags or collisions wherein boats and cargoes were damaged to a large amount in the aggregate.

Perilous Balloon Assension.

We received a call this morning from Mr. Jno Steiner, of Philadelphia, a somewhat noted aeronaut, who has just made his fortieth assension, which proved quite a perilous adventure.

After several days' delays he finally succeeded in making the ascent from Erie half past 3 o'clock, on Thursday afternoon. The weather was stormy, with squalls of wind, which rendered the voyage not entirely pleasant. The wind being in the right direction, however, the ascent was determined, it being his purpose to sail across the lake and alight in Canada.

He immediately rose to the height of about 3 miles, and started off the Canada shore at a slow but steady rate.

The out-look was very beautiful. The lake could be seen from one end to the other, nearly, save as clouds intercepted it occasionally from view. At one time Mr. Steiner counted 38 sail vessels, all in sight, and far below. The hands on board several of the vessels saw him, and rightly apprehending that he was an aeronaut, cheered him heartily; and he states that their shouts could be heard by him quite distinctly.

The wind kept blowing steadily from the right quarter, and the voyage promised a very successful termination. He neared the Canada shore a little below Long Point and was gradually coming in to shore. When about ten miles from land, however, a counter current struck him, which was bearing directly down the lake. This was quite a strong one, much more so than the one which had propelled him safely thus far, and he was accordingly driven toward Buffalo.

He was about two and a half miles above the surface of the water; night was coming on and it became apparent that he could not with this current, get away from the water before dark, and after night fall it would not be so safe to come down. Seeing a propeller making her way up the lake, he resolved to descend, and if possible, strike the water so as to be rescued by the steamer.

The propeller proved to be the Mary Stewart. The officers discovered the balloon about the same time that they were described by its occupant. The American ensign was run up and her whistle sounded. Mr. Steiner responded by waving a small American flag from his car. He threw out a large anchor, attached to about 30 feet of strong rope, for the purpose of making fast to the vessel if he should cross above her, before reaching the water. He then began to descend and came down rapidly.

He first struck the water about 25 miles below Long Point and 3 miles above the propeller which was bound up. In 7 minutes he passed her about 20 rods astern. During this time Mr. Steiner says he thinks his balloon bounded from the water at least 20 times. It would strike and rebound like a ball, going into the air from 20 to 50 feet, and still rushing down the lake at railroad speed. His anchor not catching to anything caused this not very agreeable episode.

A boat was immediately launched from the propeller, which went in pursuit of him. They got hold of a long rope which he had thrown out, and which was attached to the balloon, and began to haul in.—But as soon as the line was made taut, the balloon took the boat in tow with a will. The sailors pulled the oar-locks off the boat, but could not stop their novel 'tug.' Mr. Steiner then abandoned the balloon, leaping into the water and swimming towards the boat, which speedily reached him. He was taken on board, hospitally entertained, and brought to this city, where he arrived last evening, none the worse for his adventurous voyage.

This is the third balloon Mr. Steiner has lost. It cost $500.—Del. Tribune.

Scene on a Battle Field.

BY RICHARD EVERETT.

The Bloody battle of Melino Del Rey was finished, and the American arms were again victorious. The battle field was red with Anglo Saxon blood, but never did the Aztec army make a more desperate defence. Those who participated in that glorious battle will never forget its many eventful circumstances; how at faint dawn of morn, when the stars looked sweetly upon the earth, our army moved silently into position, corps after corps, artillery, infantry, and cavalry; the muttering word of command, the rumbling of wheels and muffled tramp! tramp! tramp! of the devoted storming party which pioneered the main party. It was but five o'clock in the morning, when the battle commenced. With a thunder which shook the earth, the heavy guns of Huger's battery belched forth the signal of attack. Then stormers carrying their ladders and fascines, started forward, cheering as they ran, and were soon lost amid the thick somoke which rolled from the Mexican cannon. Now and then a broad flash of fire showed our gallant fellows fighting hand to hand with the enemy's cannoneers. On pressed the centre of our line, and like a rushing tornado, swept the enemy from their guns. But bravely they rallied, and in turn our troops were driven back. Here the carnage was dreadful. Of the fourteen officers of the storming party, eleven were killed or wounded, in less than fifteen minutes.

Meantime, upon each wing the fight progressed with great fury, and the ditches in front of Melino Del Rey and Casa De Mata were rapidly filling up with the dead and wounded. In front of these defences the carnage was terrific. The gallant Col McIntosh was shot while cheering on his men. Lieut. Scott fell in the front rank, and noble Wait sank under a mortal wound. Among the Mexicans there was a heavy loss of gallant officers. Old Gen. Leon, grey haired, but full of fire—Balderez Huerata, and Meolcos, all accomplished officers, fought their last fight upon the ramparts of Casa De Mata.

But, direful as was the conflict, no power could stay the Saxon's red right arm. Over broken grown, gaping ditches, and bloody rampart, in the face and fire and steel, the American troops pressed forward, trampling the dead bodies of friend and foe beneath their feet, until covered with the stains of battle, they stood triumphant upon the Mexican fortifications. Oh! it was a glorious moment, when, as the smoke rolled away, the stars and stripes were seen waving from the Mexican flag-staff, proud emblems of American valor.

But, we did not intend to describe the battle of Melino Del Rey at length.—Slowly the scattered remnants of the American forces retired from the hard earned field, and, upon the ninth regiment devolved the most painful of all duties, burying the dead and picking up the wounded. About sunset the labor commenced. Some six hundred men, divided into small parties, pursued the melancholly duty. Day faded but the moon, soon rising, shed a pale sepulchral light over the scene, which no man can contemplate without a thrill of horror. Over a large expause of ground the bodies of the dead and wounded men were thickly strewn. In some places a hundred corpses might be counted within the space of a few square yards, while the sand soil was wet with human gore. Large pits were dug, and friend and foe found a grave together. Death had abolished all distinctions. American and Mexican, who a few hours before, were striking for each others lives, now laid peacefully side by side, their animosity subdued. Ambulances and wagons rolled away to the temporary hospital filled with wounded men, whose groans of anguish were awful to hear.

It was while the work of burial progressed, that a Lieutenant, in charge of a small party, came to a ravine not far removed from the main line of attack thro' which ran a bubbling brook. Many wounded men had crowded to the banks of this stream to slack that terrible thirst, which a severe wound always induces.—As the party were collecting such injured persons as would bear removing, the wail of an infant suddenly attracted the Lieutenant's attention. He listened, and again the sound came faintly to his ear, so plain however, that there was no mistaking its source. Search was instantly made along the margin of the brook, and in a few moments a sight was disclosed which the most hardened heart grew faint.

Two dead bodies lay upon the sand, a few feet from the water's edge. One, a young Mexican artilleryman, whose head was badly crushed, apparently by a large shot, the other a young and beautiful Mexican girl, from whose neck a rivulet of dark blood was yet oozing, for a musket ball had penetrated the jugular vein.—The young man lay on his back, apparently just as he fell, while the position of the woman indicated that she received the fatal ball while kneeling by his side. Naked and all dabbled over with the gore of its parents, an infant, evidently about three months old, was lying upon the breast of its mother, wailing and grasping with its little hands her long black hair, which was damp with the cold night dew. Oh! it was a scene which made the heart swell with emotions of pity too deep for utterance—that helpless, innocent infant stained with its mother's blood! Often have we thought of the dreadful scene, for it was a picture never to be forgotten. The gloomy battle field strewn with dead and dying; the brook murmurming gleefully along, unmindful of its bloody ripples; the groups of soldiers standing with their spades and picks around those dead parents and living babe, and over all the moon gleaming with a ghostly glare, formed a striking scene for the dread panorama of war.

The man had probably met his death while in search of water as a leathern bucket, such as is attached to an artillery carriage, was lying near by; the woman must have received a chance shot while bending over her husbands body, for the Mexican women, with heroic devotion, often follow their husbands or lovers into battle. The Lieutenant gave orders that the two bodies should be interred in one grave, wrapped the babe in a blanket, and and in company with two of his men started in search of an ambulence, intending to send the little orphan to the Mexican camp. He had not proceeded far when a couple of Mexican friars were discovered prowling, as was their custom, among the dead bodies in search of plunder. Ordering them to desist, the officer related the scene he had witnessed, and in conclusion offered one of the priests a liberal reward if he would take the babe in safety to the camp of his countrymen.—The priest assented with alacrity, and receiving his reward, took the infant and turned away.

With a consciousness of having discharged the dictates of humanity, the Lieutenant prepared to join his party again. He had taken but a few steps, however, before an exclamation of horror from one of his companions, caused him to turn quickly, and as he did so they bounded from his side in pursuit of the two priests who were running rapidly towards the Mexican lines.

A sudden suspicion of horrible import glanced through the officer's mind in an instant, and calling on his men to fire on the fugitives if they did not stop, he looked earnestly along their track, and soon discovered the reason of his companion's conduct; for thrown amidst a heap of corpses, was the dead infant, with a bayonet driven completely through its body! The inhuman wretch, to whom the officer had confided his little charge had not proceeded a dozen yards before committing the atrocious deed. The pursuit was successful, and in a few minutes both friars were brought back trembling, and in broken English begging for mercy. But justice was quick and sure. A file of men were soon upon the ground. "Five minutes for prayers," said the Lieutenant, looking at his watch—"five minutes, you bloody scoundrels! Sergeant, tie their hands. Men, form fifteen paces in front." These orders were quickly obeyed, the victims meanwhile begging for their lives.

"Your time is up," said the officer.—"It is no use; a man who would murder an infant deserves worse than death. Are you ready, sergeant?" "Yes, sir," was the reply: "Then God have mercy on the souls of these villains. Platoon, ready, aim, fire!" A sharp report rang out upon the still night air, and the two friars were dead men!

SCHLEGEL, in his Philosophy of History speaking of the great wall of China, says: "Such is the height and thickness of this wall, that it has been calculated that its cubic contents exceed all the buildings in England and Scotland; or again, that the same materials would serve to construct a wall of ordinary height and moderate thickness round the whole earth."

Chicago is the terminus of fourteen Rail Roads and will soon be of the fifteenth.

Last Wishes.

When these weary eyes have ceased to weep,
And ye lay me down to my last long sleep,
Let it be afar from the busy strife,
From the restless tumult and toil of life.

Oh! hollow ye not my lonely bed
In the haunts where the feet of the stranger tread;
I would that no cold or careless breast,
Invade the spot of my dreamless rest.

But where the grasses may o'er me wave,
And the birds chant dirges above my grave;
Oh, lay me there 'neath the fresh, green sod,
And leave me alone with the Nature and God.

And Oh! come ye often there to weep,
While the stars their watch above me keep,
While the shadows are resting upon my tomb,
And the night winds sing of my early doom.

And yet I would not that ye should mourn,
So long as Life's lamp in your breasts doth burn;
But I pray that your hearts to my dust may cleave,
That ye still may love though ye cease to grieve.

Then come to my grave, though not in woe,
And think of her who is lying low;
For it seems that calmer will be my sleep,
While the loved of earth their vigils keep.

Burning of a Steamer.

Quebec, June 27.

The steamer Montreal was burned last night near Carvinge, about 20 miles above this city. There were about 500 passengers on board, mainly Scotch emigrants. About 175 were rescued by the steamer Napoleon. It is believed that many swam ashore, and were saved in other ways, but it is certain that as many as 200 perished in the flames or were drowned. Mr. Phillips, of Three Rivers, Mich, is among the drowned.

The captain of the Montreal, A. Randolph, and the crew are among the saved Reporters have just returned from the steamer Napoleon, which has arrived with the saved, and they are assured by those on board that the number of the lost will fully reach 350.

The steamer Montreal, one of the regular steamers running between Quebec and Montreal left this port at 4 o'clock yesterday P. M., having on board between four and five hundred passengers, of whom a majority were Scotch and other emigrants recently arrived from Europe:—Nothing unusual occurred after leaving the wharf, until the Montreal rounded a point off Cape Roque, about 12 or 15 miles above this city, when the wood work near the furnace was discovered to be on fire. Almost the very moment the smoke was discovered, the flames broke forth, causing the utmost consternation amongst the crowded passengers. The fire was first discovered about 5 o'clock, when the steamer was nearly abreast Cape Roque. Every effort was made to arrest the flames. The boat was stopped, so as to lessen the draught, but, finding it impossible to save her. Capt. Randolph ordered her to be run towards the shore. The officers and crew then exerted themselves to get out the life boat. The flames spread with the most astonishing rapidity, and, in a few seconds after, the steamer began to move forward. The wildest confusion and despair prevailed throughout the ship, and numbers of the passengers threw themselves overboard, and were, in most cases drowned. Fortunately the steamer Napoleon, also bound for Montreal, was but a few miles in advance of the burning boat, and as soon as the fire was discovered, put back with all speed, and succeeded in rescuing from the burning boat 127 passengers. Capt. Randolph and the purser of the Montreal were amongst those who threw themselves into the river; they, being excellent swimmers, succeeded in reaching the steamer Alliance, and were saved. It is quite possible that others may have saved themselves by swimming, but, as the steamer became unmanageable when a considerable distance from land, there is no doubt that most of those who threw themselves from the burning boat, found a watery grave — Sixteen of those saved died shortly after reaching the deck of the Napoleon, and, from present information, it is believed the total loss of life by this terrible disaster, will not be far short of three or four hundred. The steamer alliance arrived here this P. M. with 45 dead bodies, and another boat is known to have recovered 66 bodies. We have not been able to learn the names of those lost, except Mr. Phillips. The Montreal had on board 258 emigrants, recently arrived here from Glasgow, together with several German families, and raftsmen, and several American passengers.

On Saturday night last, when John Davie and Louis Trigant were indulging in a dispute at the corner of Love and Mandeville streets, a pistol which Trigant had in his hand was discharged, and the bullet from it carried off a piece of the scalp from Davie's skull. Trigant, who was arrested, says that he was merely using the pistol to give emphasis to his gestures in the argument, and its discharge was purely accidental.—N. O. Pick.

The Sabbath-day of Freedom.

Once more in the unvarying march of time returns this day of days to the American freemen. Beautiful in theory was that abstracted bill of universal rights, which it first promulged to a tyrant trodden world. Beautiful in practice too has been the exemplification of those rights. But alas, for the infirmity, the dross, the selfishness of human nature, not half so beautiful, nor perfect as the theory.

It were perhaps looking too much for severe consistency, and trusting too much in the perfectibility of human nature to expect that it should be otherwise. The history of a fallen world might have led us to a better judgment, and even that should have met a fuller realization. Yet proud of the severe logic, and lofty sentiments and universal principles of our Declaration of Independence, we had not thought to see the day when by any American statesman at least, it should be declared to be, only a rhetorical flourish.

It may be, that it is in vain to hope in the conduct of selfish men, a full exemplification of its unselfish truths, but, it is not therefore any the less true, that the nearer we come to this, and the closer we keep in practice, and in the spirit of all our institutions, to the proud imperishable principles of that bill of rights, the better, and happier, and more prosperous, as a nation, shall we be.

Oppression on the one hand, and fanaticism on the other, may and will assail it, but the true lover of his country, not only, but of disenthralled humanity, and universal freedom, will stand by and defend it

This is fitting time in which to compare the avowal of political principles in other lands, and the institutions which they foster, and the civil condition which they induce, with our own. To recount, with gratitude, the countless blessings, and almost unvarying prosperity that have set their seal, and signified the approval of heaven, upon the wisdom of our patriot fathers, in the legacy of civil and political rights which they established and bequeathed to us.

It is also a fitting time in which to recount also with anxiety and distrust every innovation upon the first great principles which they avowed, and under the influence and protection of which these great blessings have so flowed in upon us. It will not be pretended that wisdom died even with them, but after all it is natural and right that we should look with distrust upon any marked, or considerable innovation upon the sentiments or institutions of our fathers.

We cannot afford for the sake of experiment, to jeopardise that which has in practice so fully justified the wisdom that planned it, and vindicated its efficiency for good. We cannot safely narrow down to selfish ends and purposes, those universal principles that were meant for, and have secured the admiration of all mankind.—Our patriotism even, should not bind itself down to kindred and home, but should learn to drink in the spirit of our fathers, and include the race. We may well look with pride upon the institutions and the principles that have given to the world, within the limits of a century, a history like ours, and of all that is noble and lovely in its institutions and laws, ever feel and say—Esto perpetua.

LITERARY NOTICES

Peninsular Journal of Medicine

The June No of the Journal of Medicine is received and welome. Although a strictly Professional Journal, it also contains much of information and interest to the general reader. The present No., which concludes Vol IV, contains an interesting statement of the proceedings of the Tenth Annual Meeting of the American Medical Association, at Nashville, Tenn. It is edited by Prof Tina Pitcher M.D., Prof A. B. Palmer, M.D, and others Published by John A. Kerr and Co, Detroit. Terms $2 per annum.

Michigan Journal of Education.

The June number of this valuable Educational Journal, which is alike a boon and a compliment to the intelligence of our State, is received. It is published under the auspices of the Michigan State Teachers' Association, and edited by J. M. Gregory, A.M, assisted by some of the principal educational ladies and gentlemen of the State. Address J. M. Gregory, Ann Arbor. Terms $1 per annum.

Godey's Lady's Book.

The July No. of this justly popular Magazine of Literature and Fashion is promptly received. Our readers are aware that with, this No. commences a new Volume, and that now is the time to subscribe We have so often called their attention to its characteristic excellences, its fine work patterns, its reliable fashion plate, and its fine original articles, that it is hardly necessary here to repeat, those commendations. It is published by L. A. Godey Esq. Philadelphia—Terms $3,00 per annum

Dickens's Household Words.

The July No. of Dickens' is not stolen as we feared, but is received and welcome. With its unique, racy and varied contents, so intensely British, yet at the same time linking the old world to the new, it is no small addition to our magazine literature The admirers of Charles Dickens, here find his every day labors brought fresh from the dingy streets of London, to their very doors, with all the dispatch and cheapness of Yankee enterprise. Republished monthly by Messrs. Miller & Curtis No. 321, Broadway N. Y. at $3,00 per annum

The School Fellow Magazine

A beautifully printed, finely illustrated, and ably edited, monthly magazine for boys and girls, is also received, being issued by the same publishing house as the Household Words, (Messrs Miller & Curtis) N. N. at $1,00 per annum.

Ladies' Repository.

The July No. of the Ladies Repository is also promptly upon our table and always welcome to our exchanges. We always confess to a partiality for this excellent magazine of Literature and Religion, and feel that we may safely commend it to the parlor and fireside of every family. The impress of a pure and elevated literature is easily made, and long retained, and so also is that other impress which may sometimes leave its scar or stain upon the youthful heart.—The magazine above referred to, so carefully and so happily edited by Dr. Clark, may always be relied upon as a safe companion of the young.—Published by Messrs. Sörmstead and Poe Cincinnati O. Terms $2,00 per annum.

SAD DEATH OF CAPTAIN STONE.—On Sunday morning, an unknown man in a dying condition was brought to the city prison and was placed in charge of Dr. Covel, but all efforts to save his life proved unvailing and on Sunday night he died Before death, however, Dr Covel recognized him as Captain Stone, once a popular commander of one of the North River steamboats. From the appearance of the deceased it was evident that he was very poor and had been addicted to strong drink. Coroner Hills held an inquest upon the body and the jury rendered a verdict of death from intemperance and exposure.—New York Sun.

RAIL ROAD TROUBLES.—There is an unpleasant difference between several of our leading Roads which is likely to be a great annoyance to travelers. All coupons (through tickets) are refused on one of the links of the Lake Shore Road, and passengers who have paid down the hard cash, find that they must pay over again at the rate of four cents per mile, between Erie and Dunkirk, if they go by the New York and Erie Road. At least, so we gather from certain articles in the Cleveland Herald This road is owned by the New York Central, and the trouble if is we understand it, between that Road and the Erie These breaks in the Rail Road arrangements are very inconvenient to travelers, and it is to be hoped that the difficulty will soon be arranged.—Tol Blade

CHICAGO.—The fast city of the west appears, just now, to be even more remarkable for the bold and daring robberies of its citizens than for its rapid growth or the price of its corner lots. It is infested by a band of robbers which defy the police and the vigilance of citizens, and are likely to steal everything which the financial crisis has left to the fast capitalists of that fast city. By the latest intelligence it appears that there is no improment.—Toledo Blade.

Rescue of a Woman Abducted by Indians.

The Hon. Charles E Flandrea, Agent for the Sioux of the Mississippi, arrived in this city last evening from the Sioux Agency, on the steamer Minnesota, accompanied by Mrs Margaret Ann Marble, one of the women taken prisoner by the Indians at Spirit Lake, Iowa, in March last and whose release from captivity has been briefly noted in our paper. From Mr. Flandrau we learn some very interesting facts connected with the captivity of Mrs Marble and her associates.

Mrs Marble states that on the 13th of March last, a party of Indians came to the residence of her husband, at Spirit Lake, Iowa, murdered him, and took her off as a prisoner to their camp, in the vicinity of the Lake. At the camp she found a Mrs Thatcher, a Mrs. Noble and Miss Gardner, all of whom had been taken prisoners by the Indians in their attack on the settlers at the Lake. Mrs. Thacher's husband, had escaped being killed by a temporary absence; so with Mrs. Noble's. Miss Gardner's entire family had been murdered.

The Indians broke up their camp at Spirit Lake immediately, and proceeded to Heron Lake, distant about 25 miles, where they encamped and left their squaws and prisoners, and started on an expedition, Mrs. Marble supposes, to the Des Moines, at Springfield, where they committed other murders. They returned to the camp at Heron Lake in about ten days, with a large lot of powder, dry goods, guns, horses, &c., all of which had been secured in their attack on Springfield On the next day after their return the Indians broke up their camp and started westward. They were on the march every day for upward of a month, and only rested at Skunk Lake, west of the Big Sioux River, and about 125 miles north-west of Spirit Lake. Mrs. Marble estimated the distance traveled at four or five hundred miles, probably owing to the tortuous course pursued by the Indians to avoid pursuit. She thinks they arrived at Skunk Lake about the 1st of May. Here they remained five days, when the fortunate circumstance transpired which resulted in the release of Mrs Marble from captivity.

In relation to the trials and sufferings of the unfortunate females during the journey to Skunk Lake, Mrs. Marble's narrative is deeply interesting, and calculated to thrill the heart of the most indifferent with feelings of horror, indignation and desire for justice, if not revenge, upon the cowardly murderers.

Immediately on starting from Heron Lake, Mrs Marble states that herself and associates were forced to carry heavy packs and perform the degrading and menial services in the camp She says that the bag she was compelled to carry consisted of two bags of shot, each weighing 25 pounds. On the top of this heavy load, which this week, ill-used and distracted woman was forced to carry, was placed the additional weight of an Indian urchin of some three or four years of age. The snow was very deep; the prisoners were but thinly clad, and most of the time suffering from hunger. The warm clothing they had on them were made prisoners was taken from them by the squaws, and in its place they received but a scanty supply, ill-suited to the weather and the exposure they were forced to undergo.—At times, the unfortunate captive would fall to the ground, exhausted and utterly unable to proceed further. Then the inhuman wretches would place the muzzle of a loaded gun at her head, and threaten her with instant death unless she would immediately continue her weary march. When a horse, stolen at the settlements, would die, or be killed by the Indians for food, the prisoners would be allowed to recruit their exhausted strength by a supply of horse-flesh; but, with these exceptions, they suffered greatly from a want of food, and were glad to snatch up the bones thrown down by the Indians after their repast. Mrs. Marble states that they were often forced to eat the wing-feathers plucked from the ducks shot by the Indians, and shriveled before the fire, to save themselves from starvation

When the Indians would encamp for the night, the captives were compelled to carry wood and water, and build fires, and put up the tepees, &c. They were, however, never allowed to prepare the food. At first, they very naturally rebelled at the treatment they received, but the Indians beat them with clubs into submission to their orders. Mrs. Marble states that she soon discovered that the only way to secure herself from ill-treatment was to perform the duties assigned her with cheerfulness and alacrity. Herself, Mrs Noble and Miss Gardiner pursued this course, and were treated more kindly than their associate, Mrs. Thatcher, who was in delicate health, and utterly unable to do the amount of work required of her. This led to a most tragic and horrible occurence, when the party crossed the Big Sioux.

They arrived at this stream about fifteen days after leaving Heron Lake. The Indians cut down several trees on each side of the river, and thus made a bridge across it When Mrs. Thacher attempted to cross, she was thrown into the river; she succeeded in swimming to within a short distance of the other side, when one of the Indians deliberately shot her through the head, killing her instantly The body of the unfortunate woman was left floating in the stream. Her death was hailed by the Indian women with loud shouts of joy and exultation The feelings of the surviving prisoners at this horrid murder cannot be imagined They beheld in Mrs Thatcher's death the fate reserved for them; when, overpowered by fatigue, they would be unable to proceed

About five days after the party reached Skunk Lake, two Lac-qui-Parle Indians, on their Spring hunt, made their appearance at the camp of Inkpa du-tah's band They were well recieved by the chief and his followers. A feast followed, at which the Indians related their exploits at Spirit Lake, boasted of the murders they had committed, the goods they had stolen, &c

The Lac-qui Parle Indians remained in the camp all night, keeping a very sharp look out They informed Mr. Flandrau of the movements of Ink pa-du-tah, who, they apprehended, would attempt violence. The next morning, having learned that the Indians had three white women in the camp, they made a proposition to purchase one of the captives. After considerable negotiation, Ink pa-du-tah's band consented to part with Mrs. Marble, in consideration of receiving one gun, a lot of blankets, keg of powder, and a small supply of Indian trinkets. The two Indins immediately started homeward with Mrs Marble, and arrived at Lac-qui Parle on the 20th of May. On the journey, occupying ten days, they treated Mrs. Marble with great kindness, furnishing her warm clothing, carrying her over streams, and providing her with food.

On arriving at Lac qui-Parle the two Indians, who are brothers and known as Grey Eagle and Roaring Cloud, placed Mrs M in their father's lodge, where she was treated with equal consideration and kindness, Here she remained until Messrs. Williamson and Biggs, missionaries, arrived and removed her to the agency at Yellow medicine After a few days' rest, with the families at the Agency and Fort Ridgely, she started for St. Paul, in company with Mr. Flandrau, and arived at the Fuller House last evening

Mrs. Marble is about 25 years of age, of medium size, and very pleasant looking. She is a native of Drake County, Ohio, and moved to Michigan about two years ago.

She has been twice married. Her first husband's name was Phips. After his death, she married Marble, with whom she removed to Linn County, Iowa, and ultimately to Spirit Lake, in Dickson County. Mrs. M. is in a very destitute condition; her husband has been murdered, and as to whether her parents are alive or not, she is ignorant We trust those who are blessed with a supply of this world's goods will contribute liberally in aid of this unfortunate woman. The privations she has undergone, and her present destitute condition, commend her to the consideration of the benevolent.—Any money forwarded to her address at the Fuller House will reach the proper destination.

Flandrau has adopted the most energetic means to secure the release of Mrs. and Miss Gardner. On the 23d, he dispatched a party of trusty Indians to Skunk Lake, with four horses and a wagon, and provided them with everything necessary to secure the release of the remaining captives by ransom. The Indians would reach Ink-pa du-tah's camp in about four days.

Roaring Cloud and Gray Eagle report the band of Ink-pa-du-tah to number about fifteen lodges. The Indians are well armed, each of them possessing a revolver, rifle, &c.

At about 10 o'clock last night a Frenchman named Jean Vincent, who had arrived from Texas but a few hours before, fell from the roof of the balcony in front of the Conti street Veranda, and was so badly injured that he died almost immediately. It appears that be was ntoxicated, and just before he fell he was seen walking on the roof of the balcony. One of his legs was broken by the fall, and his head was badly bruised. An inquest was held this morning on his body, and a verdict in accordance with the above stated facts was rendered.—Deceased was about 52 years of age. On the table of the room he occupied $,166,40 were found by Lieut. Fremaux shortly after the occurence.—N. O. Pick.

A little boy named John Wright, while fishing with some other boys, yesterday, in Canal Carondelet, opposite to Roman street; fell into the canal and was drowned. An inquest was held on his body and a verdict of accidental death was rendered. Deceased was a native of Lonisana, and about eleven years old.—N. O. Pick.

This may certify that I have made a trial of Bach's American Compound in a case of severe Bronchial Affection, and a long standing irritation of the mucious coast of the Alimentary track. By the use of two bottles of the above Compound, it is thought a permanent cure was effected. I have seen its wonderful effects in a decided case of Scrofula Consumption, where the patient was thought to be beyond cure after taking a few bottles of the American Compound is now thought to be out of danger, and nearly well From what I have seen from the effects of the Compound, I should certainly recommend it in such cases as above named

LATE DISCOVERIES IN PATHOLOGY show that very many of the diseases which afflict mankind arise from impurity of the blood This has long been suspected but Is only lately known. In consumption, tubercles are found to be a sedimentary deposite from the blood Dropsy, Gout, Cancer, Ulcers, Eruptions, all arise in disordered deposits from the blood, Bilious diseases and fevers are caused solely by its deranged unhealthy state, and even the decline of life follows want of vitality in the blood. In view of these facts Dr AYER designed his Cathartic Pills especially to purify and invigorate the blood, and hence we believe to arise its unparalleled success in controlling and curing disease.—[Mercantile Journal

☞ It is a most undoubted fact that Sanford's Invigorator, or Liver Regulator is one of the greatest discoveries made in the past century It has been proved by thousands of the Dr. during twenty years' practice to find what particular organ, when deranged caused the greatest number of ills of flesh and his conclusion is, that the liver is the most liable to disease, while if kept free from disease is a preventative of Dyspepsia, Headache, general debility, &c, while last but not least we mention consumption; his own experience is that more cases of consumption occur from deceased liver than from all other causes put together. Taking this as a correct hypothesis, we have but to apply a remedy with which to correct the liver, and we have a cure of nearly all the diseases that are subject to by simply using a preventative That the Invigorator is such a preventative is beyond a doubt to all who try it. Its virtues are such that for all complaints arising from liver derangements, it is an unfailing remedy, while as a family medicine for all diseases of the stomach or bowels, which are caused in a greater or less degree by liver or derangement, it is the safest, surest and most efficacious remedy known.

☞ There is an awful 'pile' of rich Furniture arriving in this village. Keep a sharp eye upon our advertising columns and you will learn who is the owner. We understand some of this furniture is not for sale, and of course it will not need advertising.

☞ Somebody came very near carying off some wool, without paying Anderson half price for it, last monday night, about twelve o'clock. Fortunately the thieves were detected, by Hugh Richards, who gave the alarm, and in company with others, gave the thieves a chase across union beds, melon patches, &c. recovering every few rods, a bundle of the stolen wool. The theives made good their escape.

☞ Smalledge is runing his Express carriage to Adrian daily, leaving Tecumseh 8 o'clock A. M., and Adrian 4 P M. He requests us to inform his friends that he receives Fresh Bread, by express, every evening, at his grocery.

☞ Dodsworth's Band plays at Toledo the 4th of July; so says the Blade.

☞ Lamont Bidwell favored us with a dish of the largest strawberries we have seen this season. They were grown in his father's garden, and would average 3½ two measured 3⅞ inches each.

THE SPIRIT OF 1857.

Revolutionary Relics

RESUSCITATED.

1776 — 1857

The Patriot Fath ers—Their lips were strangers to our tongue; deceit; their hearts were open in each manly thing" For sale cheap cause and painted not by Presidential fiend-faced hollowness!" Appointment.

The citizens of Tecumseh imbued with the pat riotism of 1776, have made the most ample arrange ments for the proper celebration of that ever glori ous epoch in the history of the world, when our Sore Fathers declared themselves and their country forever free. All who love and cherish Free Institutions are requested to meet in this village on the Fourth of July, to celebrate the Anniversary of that memorable day, when, shaking from his plumes the collected dust of centuries, the Eagle of Liberty spread his benign wings over the Western Conti nent and bore aloft the beacon star of Hope. Let the "Free Limbed Millions" come together and mingle their voices in the universal shout of

"HAIL COLUMBIA."

OFFICERS OF THE DAY;

Pres dent, B. C. Bomfort, Esq.; Vice Presidents Hon A C Tracy, Hon B Pills Marshal, Colon o Monnell. Orator, Hon. Peter Prall. Reader, S. Nell. Chaplain, Rev. Richard Reynard. Ass Marshals, Gens Scott and Pierce.

PROGRAMME;

The 81st Anniversary of American Independence will be ushered in on Tommy Clark's Meat Wagon 30 minutes before sunrise; the "Four o'clock Cav alcade" will meet the cortege at the Globe Mill, and escort it over the line of the corporation at the rate of Four Miles an Hour obedient to a late regulation of the Board of Health.

At the first shooting forth of the grand luminary of day, a National salute of One Fire Cracker, at which time the Star Spangled Banner will be thrown forth to kiss the morning breeze. At 10 o'. clock one entire bunch of Fire Snappers,—at which time the procession will form on the beautiful square in front of Dick Moore's, in the following order;

1 The Marshal mounted in Dan. Helm's Ex press Wagon; 2. Jim Hadden's Sheep Skin Band; 3 President supported by the Vice Presidents; 4 Hose Hook & Ladder Company No. 1; 5. Orator Leader and Chaplain; 6. Twenty "Black Hawk War" Soldiers, supported by the Tecumseh Fusil iers and the Ridgeway Flying Artillery; 7 Citi zens, Soldiers of the Toledo War, Returned Filli busters, Know Nothings, Strong-Minded, Strong nerved Women and Young Americans; 8. Survivors of the Flood of 1855, Prof Stout's 100 Marfin ales, Botany Class from Union School bearing a assafras Root from Macon; 9 Landlords and Saloon-keepers; 10. Assistant Marshals.

The procession under the direction of the Mar shal will then march through the principal streets any vacant lot, where the following services will ake place; 1st, Music by the Band; 2nd, Read ng Declaration of Independence; 3rd, Song by the artingales; 4th, Oration; 5th. Song—"I'll bet money on the Wooly Horse," by Saw; 6th, aniel's Poratio, a musical tantrum in 7 parts; 7th ediction.

There will be a Grand Barbacue on the occasion. A 1704 Bull just issued, has been donated by the ope, and the animal will be roasted whole. Dinner 1000 will be served up between 2 o'clock and the aker Meeting House.

U. S. Village Trustees on the Free List. 17 grees from Canada have been at a great price ged as table waiters.

The proceeds after defraying the expenses, to be giously appropriated to the benefit of the widows orphans made on the occasion.

In the evening, a magnificent attempt at Fire orks will entirely fail.

The Committee of Arrangements have spared no ense necessary in getting up a Celebration wor hy of the distinguished persons expected to be ent, (especially the darkies,) have been pro ed with much difficulty, and at an enormous , and it is earnestly hoped that the people will in from every quarter. Let it be a great day old Tecumseh.

A gravel train has been chartered for the accom odation of persons coming from Adrian, Napoleon hester and Clinton.

Stranger, Draw, Don Carlos Stewer, at Bidder, Com. of Arrangements.

GOOD NEWS!

The undersigned have entered into copartnership in the

TAILORING

Business, for the purpose of better facilitating our business, and would say to our patrons and friends, that we are now ready to attend to the wants of all who may be in need of work, in a style not to be excelled by any "Professor," or "Accomplished Artist" this side of Paris.

Mr. SCHERER is late from Paris, and is as good a workman as the country affords, and he will warrant his work inferior to none.

Mr. JONES is too well known as an accomplished Tailor to need any puff.

Please give us a call and see what we can do, as we will "Give you Fits" every time, and warrant our work "Not to Cut in the Eye."

Bach's American Compound

The extraordinary results which have been produced by the use of this Medicine, is spreading from one end of the world to the other. 'THE BENCH DROP OR CANCER ROOT,' A COMPOUND FLUID EXTRACT of which enters into the combination, is beyond doubt, the most extraordinary vegetable ever known.—The knowledge of its great virtues came from the North American Indian, by whom it was for the treatment and cure of CANCER, and Rheumatism, Scrofula and Consumption. The Fluid Extract is so combined with other vegetable ingredients ar to insure in the greatest perfection a powerful ALTERNATIVE and PURIFIER of the BLOOD.

To Monthly Nurses.

Bach's American Compound will cure every case you have under your charge of Cankered Sore Mouth, Sprew, Nursing sore mouth and sore Nipple. One bottle will cure any case, we care not of how long standing, or how ever aggravated. We annex certificates of cures.

To Females.

Bach's American Compound will cure of much pain and sunering. Are you week low spirited, with constant pain in the small of the back?—have you no appetite, no muscular energy? You need suffer no longer! this NEW VEGETABLE REMEDY will remove that pain, restore your appetite, and give you new strength and perfect health.—This compound is also a sure and rapid cure for ulceration and cancerous diseases of the uteras, and an infallible remedy for Flour Albus, (or Whites.) These are not mere assertions to induce you to buy this medicine—we state these things as facts, because we have proofs of many cases in our possession—delicacy forbids making them public.

MOFFAT'S LIFE PILLS

AND

Phœnix Bitters

THE BEST FAMILY MEDICINE NOW before the public, for the cure of Scrofula, Ulcers, Scurvy, or Eruptions of the Skin, Fever and Ague, Dyspepsia, Dropsy, and in fact most all diseases soon yield to their curative properties.

It has been computed that during the last twenty five years upwards of FOUR MILLIONS of persons have been benefited by the use of these medicines; a fact which speaks volumes in favor of their curative properties. A single trial will place them beyond the reach of competition in the estimate of every patient. By their use the BLOOD IS RESTORED TO A HEALTHY STATE and freed from all impurities. The system is not reduced during their operation, but invigorated, and they require no restraint from business or pleasure.

The afflicted have in these medicines a remedy that will do for them all that medicine can possibly effect

Lenawee County Farmer.

Tecumseh, Michigan, July, 1857.

How Much land shall we Buy.

The passion of the Americ' farmer for more land is proverbial, and the strength of the passion shows itself as a national, as well as an individual characteristic. However ample the national domain, we want a little more land, Texas, California, a little more of Mexico, and a while hence Cuba.—The manifest destiny of the country is to absorb everything that joins it, on all sides, and when this is done we will probably go to filling up the ocean with the Rocky Mountains and the Andes.

Almost every cultivator of the soil shows a much stronger desire to possess more land than to till that which he already owns in the best manner.—He pays a large price for a farm with a grumbling, while he grudes every dollar paid for manure and the implements of husbandry, The necessity of capital to carry on the farm to the best advantage after it is purchased does not enter into his calculations.—The fact is lost sight of, that land is very poor property, except as it is tilled & made to yeild its owner some return for his investment. Many a farmer is ruined by the amount of he invests in land, when it does not yeild him one per cent interest.

It is manifest, then, that a farmer, in purchasing land for improvement, should invest but a part of his capital in the soil, while he reserves at least half for the purchse of stock, manure, seeds, and labor. The outery against large farms has a rational basis only as regards this necessity of capital and labor to make farming profitable. The soil is a machine, that will turn out valuable crops just as it worked.—While allowed to stand idle, it produces little, and the farmer gets but poor returns for his investment. If a farmer have twenty thousand dollars to invest, he may purchase ten thousand dollars worth of land, using the rest of his capital to carry on his business with. If he have skill and capacity, he may carry on farming on a large scale, and make it much more profitable than it can be made on a small scale. There is nothing in the nature of tilling the soil calculated to dwarf a man's energies. Intelligence and thrift have as fair a field in this calling as in any other, and a man may more surely gain a competence and provide for the reason able wants of a family upon a farm than in any other place.

Our circumstances in some of the older States especially are not so widely different from the English or Scotch farmer as to forbid the large outlays which they make for the working of the soil. In a recent legislative agricultural meeting in Massachusetts, one gentleman spoke of this difference between the English and American farmer. He related an incident of his travels in Scotland, where he saw a farm of six hundred acres, and he found that the whole success of the farmer depended on his putting as much manure on the land as would purchase an ordinary farm. He spent $1,500 for manure, $600 a year for bone dust, in addition to the manure made upon the place from 700 head of cattle. He raised twenty tons of turnips to the acre, besides the tops he raise thirty two bushels of wheat to the acre; and he had only three acres of grass permanently. All the rest of the farm was cultivated. He paid between $6,000 and $7,000 a-year for rent. This item of expense is very much in favor of the American farmer and is probably more than sufficient to counterbalance the higher markets which prevail in England. Land may be purchased, even in our older States for a less sum than the annual rental of farming lands in Europe. But, cheap as they are, no man should be tempted to take any more than he has the means to cultivate.

The surplus capital of farmers.—Should be invested in improvements upon the farm rather than in bank stock, or in more land. It is no uncommon thing for intelligent cultivators to get eight; ten and even twenty per cent, interest upon improvements in their own business. Bank stock rarely equals these returns, and often falls short of them. It would seem that every intelligent business man ought to know how to take care of his own money better than another can do it for him. The merchant and manufacturer understand this, and not only boldly invest their own earnings in their business, but use borrowed capital to a large extent. Millions upon millions of the surplus capital of farmers are invested in other callings, while their own enterprises are suffering sadly for the want of capital.—They employ not one half the labor they could make profitable; they are afraid to purchase manures, or to venture upon new crops. In good farm buildings, and conveniences for making manures, they are especialy deficient. These are instruments that will pay large dividends, and no tiller of the soil who has any surplus capital, or can command it, should be content to do without them. All the excrements, liquid and solid, of every animal upon the farm, should be carefully saved, composted with muck, and kept under cover until it is deposited in the soil.—N. Y. Times.

How to Eat Wisely.

Dr. Hall, in his Journal, gives the following advice:

1. Never sit down to a table with an anxious or disturbed mind; better a hundred fold intermit that meal, for there will then be that much more food in the world for hungrier stomachs than yours; and, beside, eating under such circumstances can only, and will always, prolong and aggravate the condition of things.

2. Never sit down to a meal after any intense mental effort, for mental and physical injury are inevitable, and no man has a right to deliberately injure body, mind or estate.

3. Never go to a full table during bodily exhaustion—designated by some as being worn out, tired to death, used up, done over, and the like. The wisest thing you can do under such circumstances, is to take a cracker and a cup of warm tea, either black or green, and no more. In ten minutes you will feel a degree of refreshment and liveliness which will be pleasantly surprising to you; not of he transient kind, which a glass of liquor affords, but permanent; for the ten gives present stimulus and a little strength, and before it subsides, nutriment begins to be drawn from the sugar and cream and bread, thus allowing the body gradually, and by safe degrees, to regain its usual vigor.—Then, in a couple of hours, you may take a full meal, provided it does not bring it later than two hours before sundown; if later, then take nothing for that day in addition to the cracker and tea, and the next day you will feel a freshness and vigor not recently known.

No reader will require to be advised a second time, who will make a trial as above, while it is a fact that no unusual observation, among intelligent physicians, that eating heartily, and under bodily exhaustion, is not unfrequently the cause of alarming and painful illness, and sometimes sudden death. These things being so, let every family make it a point to assemble around the family board with kindly feelings, with a cheerful humor, and a courteous spirit; and let that member be sent from it in disgrace who presumes to mar the ought to-be blest reunion, by sullen silence, or impatient look, or angry tone, or complaining tongue. Eat in thankful gladness, or away with you to the kitchen, you graceless churl, you ungrateful pestilent lout that you are! There was grand and good philosophy in the old time custom of having a buffoon or music at the dinner table.

Patent Medicines.

AYER'S
CHERRY
PECTORAL,
FOR THE RAPID CURE OF
Colds, Coughs, and Hoarseness.

Rochester, N. H., 20th Dec. 1855.
Dr. J. C. AYER: I am pleased to say, that the best remedy I have ever found for Coughs, Hoarseness, Influenza, and for the commencement of Consumption, is your Cherry Pectoral. Its constant use in my practice and my family for the last ten years has shown it to possess superior virtues for the treatment of those complaints. EBEN KNIGHT, M. D.

A. B. MORTLEY, Esq., of Utica, N. Y., writes: "I have used your Pectoral, which I find to be unquestionably the best medicine for the purpose ever put out. With a bad cold I should sooner pay twenty-five dollars for a bottle than do without it, or take any other remedy."

Croup, Whooping Cough, Influenza.

SEBASTOPOL, Miss., Feb. 7, 1856.
BROTHER AYER: I will cheerfully certify your Pectoral is the best remedy we possess for the cure of Whooping Cough, Croup, and the chest diseases of children. We of your fraternity in the South appreciate your skill, and commend your medicine to our people.

HIRAM CONKLIN, M. D.

AMOS LEE, Esq., Maysville, Ia., writes, 30 Jan., 1856: "I had a bad-as Influenza, which confined me in doors six weeks; took many medicines without relief; finally tried your Pectoral by the advice of our clergyman. The first dose relieved the soreness in my throat and lungs; less than one half the bottle made me completely well. Your medicines are the cheapest as well as the best we can buy, and we esteem you, Doctor, and your remedies, as the poor man's friend."

Asthma or Phthisic, and Bronchitis.

WEST MANCHESTER, Pa., Feb. 4, 1856.
SIR: Your CHERRY PECTORAL is performing marvellous cures in this section. It has relieved several from alarming symptoms of consumption, and is now curing a man who has labored under an affection of the lungs for the last forty years. HENRY L. PARKS, Merchant.

A. A. RAMSEY, M. D., Aiden, Monroe Co., Iowa, writes, Sept. 6, 1855: "During my practice of many years I have found nothing equal to your CHERRY PECTORAL for giving ease and relief to consumptive patients, or curing such as are curable."

We might add volumes of evidence, but the most convincing proof of the virtues of this remedy is found in its effects upon trial.

Consumption.

Probably no one remedy has ever been known which cured so many and such dangerous cases as this. Some no human aid can reach; but even to those the CHERRY PECTORAL affords relief and comfort.

ASTOR HOUSE, NEW YORK CITY, March 5, 1855
DOCTOR AYER, LOWELL: I feel it a duty and a pleasure to inform you what your CHERRY PECTORAL has done for my wife. She had been five months laboring under the dangerous symptoms of Consumption, from which no aid we could procure gave her much relief. She was steadily failing, until Dr. Strong of this city, where we have come for advice, recommended a trial of your medicine. We have its kindness, as we do your skill, for she has received from that day. She is not yet as strong as she used to be, but is free from her cough, and calls herself well.

Yours with gratitude and regard,
GILARDO STANLEY, of Shelbyville.

Consumptives, do not despair till you have tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It is made by one of the best medical chemists in the world, and its cures all around us bespeak the high merits of its virtues.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills.

THE sciences of Chemistry and Medicine have been taxed to their utmost, to produce this best, most perfect purgative which is known to man. Innumerable proofs are shown that these PILLS have virtues which surpass in excellence the ordinary medicines, and that they win unprecedentedly upon the esteem of all men. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. Their penetrating properties stimulate the vital activities of the body, remove the obstructions of its organs, purify the blood, and expel disease. They purge out the foul humors which breed and grow disease, put stimulate sluggish or disordered organs into their natural action, and impart healthy tone with strength to the whole system. Not only do they cure the every-day complaints of every body, but also formidable and dangerous diseases that have baffled the skill of human skill. While they produce powerful effects, they are at the same time, in diminished doses, the safest and best physic that can be employed for children. Being sugar-coated, they are pleasant to take, and being purely vegetable, are free from any risk of harm. Cures have been made which surpass belief were they not substantiated by men of such exalted position and character as to defy the suspicion of untruth. Many eminent clergymen and physicians have lent their names to certify to the public the reliability of my remedies, while others have sent me the assurance of their conviction that my Preparations contribute immensely to the relief of my afflicted, suffering fellow-men.

The Agent below named is pleased to furnish gratis my American Almanac, containing directions for their use and certificates of their cures, of the following complaints:—Costiveness, Bilious Complaints, Rheumatism, Dropsy, Heartburn, Headache, arising from a foul Stomach, Sea-sea, Indigestion, Morbid Inaction of the Bowels and Pain arising therefrom, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, all Liver and Cutaneous Diseases which require an external Medicine, Scrofula or King's Evil. They also, by purifying the blood and stimulating the system, cure many complaints which it would not be supposed they could reach, such as Deafness, Partial Blindness, Neuralgia and Nervous Irritability, Derangement of the Liver and Kidneys, Gout, and other kindred complaints arising from a low state of the body or obstruction of its functions.

Do not be put off by unprincipled dealers with some other pill they make more profit on. Ask for AYER'S PILLS, and take nothing else. No other they can give you compares with this in its intrinsic value or curative powers. The sick want the best and there is for them, and they should have it.

Patent Medicines.

A Medicine that Never Debilitates.

DR. SANFORD'S
INVIGORATOR,
OR LIVER REMEDY.

HAS ALL THE GOOD QUALITIES OF A Purgative medicine, answering the purposes of any Cathartic without the debilitating effects experienced from most purgatives It acts slowly and gently, but surely, moving the bowels to carry off all the secreted matter, at the same time, stimulating the Liver to a proper performance of its functions.

The Invigorator cures the Sick Headache. Take one or two tea-spoonsful at each attack and it will soon disappear. For an overloaded stomache, or when food rises or sours, take the Invigorator after eating, and it will not prove disagreeable or oppressive. For Heartburn, Palpitation, or difficult breathing take a teaspoonful once or twice daily. For Loss of Appetite, Langu or Listlessness, the medicine is invaluable It will restore the appetite and make the food digest well.—Nightmare take a teaspoonful on retiring, and the demons of dream-land will all be fairies. After eating a heavy dinner, take a dose of Invigorator and it will relieve all oppression or fullness. The Invigorator is a Liver Remedy of unequalled virtue, acting directly on that organ, curing Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Bilious Attacks, Dysentery, Piles Worms, and all Female Obstructions, for which it has no equal.

We know there is nothing now before the American public, prepared with such skill by a scientific man, particularly for diseases of the Liver, as Dr. Sanford's Invigorator, or Liver Remedy. It has attained a reputation second to no other article in the world, simply because it rests on its own merit. To convince all by trial that it is all its proprietors claim it to be, if any of our readers are suffering from such diseases as are described in Dr. Sanford's advertisement, we know of no remedy that will so surely cure as the Invigorator.

There has lately been brought to our notice a medicine that seems to possess wonderful, curative and healing proprieties in diseases of the Liver, stomache and Digestive Organs. It came to us with so many testimonials in its favor that we have noted its effects in some of the worst cases of continual debility, caused by deranged liver, and in every instance the effect was to relieve or give a permanent cure. Dr. Sanford's Invigorator, or Liver remedy is what we refer to. We always have been credulous about cures by patent medicines, but we are convinced that this medicine, for family use, is not over rated by the host of recommendations it has. Our advice is, for all troubled with Indigestion, Debility or Bowel Complaint, to get a bottle and try it; our word for it, relief will be experienced.

BLESSINGS To The Invalids who use Dr Sanford's Invigorator, for it will relieve them of their pains as soon as it is taken into their stomach. Pain and misery cannot exist where the Invigorator is used, for it will as surely drive them away, as daylight will banish darkness, of this there can be no doubt to those who try it, for it carries conviction with every dose taken. Another evidence is the thousands of certificates from those who use it or have been cured by it.—Try one bottle, if it does not benefit, then we are mistaken

HEALTH OR SICKNESS.
CHOOSE BETWEEN THEM.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

The blood furnishes the material of every tissue muscle, gland and fibre in the human frame. When pure it carries health to every organ; when corrupt it necessarily produces disease. Holloway's Pills operate directly upon the elements of the blood, either neutralizing the principle of disease and thus radically curing the malady, whether located in the nerves, the stomach, the liver, the bowels, the muscles, the skin, the brain, or any other part of the system.

USED THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

Holloway's Pills are equally efficacious in complaints common to the whole human race and in disorders peculiar to certain climates and localities.

ALARMING DISORDERS.

Dyspepsia and derangement of the liver, the source of infirmity and suffering, and the cause of innumerable deaths, yield to these curatives, in ll cases, however aggravated seeming as a mild purgative, alternative and tonic; they relieve the bowels, purify the blood, and invigorate the system and the constitution at the same time.

General Weakness—Nervous Complaints.

When all stimulants fail, the renovating and bracing properties of these pills give firmness to the shaking nerves and enfeebled muscles of the victim of general debility.

DELICATE FEMALES,

All irregularities and ailments incident to the delicate and tender organs of the sex are removed or prevented by a few doses of these mild but infallible alternatives. No mother who regards her own or her children's health should fail to have them within her reach.

The London "Lancet," the London "Medical Review," and the most eminent of the faculty to Great Britain, France and Germany, have eulogized the Pills and their inventor.

Will be Offered To

CASH & READY PAY

CUSTOMERS

AT THE

OF

B. J. BIDWELL.

Chicago Street, Tecumseh,

I am now opening a Large, and Great Assortment of

Dry Goods and Groceries,

and shall be receiving from week to week through the Season, any Goods that may be wanted, from the Eastern Manufacturers and Jobbers of

New York, Boston

and Other Cities in the East.

I have tried during Nineteen Years of my life the various modes of doing business

Firstly for Cash.
Secondly on Short Credit.
Thirdly, had to take Long Credit, Orders and Accounts.

Lastly, I have been compelled to wait payment of Goods sold on Six Months long enough for a man to visit California, get rich, and return, before payment could be forced or coaxed.

Now I wish to say, to my numerous friends and patrons, that I am thoroughly convinced that the mode of buying goods on time is both injurious to the buyer and seller.

I will hereafter Sell for Ready pay, at such prices that will defy all competion in the Town, State, or the United States.

No one should buy a dollars worth of Goods without calling at the

Great Western Cash Store,

and get the prices. Some are so unfortunate as to be compelled to trade at long credit stores—to those I would say, Call and see what you can save by having the Ready, and something as good, to use where you please wanted.

Call one and all, I wish to see the light of your countenance, and the cash from your pockets.

B. J. BIDWELL.

Thoughts.

They come when the sunlight
Is bright on the mountain;
They come when the moonlight
Is white on the fountain;
At morn and at even,
By minutes and hours,
But not as they once were,
Of birds and of flowers.

They come when some token
Of past days will rise,
As a link to the present,
And then they bring sighs;
They come when some dreaming,
Through hopes and through fears,
Rushes on to the future,
And then they bring tears.

They come when the sea mist
O'er ocean is rife,
And they tell of a shadow
That hangs over life;
They come when the storm
In thunder and gloom
Spreads round, and they speak
Of the earth and the tomb.

They come when the ripple
Is low on the lake,
And the plover is nestling
By fountain or brake;
And the twilight looks out
With a star on his breast,
And they whisper, that all
But themselves are at rest.

They come when the low breeze
Is fanning the leaves;
They come when the flower cup
The dew-drop receives;
By night's noontide silence,
By day's noontide hum,
And at times, oh, how deeply
And darkly they come.

A Snake Tale.

Says the lawyer: "Animals sometimes very nearly approach reason in their cunning. I got interested in the study of serpents down in Arkansas, where I spent the most of last year. I don't know why, but I was constantly watching them in new situations, and surrounding them with novel expedients. Of all kinds, I experimented most with rattlesnakes and copperheads. One afternoon I seated myself on a little knoll in the woods, to smoke and read—for I always had a book or newspaper with me—and had been enjoying myself for some time, when I espied a copperhead making for a hole within ten feet of where I sat. Of course I threw down my book and cigar, and proceeded to try a new experiment. As soon as I stirred the rascal made a rush for the whole; but I caught his tale as he got nearly in, and jerked him some twenty feet backward. He threw himself into a coil in no time, and waited for me to pitch in. But I concluded to let him try his hole again. After a while he started for it, stopping when I stirred to coil himself up; but I kept pretty quiet, he recovered confidence and again went in. Again I jerked him out. No sooner did he hit the ground than he made a grand rush for the hole in a straight line for my legs!

But that did'nt work, for I got out of the way, and gave him another flirt!—This time he lay still awhile, appearing to reflect on the course to be taken. After a time he tried again, though rather slowly. After getting his head a little way in, he stopped and wiggled his tail, as if on purpose for me to grab it. I did so; and quicker than a flash he drew his head out, and came within a quarter of an inch of striking me in the face. However, I jerked him quite a distance, and resolved to look out next time. Well he tried the same game again, but it would'nt work—I was too quick for him. This time he lay in a coil half an hour without moving. At last, however, he tried it once more. He advanced to within five feet of the hole very slowly, coiled again, and and then, by heavens! he got the start of me by one of the cutest tricks you ever heard of."

"How was it?" we all exclaimed in one breath.

"Why," said the narrator, sinking his voice to the acme of solemnity, and looking as honest and sober as a man could look, "why he just turned his head towards my hand, and went down that hole tail first!"

COUNTERFEITORS.—Nearly every good and really meritorious article of the present day, as soon as it acquires a reputation for value by those who have tested its qualities, is Counterfieted by unprincipled parties who attempt to palm it off upon the public as genuine.

Messrs. LEA & PERRINS, of Worcester England, some fifteen years since, introduced to the notice of the American public their Worcestershire Sauce, through their agents, Messrs. J DUNCAN & SONS, of New York. From that time to this the demand has rapidly increased, till it is now known and appreciated throughout the Union. That the public may distinguish the "Genuine" from the "Spurious" we call attenion the advertisement of Messrs. DUNCAN & SONS in our paper. —Toledo Blade.

Papa Goes There.

BY MRS. CAROLINE A. SOULE.

'Mayn't I go with you, papa? Please say I may, won't you?'

The words were uttered in a plantive and sadly entreating tone, the hands of the speaker clasping the knees of the listener.

It was a boy of seven years old who lisped them; a beautiful boy, with a fair, high brow, around which there clustered a glorious wreath of Auburn curls, with dark, flashing eyes, cheeks rosey with health, lips like the cherries of summer, and a voice like the birds that taste them. There were tears in those eyes at this time, though, and the dimpled mouth was quivering.

It was a man of some five and thirty who listened to this plea; a man who had been of noble looks and princely bearing. Aye, had been! for the blighting truth was written all over form and face. His locks were matted, his forehead scowling, and his eyes—red, but not with tears; there were furrows on his cheeks, too, and a brutish look in the expression of his lips.

Twice did the little boy address him ere he answered. Then pushing the child rudely from him, he said in a stern voice, 'No, no, it's no place for you.'

Again those fair, small hands encircled the knees.

'You go, papa. Why can't I too? Do let me go.'

For a moment the heart of the inebriate seemed to wake from its sleep. He shuddered as he thought of the character of the place his pure souled child would enter. He took the boy tenderly in his arms and kissed him as of old, then putting him down he said kindly:

'You must not ask me again to take you there. It's no place for little boys,' and seizing his hat he hurried from the room, murmuring to himself as he paced the way to the brilliant bar room, and no place for men either. Would to God I had never gone.'

For a long time Willie stood where his father had left him; then turning to the few embers that faintly glowed upon the hearth, he sat down in his little chair and resting his head upon his mother's lap, said earnestly:

'Mamma, why isn't that pretty store a good place for little boys? Papa loves to be there.'

It was a trying question for the poor, heart-broken woman.

She had so far kept from her son the knowledge of his fathers' sin. She could not bear that he should look with shame upon him, or that his pure and gentle heart should thus commune with so intense a grief. Kindly she toyed with his long ringlets for a while, and then said endearingly:

'Papa knows better than you what is best for his little boy. When you grow older you will learn why he did not wish to take you.'

Then rising, she carefully put down her little babe upon its bed, and tied on her hood and cloak.

'Mind the cradle now, Willie, I'll come back soon and then you shall have some supper, and a nice fire to sit by too,' and taking a large basket of ironed clothes she went out.

A wealthy woman would have been frightened at the thought only of leaving so young a baby at nightfall, all alone with an infant to care for, and an open fire place to sit beside.

But poor Mrs. M. knew well she could trust Willie with sister, and as for their burning up, there was not coal enough to thaw his blue, stiff fingers. No, she did not fear to go and leave him, for he had been thus left many a time, and always carefully obeyed her.

And he meant to now; but poor little fellow, his thoughts would wander to that brilliant corner store, whither he knew his father always went at evening; and his brain was busy with cgar wonderings. He knew his father loved to go, and he knew there must be something that he liked, for he never came home again till long after Willie was asleep. What lay behind those scarlet curtains was a mystery he sought to unravel.

At length he whispered eagerly, as if to encourage a longing wish:

'Papa used to tell me, if I wanted to know anything very bad, to persevere and I would find it out. Now I want to know what makes him love to go there so. I know that there must be some pretty things behind those curtains. I shouldn't wonder'—and his cheeks were glowing—'if it was like a fairy house. Why can't I go!'

Poor Willie! The temptation to go was too strong to be resisted; so he hunted through the closet for a candle, for he was a thoughtful little fellow, and won't not leave his little sister to the only danger that could menance her, and the flame might scare away the rats and mice should they sally out ere his return.

'I won't stay long, pretty one,' said he pressing a tender kiss on her sleeping lips, and drawing the blanket close around her fair arms. 'No, I'll come back soon, but I do so want to take one peep.'

Swiftly his little feet bore him over the pavement, and in a trice, he stood before the curtained door.

How very light it is, and how they laugh and talk. It must all be very funny there.'

A cold November blast swept around the corner as he spoke, penetrating his worn summer clothes, and causing his flesh to quiver.

'I don't believe they'd hurt me, if I should go in awhile; and I am such a litte boy, and I am so cold out here,' he said as he pushed the door carefully from him, slipping in, and closing it without a breath of noise.

For a moment he was bewildered with the light and clatter, and half wished he were away. But the warm air was grateful to his limbs, and finding that no one seemed to notice him, he stole toward the glowing grate and spread out his purple palms before the blaze. The group of men that encircled the bar were drinking when he entered. Soon, however, they sat down their glasses and dispersed about the rooms.

'Hallo,' said one in a loud tone, as, going to the fire, he spied little Willie.—'What are you doing here my little fellow? Who are you? and what do you want?'

'I don't want anything, only to see what you do here. My name is Willie M. My papa loves to come here, and it looked so pleasant through the window, I thought I'd like to come in. But I must not stay long, for I've left the baby all alone.'

'And where is your mother, boy?

'Oh, she's gone to take home the wash, sir. Papa don't have as much work as he used to once, and we are very poor now, and she has to help him.'

'And does it look as pleasant here as you thought it would, my child?'

'Oh, yes, it does, sir. I don't wonder that papa loves to come here so much, it's so cold and dark at home. But I should think he'd bring mamma and me and little sis. How she would laugh to see this fire and all those pretty bottles, and those flowers with lights in them. Please sir,' and earnestly seized the rough hands of the listener, 'please sir, tell me why little boys can't come here with their papa?'

'For God's sake, do not tell him, Bancroft!' said a deep anguished voice. 'He deems me pure and holy. Heavens!—what a wretch I am! My boy, my boy! you have saved me from earth's vilest hell. Here with my hand upon this sinless brow, I promise never again to touch the cup I have drank so deep. And my brothers in sin, as you value your soul's salvation, tempt me not to break my vow. Help me, heaven—help me so to live hereafter, that go where he will, papa may never blush to take his boy along—that if papa goes there Willie may go too.'

Silently the door closed after them, and silence dwelt in the saloon behind them The preacher had been there in cherub form, and crazy, loose, unholy thought or light and ribald jest was hushed One by one they stole away, and many a wife wore smiles that night; nor did the old bar tender, even, curse the little one that robbed him of so many dimes. Too deep in his heart had sunk the voice of that little cherub preacher.

'Don't you like me, papa?' asked Willie in a hesitating tone, as they stood for a few moments on the pavement; for the scene in the bar-room was and enigma to him, and he half feared a reproof.

'I was thinking what mamma would like best for supper,' said the father.

'Was you? was you?' was the eager question in a gladsome voice. 'Oh, then I know you ain't cross. Oh, get oysters and crackers, and tea, papa, and a candle 'cause there is only a piece. And please papa, tell mamma not to be cross at me, 'cause I left the baby. I don't believe she will though, 'cause you know if I hadn't gone as I did, you wouldn't perhaps come home yet, and she does love to have you home so much. O, I feel just like crying I am so glad.'

'And I feel like crying, too,' said his father solemnly; and ere midnight he did cry, and his wife too, but they were holy tears, washing his heart of the dust that had gathered on its beauty, and hers of the sorrow that had draped it as a pall.—Flag of our Union.

Praise Your Wife.

Praise your wife, man; for pity's sake give her a little encouragement; it won't hurt her. She has made your home comfortable, your heart bright and shining, your food agreeable; for pity's sake tell her you thank her, if nothing more. She don't expect it; it will make her eyes open wider than they have for these ten years, but it will do her good for all that, and you too.

There are many women to day thirsting for a word of praise, the language of encouragement. Through summer's heat and winter's toil, they have drudged uncomplainingly, and so accustomed have their fathers, brothers and husbands become to their monotonous labors, that they look for and upon them as they do the daily rising of the sun and its daily going down. Homely every-day life may be made beautiful by an appreciation of of its very homeliness. You know that if the floor is clean, manual labor has been performed to make it so. You know that if you can take from your drawer a clean shirt whenever you want it, that somebody's fingers have ached in the toil of making it so fresh and agreeable, so smooth and lustrous. Everything that pleases the eye and the sense has been produced by constant work, much thought, great care and untiring efforts, bodily and mentally.

It is not that many men do not appreciate these things, and feel a glow of gratitude for the numberless attentions bestowed upon them in sickness and in health, but they are so selfish in that feeling. They don't come out with a hearty "Why how pleasant you make things look, wife!" or, "I am obliged to you for taking so much pains!" They thank the taylor for giving them "fits," they thank the man in a full omnibus who gives them a seat; they thank the young lady who moves along in the concert-room—in short, they thank everybody and everything out of doors because it is the custom, and come home, tip their chairs back, and their heels up, pull out the newspaper, grumble if wife asks them to take the baby, scold if the fire has got down, or, if everything is just right, shut their mouths with a smack of satisfaction, but never say to her, "I thank you."

I tell you what, men, young and old, if you did but show an ordinary civility towards those common articles of housekeeping, your wives, if you gave the one hundred and sixtieth part of the compliments you almost choked them with before they were married, if you would stop the badinage about who you are going to have when No. 1 is dead, (such things wives may laugh at, but they sink deep sometimes,) if you would cease to speak of their fault, however banteringly, before others, fewer women would seek for other sources of happiness than your apparently cold, so-so-ish affection.—Praise your wife, then, for all good qualities she has, and you may rest assured that her deficiencies are fully counter balanced by your own.—Olive Branch.

GOOD COMMON SENSE.—A New England lady thus discourses on "down trodden women."

Believe me we (women) are not so much slaves to the tyrany of husbands, dinners, children and servants, as to ourselves and false social customs. We are afraid of each other. We don't live in reference to comfort, or to our own means but to what people say of us, or think of us and to overtop this one or the other.—I have seen and known women, fitted to adorn any society in this country or any other, that did their own work, took care of their own children, kept bright hearth stones and happy husbands, and found time to keep up with current literature, write memorandums and copy poetry—It is not necessary, but artificial labor that makes our women drudges. Eternal house cleaning, begining in March and lasting till May—again in September, and lasting till Thanksgiving. It is a pride of appearance, being thought good livers and crack housekeepers—for let women say what they will, the are as jealous of this as poets or politicians are of each other.

From the reports of the 52 savings Banks in New York State it appears that the deposits in 1856 were $22,363,855 being an increase of nearly $4,000,000 over 1855. There 204,375 depositors.—In New York and Brooklyn the year's deposits foot up $16,308,299. The entire sum now held by the Savings Banks is nearly 42,000,000—an increase of five and a half millions for the year.

The Charms of Life.

There are a thousand things in this world to afflict and sadden—but, oh, how many more are beautiful and good! The world is full of beauty, and teems with objects that gladden the eye and warm the heart. We might be happy if we would. There are some ills we cannot escape; the approach of disease; misfortune; but a vast majority of the evils which beset us must be avoided.

The curse of intemperance, interwoven as it is, with all the ligaments of society, is one which strikes but to destroy.—There is not one bright spot on the record of its progress; nothing to shield it from the hearty execration of the whole human race. It should not exist; do away with it; let temperance, love and charity prevail, and mark the change.

We are too selfish, as if the world were made for us alone. How much happier we should be, were we to labor to promote each other's good.

God has blessed us with a home which is not at all dark. There is sunshine everywhere—in the sky, upon the earth, and there would be sunshine in our hearts did we but live aright. The storms die away and a bright sun shines out. Summer drops her tinted curtain upon the earth, which is very beautiful, even when autumn breathes her breath upon it. God reigns in heaven. Murmur not at a being so bountiful, and we can live happier than we do.—Rev. J. Pierpont.

JOTTINGS FROM A SERMON BY REV. H. W. BEECHER.—"To aim a large spear at a shield will make a large hole, but will not impair the brightness of its surface. But puncture it all over with little needles, and its surface becomes blurred and dimmed. So with our moral natures. It is not great crimes and sins, but these ten thousand contemptible little every-day meannesses in the house and in the store, of which every man is full, that destroys the tone and dims the brightness of our moral natures. Men cry out what great sinners they are and what great hypocrites. God knows they are mean little hypocrites."

"Suppose that by a miracle, our words could be transformed to little arrows, each one of our family would be a walking pincushion."

"All our praying and weeping in private closets for your children will be of no effect if not assisted by your example before them. It was the observation of those unguarded acts, and the examples of my father, that had most effect upon me. I well recollect one instance when a man came in to him like an east wind, about some fancied injury. My father listened to him with calmness and forbearance until he had blown himself all out, and talked over the matter camly and dispassionately, sifted it thoroughly, and by his explanation and manner brought tears to the man's eyes, who grasped his hand and asked his forgiveness for having himself been the aggressor. This one act in my father's life has done me more good in that respect than all his preaching."

THE OTHER SIDE.—Once in a happy home, a sweet, bright baby died. On the evening of the day, when the children gathered around their mother, all sitting very sorrowful, Alice, the eldest, said:

"Mother, you took all the care of the baby while she was here, and you carried and held her in your arms all the while she was ill; now mother, who took her on the other side?"

"On the other side of what, Alice?"

"On the other side of death; who took the baby on the other side, mother? She was so little she could not go alone."

"Jesus met her there," answered the mother. 'It is he who took little children in his arms to bless them, and said, 'Suffer them to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven.' He took the baby on the other side."

The Poultry value of the United States at this moment is not far from $25,000,000. The poultry kept in the State of New York alone is probably worth $3,000,000; the city of New York expends no less than $2,000,000 per year for eggs. If every individual in this city alone would abstain from the use of eggs directly and indirectly for the space of 1 year, and those eggs were at once put under hens and hatched, not far from $38,000,000 would be added to the poultry value of those localities which send eggs to this vast city.

A publisher has issued a work called "Every Man a lawyer." What a state of society.

The Sparkling Bowl Too Long

The Sparkling bowl too long,
Our happiness must be destroy
For some had dranned how strong
Its fetters to enclose,
Nor deemed its mild and gentle flow
Could prove a maiden foe.

But when the mighty fell,
Like warriors on the plain,
And death its fearful spell
The strong were lowered again.
We learned that foe was still the same,
Whether its form, what'er its name!

So pledge we heart and hand
The mocker to oppose,
And banish from our land
This harbinger of woes,
To crush the fiend on every shore,
Till he shall vex the earth no more. R.

Metoric Phenomenon.

CARBONDALE, Pa., June 20, '57

A strange and startling phenomenon took place near this city just at sunset last evening. A large cloud was seen to make its appearance, coming directly from the northwest accompanied by considerable wind. When near this place a dark looking cloud or substance was seen to leave the cloud and make diogonally for the earth. So soon as it struck the ground contrary to all expectation, it became highly luminous. Making directly for a large barn that stood in the field, it passed through its centre, setting it on fire and continued its course, gaining in velocity as far as the eye could reach, making a straight course for the woods melting stones of considerable size, and burning up brush and underwood, making a complete road, of more than a rod in width, for the distance of three miles, and finally fetching up against a perpendicular breast of solid anthracite coal of 60 feet in thickness, proving rather much too for its cometship, leaving nothing but a sulphurous mass behind. Yours,

P. JOHNSON.

Sentencing the Prisoners.

The following prisoners were sentenced at the last Circuit Court.

——Decker, larceny, 3 years in the penitentiary.

Peter Reasoner, passing counterfeit money, 4 years. ——Gains, same offence 2 years. Lewis Canant, ditto 3 years.

W. Greanleaf and William Wells, manslaughter, 15 years each.

The trial of A. Sigler, for murder, resulted in his acquittal. Austin B Gillet one of the witnesses for the prosecution absconded before giving his evidence.—Mr. Sigler was held in the sum of $500, to appear at the next term of the Court to answer to an indictment found against him for abandonment.

The China War.

The last European mail brings many curious speculations on the prospects of the China war which has now become a serious reality. One writer thinks the English will find themselves in a difficult if not dangerous position before it is over They may destroy Canton, but cannot hold it, no more than any other important point.

The country north of Canton as far as Shanghaic and Nankin, is in the hands of the Chinese insurgents, whom it would be bad policy to offend; and north of Nankin the only point an attack on which might lead to a decisve result is Pekin—But where is the army to form a fortified and garisioned base of operations on the shore, to overcome every obstacle on the road, to leave detachments to secure the communications with the shore, and to appear in anthing like formidable strength before the walls of a town, the size of London, a hundred miles from its landing place?

On the other hand, says the same writer, the capture of the capital, if possible would shake to its very centre the Celestial Empire itself, and it is probable that some such plan will ultimately be determined on.

This is emphatically a fast age, and we as Americans are in this respect the people of the age. While there is much to admire and commend in this, it still has its extremes and disadvantages which need to be guarded against.

It is one of the most difficult things in the world while making haste, to learn to "make haste slowly."

"Haste makes waste" is an adage almost as old as the old Latin one above quoted. But it is not so much the waste, as the superficiality which it is likely to induce, that we had in mind in making the quotation. In the hot haste of the age after wealth, and enterprise, honor and power, permanent foundations, and improvement are too apt to be over-looked or forgotten. Whatever is to be acquired only by patience and persevering application is but too apt to be discarded, as unsuited to the times, and exigencies of the age.

While the result of this impetuous restless energy, is the achievement of an almost fabulous progress, as compared with the time and means employed, yet in this there is necessarily much that is overlooked, calling often for the considerate warning of the old Roman poet.

It does not add to the happiness of men that they should thus live in the constant whirlpool of excitement; it is better that they should at times float more calmly upon the still waters of life's ebbing tide. But it is far less injurious to those whose characters are formed, and who have passed into the full and fixed career of life, than to the plastic character of youth.

Here the result of too much haste is much more dangerous and permanent—Impatient of restraint and delay, the more tedious process of thorough education, and a severe mental discipline is thrown aside, for some more rapid and superficial course, to the great detriment and loss of an after lifetime. The young man while still meditating upon that course of mental training which is to fit him for the exegencies of after life, will do well to ponder the full import and wisdom of the time honored injunction, to make haste slowly. To none is it better adapted, nor do any need it more than he.

There is haste, and a sure irresistable progress in his very progress. It may not be seen or felt at first, it may be many weary months in coming to the light, but it will at last appear to the honor and praise of those who have had the the patience and foresight to act upon its precepts, and to the rebuke and shame of those who in their greater haste have seen fit to disregard them.

The 4th, at Hillsdale.

The celebration at Hillsdale was a proud day for her citizens. The hospitality and politeness extended by them to their guests was such as one seldom meets, but long remember. Hillsdale can boast of three fire companies, a hook and ladder, military, brass band, and a good supply of rob'e hearted citizens, all of which unite like brothers in the support of their organized companies, and know what is for the interest of their village. Capt. Flint and the gentlemen of the Hillsdale Light Guard, done the honors in fine style, and are worthy of the praise and thanks of their guests. The firemen were a splendid set of fellows, as were also the companies from Cold Water and Hudson, not excepting "Young America." The Ball on the evening of the 3d, was a magnificient one, which represented a unity of different classes in one common enjoyment, that we never before witnessed.

The thanks of all are due to Hon Henry Waldron, Pros. Atty. Pratt, F. Gridley, James Baldy and the citizens generally for delicious refreshments and other kind favors received. Orson Hoag fully sustained his well earned reputation as a caterer, and induced his friends to be happy.

Much credit is due Col. Holloway and staff, for valuable services.

We are personally under obligations to our typo friend Rowlson of the Standard for favors while 'off duty'

We were compelled to leave before the display of fireworks took place, but learn that they were beautiful.

That excellent company, the Adrian Guards, and their jolly Capt. F. HART, were on hand with their kindness, ready-wit and superior disciplin, which make them worthy of admiration, both as citizens and soldiers Adrian may well be proud of them. May their new friendship with our band grow as old as the hills.

At the great Bunker Hill celebation there were 1500 free masons in full regalia. Five regiments of military marched in the procession, which was one hour and a half in passing a given point

OFFICE DYE'S WALL STREET BUCKET, June 26th 10 o'clock A. M.

The Bank of South Royalton, South Royalton, Vt., has failed this day at 10 o'clock.

A dispute among the Stockholders has caused a legal investigation. Thus the Bank has been enjoyed. The notes are secured by deposit of Virginia State Stocks and bonds and mortgages.

Also the Seneca County Bank, Tiffin, Ohio, has failed.

All the securities of this Bank have been taken, and used by the defalting treasurer; the bills may be set down as worthless, unless the State makes up the defalcations of its treasurer, which amount to $800,000. We think the people of the great State of Ohio will make up the Deficiency.

Also, the Zimmerman Bank, Elgin, Canada, has closed its doors. The great bribery and corruption has cast a dark shadow over it. It was conceived in sin, and has died of its own poison.

A package of $1000 has been lost or stolen of the Metacomet Bank, and is advertised as being fifties numbered from 414 to 433. John S. Dye, 70 wall st

Another of the Captive Women Rescued.

The Equator arrived last evening from Red Wood Agency, having on board Messrs Robertson and Campbell, Indian traders of Red Wood and Yellow Medicine, and the Sioux Indians sent out by Mayor Flandrau to ransom the captive women, Mrs. Noble and Miss Gardner. They were accompanied by one of, and the only surviving captive woman taken at the Spirit Lake massacre, Miss Gardner. It seems, from what we could glean, these Indians proceeded on their march to a band of Yanctons, numbering some 190 lodges. On their way they came acoss the trail of the outlawed Sioux who committed the Spirit Lake and Springfield outrages which they followed, and found the murdered body of Mrs. Noble. On arriving among the Yanctons, the found and effected the purchase of Miss Gardner

The manner of Mrs. Noble's death was as follows: The captives, Mrs. N. and Miss Gardner—had been obtained from Iuk-pa dutah, one of the out-lawed ruffians, by a Yancton Indian, and were in his lodge, encamped on a large prairie; that Iuk-pa dutah came into the lodge at night, and told Mrs. N. to go on the outside of the tent. Mrs. N. refused, saying she would rather stay inside if they killed her. She was then seized and carried out, when she was murdered in a most brutal manner.

Miss Gardner is a young girl, apparently not more than fifteen, of an interesting appearance, and modest behavior. She is left in the world an orphan and friendless. Her father, mother, sister, brother-in-law and family were all massacred.—She has but an only sister in the vincinity of Fort Dodge, Iowa, to whom Miss G. proposes to go. We learn that last evening a subscription was started for her, and many generous donations made by citizens and strangers who were at the Fuller.—This is a commendable move in which we hope a generous-hearted public will readily respond.—St. Paul Minnesotian. 23d inst.

Speech by a Man 117 Years of age.

The early settlers of Wisconsin have recently been having a good time at Madison in that State. The Madison Journal, gives a report of the remarks of Joseph Crelie, said to be 117 years of age. The speech was spoiled by the fine touches of the reporter, who made the old man talk in polished sentences. It would have been infinitely better had his own simple words been given. He said:

A native of Detroit, I was partly raised at Kaskaskia and Prairie du Roche, in Illinois, and subsequently became an inhabitant of St Louis under Spanish rule, and for many years in the last century was engaged as a voyageur between St. Louis and Prairie du Chien, via Wisconsin and Fox rivers, and Mackinaw. I was in 1814, a participant with the Americans in the conflict at Prairie du Chien, and served as an express carrier in the Black Hawk war where a companion was shot dead by my side by the stealthy Indians in ambuscade; being myself a Frenchman and my wife related to the Indians, I have reason to believe I was purposely spared Forty-one years ago, I located at the Wisconsin Portage, and nearly a third of a century since, I was a mail carrier between Mineral Point and Green Bay. It has fallen to my lot to live successively in the same country under French, British, Spanish and American government.

ALBANY, July 8.

A very large number of strangers are in this city. The streets present a fine appearance, every building on the line of march of the funeral being draped in mourning. Ex-Governors Seymour, Hunt and Fish arrived here last night, and Ex-Presidents Van Buren and Pierce have just arrived. The two Ex Presidents were received by the millitary of Syracuse and Utica and the Burges corps of this place. The funeral will take place at three o'clock this afternoon.

From the New Times.

New York in Barricade:

The City—particularly that portion of it embraced within the Sixth Ward—has been in a state of riot since Saturday morning. An organized band of ruffians residing in and about Mulberry street, and known as the "Roach Guards," began an affray which has ended in the loss of six lives and the wounding of over one hundred men. They began by making an onslaught, with knives and pistols, upon the Metropolitan Policeman, who were on duty near the Bowery Theatre. The officers were forced to fly. The same gang, being re-inforced, assailed the drinking saloon No 40 Bowery, the fixtures of which they demolished, after assaulting the inmates, whom they suspected of being members of another antagonistic Club, known as the "Atlantic Guards." By great exertions on the part of the police, and private citizens who aided the police, this difficulty was temporarily quelled, but not until a dozen persons had been more or less injured by bludgeons and pistol balls. The riot broke out afresh later in the day, and the with such violence, that the police, in attempting to supress it, were badly beaten being assailed from house-tops and windows all along Bayard and Mulberry sts, where the rival "Guards" were met fighting from behind barricades. Fire arms were brought into requisition by the rioters, 6 of whom were killed and seventy or eighty wounded. Not any of the police, were killed; but one, a special officer, named Jenkins, is lying at the city hospital, mortally wounded, it is feared.—Some others it is thought will die of their injuries. The fight was ended about night fall—about the time that three regiments were called out to maintin order—Comparative quiet reigned the remainder of the night. A large number of the rioters were captured by the police.

On Sunday there was not much fighting until near seven o'clock, when a riot broke out in Centre and Anthony streets, in which sticks, stones, and bricks from the chimneys of the houses, and guns and pistols were freely used, and with effect.—Nine men were seriously wounded, and taken to the Hospital. Finally the military were marched up and down the Wards and the rioters dispersed. There were lesser riots in other parts City. In Bayard street, barricades were again erected, but after the military appeared, they were removed without violence.—At midnight all was quiet, and only one regiment was to remain under arms until morning.

The Chain gang not a Legal Institution.

Judge Burgoyne decides that the Chain Gang is not constitutional. The question came up before him yesterday on a writ of habeous corpus. Abram Cross was arrested at the instance of L. M. Hazen, charged with petty larceny, having on the 13th ult., stolen $30 in gold coin and 75 cents in silver coin, the property of Mary Pettman, and was subsequently convicted before the Police Judge, and sentenced to six months hard labor on the chain gang, and to pay $18 68 costs.—He was brought before Judge Burgoyne on a writ of habeaus corpus, alledging that he was illegally confined, because the law under which the Police Judge acted is unconstitutional, being a violation of the clause which provides that laws of a general nature shall have uniform operation throughout the State.

The Chain gang had its origin in the law of March, 1845. which allowed Courts instead of sentencing prisoners to confinement in the county jail, to put them to hard labor in the jail-not exceeding six months at the discretion of the Court, and the work performed was to be under the direction of the County Commissioners. The operation of the law was further restricted in its operations in 1845 to the counties of Hamilton and Cuyahoga.—It was claimed that the restrictive clause operated under the Constitution to repeal the entire statute. His honor remarked that the case should be taken before a Court where a precedent could be obtained, which would settle the question one way or the other, so that the Police Judge would cease sending prisoners to the chain gang, or that counsel for the prisoners would cease applying for writ of habeaus corpus in similar cases. He held that the Constitution abrogated the law on which the chain gang was founded. He declined to intefere in this cuase, referring it to the Judges of the Superior Court or the Court of Common Pleas, and the prisoner was remanded to jail.—Cin Com.

MASSACRE ON THE PLAINS.—The St Louis Democrat, of the 22nd, publishes a letter from Leaveworth, dated June 18 which says; "I open this letter to give you information of the horrible massacre and destruction of an overland emigrant train to California, of which intelligence has just been received here. The train, which consisted of 17 waggons when about 100 miles west of Fort Kearney, was attacked by a part of Sioux or Cheyenne Indians, who murdered every person in it—men, women and children—burnt the waggons and drove off the cattle. The number of persons on the train is said to have been about twenty.

General News.

DETROIT, July 6.

A row occurred here last night in endeavoring to quell which Deputy Sheriff Small and Austin received severe injuries, from the effects of which Small died this morning, and Austin lies in a precarious situation. 12 arrests were made.

NEW YORK, July 6.

Several riots occurred in this city yesterday, the most serious of which originated in Bowery. The fight continued with great ferocity for an hour. Clubs, stones, bottles, and fire arms were freely used. The Five Pointers were gradually driven back and beaten.

Eight persons were killed in this riot, and about thirty, including several policemen, wounded. At one time, the rioters had the streets barricaded, defying the policemen, of whom more than one hundred were present. Three regiments of State troops were ordered out and kept in reserve; but their services were not required, as the riot was finally suppressed by the exertions of the police.

In the minor riots which occurred during the day, two persons were killed, and twenty or thirty badly wound. In nearly all the disturbances, the ex-police men were conspicuous actors.

With the exception of these riots among the rowdies, the day passed off finely.—The weather was propitious. The military and civil displays were brilliant and imposing. The fire works at Brooklyn, Williamsburg, and other suburs were of the most gorgeous description. The pyrotechnic display of the city proper was postponed, on account of partial damage to the pieces, caused by the damp weather of the week.

Flying rumors of additional riots are floating about this evening, but are without foundation. The military are under arms, prepared to act with decision.

ALBANY, July 6.

The Hon. Wm. L. Marcy died at Ballston Spa, at noon, Saturday

He complained of a slight stitch in his side, which had troubled him for some time, and then walked about a quarter of a mile to Dr. Moore's, but not finding the Dr. in, he returned to the hotel and went to his room, leaving an order at the office that the Dr. should be sent to him.

Dr. M. soon arrived, and upon going to his room found him dead. His remains will be brought to Albany on Tuesday at 1 o'clock, in a special train—furnished by Mr. Corning—in charge of the Burgess Corps, and will be deposited in the Capitol in this city.

NEW YORK, July 6.

The Collins Steamer Columbia arrived early this A. M. from Liverpool, bringing dates of June 24th. The Arabia arrived out 21st.

GREAT BRITAIN.—In the House of Lords on Monday, the Lord Chancellor stated that the opinion of the law officers of the crown had not yet been taken in reference to the trade of India and China.

The steamer Niagara, having completed her alterations, left Portsmouth on the 20th, and will forthwith commence receiving the telegraph cable on board.

The grain crops were in fine condition, and it was believed that the grade disease had disappeared.

ST. LOUIS, July 6.

We have received Kansas dates to the third.

A Democratic Convention, to nominate a candidate for Congress, met at Lecompton on the second. Judge Elmore presided

Ex-Governor Ransom, of Michigan, was nominated, by a two thirds vote, over Ely Moore, of New York.

Resolutions endorsing the policy of Governor Walker, and expressing a determination to support him, were adopted.

A resolution to adopt the Constitution to be framed by the Constitutional Convention, whether it is submitted to the people or not, was lost by a vote of forty to one.

NEW YORK, July 6.

The city remained quiet through the day until sundown: the military will be on duty to night. Major General Sandford, who has been absent since Saturday afternoon, returned to day, and will resume the command.

The captains of the police held a meeting to day, arranged to hand over all the property in the Station Houses and close them.

A caucus of Democratic Councilmen was held to-day, to consider the question of surrendering the Station Houses to the Metropolitans. It is understood that the majority was in favor of the measure. It will be discussed in the Board to-night.

One of the Metropolitan police, who was beaten on Saturday, is lying in a very critical condition.

A lad named Buckley, aged thirteen, died at the Hospital last night from wounds received in the riot on Saturday.

Several of the rioters were examined to-day before Justice Osborn, and seven of them, who were taken, with weapons in their hands, in the act of resisting the officers, were committed for trial, bail being refused. Their names are Patrick Moore, Owen Kevlin, Pat. McBride, Barney Gallagher, Bernard McGeevers, Patrick Mooney and Bernard Dye.

The cannon captured in the Bowery by a squad of the 71st regiment, has been sent to the armory of that regiment as a trophy.

WASHINGTON, July 6.

The New Orleans papers are at hand by arrival of the mails as late as due.—Accounts of the crops in Texas are very favorable.

ST. LOUIS, July 6.

The Deseret News of May 27th announces the return of Bingham Young and party after an absence of sixteen days.

The prospects for a plenteous harvest are flattering.

ST. LOUIS, July 7.

The St. Joseph's Journal of the 2d inst. publishes a report brought by a French trader, that 100 troops and 50 teamsters, under the command of Colonel Sumner, were attacked by a large body of Cheyenne and Amaphoe Indians, 200 miles west of Fort Kearney, all slain.

The report is confirmed by a arriving from Pacific City, Iow also by an emigrant train from Sal

The Salt Lake mail arrived at pendence on the 30th But few Indians were seen on the route.

The emigrant train were doing well—The snow had all disappeared. Grass and water were abundant on the plains—The Mormons are anxious to know the character of the reports made by the returned officials, and were surprised at the bills respecting polygamy, before Congress. They treat Surveyor Burr's report with contempt and accuse him of making false statements regarding the country.

NEW YORK, July 7.

The Bark Panchela arrived here today, in charge of a British officer and crew from the river Congo, where she was seized as a slaver by the English Brig of War, Sappho

An arrival from Port Au Prince confirms the report of a disastrous fire at that place. It broke out at midnight on June 12th, and destroyed one hundred houses and stores. The loss is estimated at 1,000,000 Spanish Rix dollars.

Salt is abundant at Tiaqua and Fortrine islands and is selling at 10 cts. per bushel

ST. JOHNS, N. F. June 7.

The bath of fish off this Island has been rather better than the average business so far this season, and the business is going on prosperously.

The R. M. surveying steamer Cyclops has completed the coast soundings for the Atlantic Telegraph cable, which show a very bold shore and water, which are desirable to protect the cable at the point of landing. The Cyclops sailed for London yesterday, and will doubtless arrive on 21st inst., at which time the whole cable will have been placed on board the Agamemnon and Niagara.

NEW YORK, July 7.

Three peasons were drowned yesterday on Rocomkon Lake, by the upsetting of a pleasure boat. Their names are J. W Leslie, of the firm of G. P. Putnam & Co. booksellers, and Mr. and Mrs Porter, of the firm of Lane & Porter, dry goods dealers.

CINCINNATI, July 2.

The Cincinnati Rail Road Train on the Marietta & Cin. Road, while crossing the Trestle work, 12 miles west of Marietta yesterday morning. One car ran off and fell a distance of 53 feet, and smashed to pieces. There were 20 or 30 passengers in the car—4 were killed and 20 wounded.

WASHINGTON, July 2.

A large two-story brick building in the avenue, opposite the National Hotel, was fired by an incendiary and burnt down last night. It was owned by Littleton and Veall, and occupied by Reese, Gas fitter, Denuger, and Monck, Gun & Whitesmith. The Building was nearly valueless and uninsured. The aggregate loss of the occupants is from six to seven thousand dollars. Messrs. Monck and Reese were insured, but the loss of Deuger is not less than $3,000.

There was a tremenduous hail-storm at Fredericksburg between four and five o'clock yesterday, accompanied by trerific thunder. Some of the hail-stones were as large as hen's eggs.

All the windows on the windward side of the houses were demolished, and all the magnets in the telegraph office, except one, were burnt. The destruction of trees and crops, it is supposed, was immense.

The track of the Railroad from Aqua Creek to Fredericksburg was badly washed. Both of the railway trains were temporarily detained, and the one coming from the north was thrown from the track, and three passengers badly injured.

BOSTON, July 1.

The Republican State Convention met at Burlington to day, and nominated Ryland Fletcher for Governor, James for Lieut. Governor, and Henry M. Bates for Treasurer.

WHAT A PIECE OF WORK IS MAN! but how easily is that paragon of animals put out of order, and then unless immediate remedies are at hand, the paragon becomes a plague to himself and a source of mischief to his fellows. LATE DISCOVERIES IN PATHOLOGY show that very many of the diseases which afflict mankind arise from impurity of the blood. This has long been suspected but is only lately known. In consumption, tubercles are found to be a sedimentary deposite from the blood. Dropsy, Gout, Cancer, Ulcers, Eruptions, all arise in discovered departure from the blood. Billious diseases and fevers are caused solely by its deranged state, and even the decline of life follows want of vitality in the blood. In view of these facts Dr. AYER designed his Cathartic Pills especially to purify and invigorate the blood, and hence we believe to arise in a paralelled success in controlling and curing disease.—[Medical Journal

☞ It is a most undoubted fact that Sanford's Invigorator, or Liver Regulator, is one of the greatest discoveries made in medicine the past century. It has been the study of the Dr. during twenty years' practice to find what particular organ, when deranged caused the greatest number of ills of life, and his conclusion is, that the liver is the most liable to disease, while if kept free it is the greatest regulator of the system—most failure to disease, while if kept free it is a preventive. Dyspepsia, Headache, Jaundice, general debility, &c., while last but not least we mention consumption: from the experience is that more cases of consumption occur from deceased liver than from all other causes put together. Taking this as a correct hypothesis, we have but to find a remedy with which to correct the liver, and we have a cure of nearly all the diseases we are subject to by simply using a preventive. That the Invigorator is such a remedy is beyond a doubt to all who try it. Its virtues are such that for all complaints arising from liver derangements, it is a sovereign remedy, while as a family medicine for all diseases of the stomach or bowels which are caused in a greater or less degree by liver derongement, it is the safest, surest and most efficacious remedy known.

☞ The 4th, at Tecumseh, was all its warmest friends 'did' wish. A fight at the Mansion. More anon.

☞ Mr. Cassy, of Raisin, left with us a spear of wheat which stands 6 feet 4 inches high, a fair specimen of his 20 acre field. Who can beat it?

☞ We received the two first numbers of the Saturday Evening Chronotype, a new paper, published and edited by Chas. A. Washburn Esq., of Chicago, Ill. It is a beautiful sheet, and will be a valuable acquisition to our exchange list.

☞ We are under obligations to Hon. Henry Waldron, for the Congressional Globe, 3d ses. 34 Congress, neatly bound.

☞ On and after the 10th of July, our citizens are requested to shut up their cattle, pigs &c. by order of Mayor Hyde, backed by the village Fathers.

☞ By refering to our advertisments your will learn that Richards & VanTine are offering their splendid stock of Furniture Cheaper than was ever offered in this market.

☞ The new time table of the Jackson Branch R R is at the head of this column

☞ We notice the Harkness Buggy Rakes are for sale, at the Hard Ware Stores of this village. They are manufactured by S. Vernam, Esq. Those who have used them, say they beat the world and will twice pay their cost in one harvest.

☞ Pic Nic parties are all the go; we hear of their passing off in a style that reflects much credit on their originators. EDITOR TECUMSEH HERALD:

I notice in your last week's paper a notice of a seizure of counterband goods at the house of one Mr. Larkins, by officer Collins, on information of John Terry of Ohio, and S. Terry of Ridgway. It is true that a seizure was made at the place, and time stated, by Inspector Cutler, (not Collins) but not correct as to the source of the information. By the U. S Marine Laws, the informant's name is not the property of the public, and hence the errors into which your correspondent would lead your readers.

It is true I did assist the officer in the performance of his duty, and no good citizen could consistently do less when requested by the proper officers of our government; but my brother S. B Terry, had nothing whatever to do with the matter, except to issue a search warrant, which the duties of his office rendered obligatory upon him when demanded on proper authority. I hope your further (promised) particulars will be more fortunate in their proximity to truth.

Yours &c. J. T. TERRY.

☞ A Wisconsin paper, after describing a farm which the advertiser wants to sell, adds: "The surrounding country is the most beautiful the God of nature ever made. The scenery is celestial—divine; also two gous to sell, and a yoke of steers."

☞ At Adrian, the 4th, they had a time, considering the awful state of the ground, which was all afloat. Wharves were built around the dinner tables, and several ladies who had stepped off into aqua, were magnanimously rescued from a watery grave by the Hook & Ladder Company.—Toledo Blade.

Bach's American Compound

The extraordinary results which have been produced by the use of this Medicine, is spreading from one end of the world to the other. "THE BEECH DROP OR CANCER ROOT, A COMPOUND FLUID-EXTRACT of which enters into the combination, is beyond doubt, the most extraordinary vegetable ever known—The knowledge of its great virtues came from the North American Indian, by whom it was for the treatment and cure of CANCERS, and Rheumatism, Scrofula and Consumption. The Fluid Extract is so combined with other vegetable ingredients as to insure in the greatest perfection a powerful ALTERNATIVE and PURIFIER of the BLOOD.

To Monthly Nurses.

Bach's American Compound will cure every case you have under your charge of Cankered Sore Mouth, Sorres, Wasting sour mouth and sore Nipples. One bottle will cure any case, we care not of how long standing, or however aggravated. We annex certificates of cures.

To Females.

Bach's American Compound will cure of much pain and sunering. Are you week low spirited, with constant pain in the small of the back?—have you no appetite, no muscular energy? You need suffer no longer! this NEW VEGETABLE REMEDY will remove that pain, restore your appetite, and give you new strength and perfect health. This compound is also a sure and rapid cure for ulceration and cancerous diseases of the uteras, and an infallible remedy for Flour Albus, (or Whites.) These are not mere assertions to induce you to buy this medicine—we state these things as facts, because we have proofs of many cases in our possession—delicacy forbids making them public.

MOFFAT'S LIFE PILLS AND Phœnix Bitters

THE BEST FAMILY MEDICINE NOW before the public, for the cure of Scrofula, Ulcers, Scurvy, or Eruptions of the Skin, Fever and Ague, Dyspepsia, Dropsy, and in fact most all diseases soon yield to their curative properties

It has been computed that during the last twenty five years upwards of FOUR MILLIONS of persons have been benefited by the use of these medicines; a fact which speaks volumes in favor of their curative properties, a single trial will place them beyond the reach of competition in the estimate of every patient. By their use the BLOOD IS RESTORED TO A HEALTHY STATE and freed from all impurities. The system is not reduced during their operation, but invigorated, and they require no restraint from business or pleasure.

The afflicted have in these medicines a remedy that will do for them all that medicine can possibly effect

The Curculio—Peach Grub &c.

THE CURCULIO WHICH ATTACKS THE FRUIT.

For the best part of the following, I am indebted to my industrious and spirited young friend, JOHN KLECKLAER, of Tyrone, Schuyler Co., N.Y.

Finding that he and his neighbors were in a fair way to lose not only all their plums, but all their apricots, nectarines, and all stone fruits but peaches, by premature dropping, he resolved to take no one's word but to scrutinize the matter for himself.—Mounting the fence beside one of his affected trees, there, at first, he could discover no cause for the difficulty—unless he expeted a few specks of dirt on the plums. He then turned his attention to these apparently inanimate specks of dirt, scarcely larger than a hemp seed. Keeping perfectly quiet he soon detected some of these specks of dirt, in playing possum, or feigning dead, when alarmed. He now watched them closer. With a bill like a mosquito's but shorter, he observed them making; not stings but short curved scratches through the skin of fruit, till the liberated portion of the skin turned up; then, turning their other end to it the malicious little scoundrels, and depositing an egg in each puncture thus made. This suggested the disease. He now set himself to seek a cure.

On sudenly striking the tree a pretty heavy blow, every speck of dirt dropped off. He now procured 6 or 8 yards of sheeting, and cut it in two tranversly in the centre, and laying the two pieces together side by side his wife sewed them together nearly half their length. He next took two or three sticks, or pieces of sawed edging, one long enough to reach across the two breadths, at the joined end—the other two half that length, to attach the unjoined ends to. Having tacked the sheeting to these three pieces accordingly, he obtained the requisite assistance, and, approaching each threatened tree in succession, drew the seperate ends astradle, of the trunks and had the three ends so held out as to spread a broad horizontal lap under the bughs. Then with a long handled mallet suitably constructed, he struck the tree a blow sharp enough to drop every insect as well as every diseased plum. The sound fruit would not yeild to such a blow. Under each tree he collected a few, only a few such vermin at a time—each one of which 'smelt something burning' immediately. He repeated the process every few days till his fruit was ripe. The result was that he lost little or no more fruit and was; in due time rewarded with a fine crop of beautiful and lucious plums, &c.,—the only fortunate person in the neighborhood; and your humble servant had the next autumn, the pleasure of tasting at his hospitable board, fine large apricots, nicely prepared by his interesting wife, unfortunately a mute, but a highly creditable pupil of the N. Y. Institution for such. That visit will not be soon forgotten.

With the insect I had been before though imperfectly accquainted. But for the effective part of the knowledge and the easily practicable remedy, I am indebted to Mr. K.

As this species of the curculio is propogated and reproduced in a manner similar to that of other spieces, attacking the tree, it is obvious, that if the prematurely falling fruit is left to decay under the tree, the eggs will reproduce the evil augmented by multiplication. To eradicate the nuisance therefore, gather and destroy all such fruit, as fast as it falls.

Preserving Peach Trees.

Said a waggish friend to me once on a time. Every thing evil is laid to poor Satan! So the hard winters of climate have to catch it, for many of the fruits of our own neglect.—It is not they however that kill all the peach trees, even in our old Scoharie Co.

Often a prematurely warm June day in March or April, starts the sap spining up the trees, glossing the twigs, and swelling the buds to beautiful promise. Then follows a sharp or a cutting cold northeast wind freezing the sap thus raised, blighting the buds and killing the trees; and then its of no use trying to raise peaches any more; the time is gone by. And so it is, if we mean to fold our arms at it.

Remedy.—At the suggestion of my friend, Capt. Wm. B. CALKINS, of Seward, I began some years since to try the following: At a time in the winter when we judge that the ground is frozen as deeply as it will be we cover the roots of the trees for some distance around and to some depth with some bad conductor of caloric, as tan ooze, coarse manure or chip manure, saw dust, or the like. This prevents the catastrophe above mentioned by keeping the frost about the roots as late as we can, and I have peaches every year not excepting the last—besides saving every tree alive.

Another sinner who evades destruction by using the hard winters as a scape-goat is the peach tree borer.—Be after him with a sharp stick as soon as the frost is out of the ground He lies in and under the bark of the large upper roots bedded in a puddle of gum. Dig him out, treat him to a little boiling water from a tea kettle spout, give him a comforter of soot, or lime; but don't leave him alone in his glory.

Schoharie Co., N. Y. 1857. SUB.

Raising Stock.

EDS. RURAL:—As the introduction of the weevil into our midst has exploded all hopes of wheat growing for the present in Niagara Co., farmers are begining to calculate on a change of procedure which, at the best, cannot be effected without considerable inconvenience and loss. The nature of our soil appear not to be well adapted to spring crops on account of the severe drouths that usually occur in summer; however, some are intent on trying Barley for, in the absence of a Prohibtory law, it will require considerable Ale, if not some Rye, to keep up the spirits of the tippling multitude.

The present high prices of stock at a glance might seem to be sufficient inducement to give that branch of husbandry a trial for a business, but let us count the cost first by comparing the fall price with the spring, and the expense of keep and see how it will foot up. Now I know a good farm stock in this town, consisting of cattle six horses and sixty sheep, of full average quality, all young and growing. I find by estimating according to the general price of like property at the commencement of foddering, say first of December, would amount to $1,120; then again in the middle of May following, $1,425; a nett gain of $305. The estimated value of feed consumed $364; calling hay $9 00 per ton, straw and corn fodder in proportion, aside from the labor of taking care and feeding. If brother farmers make their calculations from estimates and figures, I for one would like to see their figuring in the RURAL, (for that we call the farmers dictionary here,) so that all interested may know how much their profits are. From my experience in the matter I find that the only way to have it pay well is to secure the best animals, then give them the best of care; in this way the demand will secure high prices that will pay a good profit while the medium or inferior animal will leave the producer in debt.

PLUMS.—Those who would like to save their plums from the curculio, can do so in a very simple manner.—Tread the earth down under the tree so that the surface will be hard and smooth. Then jar the tree every few days, from the time the fruit begins to form, and sweep up all stung fruit, and every thing that falls from tree and burn.

AYER'S

CHERRY PECTORAL,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Colds, Coughs, and Hoarseness.

BRIDGTON, MAINE, July 31st, 1856.

DR. J. C. AYER: I deem it my duty to bear testimony to the good results I have seen from the use of your CHERRY PECTORAL. In constant use in my practice and my family for the last ten years, it has shown it to possess superior virtues for the treatment of those complaints. EBEN KNIGHT, M.D.

A. B. MORTLEY, Esq., of Utica, N.Y., writes: "I have used your PECTORAL myself and in my family ever since you invented it, and believe it the best medicine for the purpose ever put out. With a bad cold I should sooner pay twenty-five dollars for a bottle than do without it, or take any other remedy."

Croup, Whooping Cough, Influenza.

RENSSELAER, Miss., Feb. 7, 1856.

BROTHER AYER: I will cheerfully certify your PECTORAL is the best remedy we possess for the cure of Whooping Cough, Croup, and the chest diseases of children. Most of your fraternity in the South appreciate your skill, and commend your medicine to our people.

HIRAM CORLIN, M.D.

JAMES LEE, Esq., MONTREAT, Ia., writes, 24 Jan., 1856: "I had a tedious influenza, which confined me in doors six weeks; took many medicines without relief; finally tried your PECTORAL by the advice of our clergyman. The first dose relieved the soreness in my throat and lungs; less than one half the bottle made me completely well. Your medicines are the cheapest as well as the best we can buy, and we esteem you, Doctor, and your remedies, as the poor man's friend."

Asthma or Phthisic, and Bronchitis.

WEST MANCHESTER, Pa., Feb. 4, 1856.

SIR: YOUR CHERRY PECTORAL is performing marvellous cures in this section. It has relieved several from alarming symptoms of consumption, and is now curing a man who has labored under an affection of the lungs for the last forty years. HENRY L. PARKS, Merchant.

A. RAMSEY, M.D., ALTON, Monroe Co., IOWA, writes, Sept. 6, 1855: "During my practice of many years I have found nothing equal to your CHERRY PECTORAL for giving ease and relief to consumptive patients, or curing such as are curable."

We might add volumes of evidence, but the most convincing proof of the virtues of this remedy is found in its effects upon trial.

Consumption.

Probably no one remedy has ever been known which cured so many and such dangerous cases as this. Some no human aid can reach; but even to those the CHERRY PECTORAL affords relief and comfort.

ASTOR HOUSE, NEW YORK CITY, March 5, 1856

DOCTOR AYER, LOWELL: I feel it a duty and a pleasure to inform you what your CHERRY PECTORAL has done for my wife. She had been five months laboring under the dangerous symptoms of Consumption, from which no aid we could procure gave her much relief. She was steadily failing, until Dr. Strong, of this city, where we have come for advice, recommended a trial of your medicine. We bless his kindness, as we do your skill, for she has recovered from that day. She is not yet as strong as she used to be, but is free from her cough, and calls herself well.

Yours with gratitude and regard,

ORLANDO BARTLEY, of SHELBYVILLE.

Consumptives, do not despair till you have tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It is made by one of the best medical chemists in the world, and its cures all around us bespeak the high merits of its virtues.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills.

THE sciences of Chemistry and Medicine have been taxed their utmost to produce this best, most perfect purgative which is known to man. Innumerable proofs are shown that these PILLS have virtues which surpass in excellence the ordinary medicines, and that they win, unprecedentedly upon the esteem of all men. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. Their penetrating properties stimulate the vital activities of the body, remove the obstructions of its organs, purify the blood, and expel disease. They purge out the foul humors which breed and grow distemper, stimulate sluggish or disordered organs into their healthful action, and impart healthy tone with strength to the whole system. Not only do they cure the every-day complaints of every body, but also formidable and dangerous diseases that have baffled the best of human skill. While they produce powerful effects, they are at the same time, in diminished doses, the safest and best physic that can be employed for children, being sugar-coated, they are pleasant to take; and being purely vegetable, are free from any risk of harm. Cures have been made which surpass belief were they not substantiated by men of such exalted position and character as to forbid the suspicion of untruth. Many eminent clergymen and physicians have lent their names to certify to the public the reliability of my remedies, while others have sent me the assurance of their conviction that my Preparations contribute immensely to the relief of my afflicted, suffering fellow-men.

The Agent below named is pleased to furnish gratis my American Almanac, containing directions for their use and certificates of their cures, of the following complaints:—

Costiveness, Bilious Complaints, Rheumatism, Dropsy, Heartburn, Headache arising from a foul Stomach, Nausea, Indigestion, Morbid Inaction of the Bowels and Pain arising therefrom, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, all Ulcerous and Cutaneous Diseases which require an evacuant Medicine, Scrofula or King's Evil. They also, by purifying the blood and stimulating the system, cure many complaints which it would not be supposed they could reach, such as Deafness, Partial Blindness, Neuralgia and Nervous Irritability, Derangements of the Liver and Kidneys, Gout, and other kindred complaints arising from a low state of the body or obstruction of its functions.

Do not be put off by unprincipled dealers with some other pill they make more profit on. Ask for AYER'S PILLS, and take nothing else. No other they can give you compares with this in its intrinsic value or curative powers. The sick want the best aid there is for them, and they should have it.

Patent Medicines.

A Medicine that Never Debilitates.

DR. SANFORD'S

INVIGORATOR,

OR LIVER REMEDY.

HAS ALL THE GOOD QUALITIES OF A Purgative medicine, answering the purposes of any Cathartic without the debilitating effects experienced from most purgatives It acts slowly and gently, but surely, moving the bowels to carry off all the secreted matter, at the same time, stimulating the Liver to a proper performance of its functions.

The Invigorator cures the Sick Headache. Take one or two tea-spoonsful at each attack and it will soon disappear. For an overloaded stomache, or when food rises or sours, take the Invigorator after eating, and it will not prove disagreeable or oppressive. For Heartburn, Palpitation, or difficult breathing take a teaspoonful once or twice daily. For Loss of Appetite, Langu or Listlessnes, the medicine is invaluable It will restore the appetite and make the food digest well.—Nightmare take a teaspoonful on retiring, and the demons of dream-land will all be fairies. After eating a heavy dinner, take a dose of Invigorator and it will relieve all oppression or fullness. The invigorator is a Liver Remedy of unequalled virtue, acting directly on that organ, curing Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Bilious Attacks, Dysentery, Piles Worms, and all Female Obstructions, for which it has no equal.

We know there is nothing now before the American public, prepared with such skill by a scientific man, particularly for diseases of the Liver, as Dr. Sanford's Invigorator, or LIver Remedy. It has attained a reputation second to no other article in the world, simply because it rests on its own merit. To convince all by trial that it is all its proprietors claim it to be, if any of our readers are suffering from such diseases as are described in Dr. Sanford's advertisement, we know of no remedy that will so surely cure as the Invigorator.

There has lately been brought to our notice a medicine that seems to possess wonderful, curative and healing proprieties in diseases of the Liver, stomache and Digestive Organs. It came to us with so many testimonials in its favor that we have noted its effects in some of the worst cases of continual debility, caused by deranged liver, and in every instance the effect was to relieve or give a permanent cure, Dr. Sanford's Invigorator, or Liver remedy is what we refer to. We always have been credulous about cures by patent medicines, but we are convinced that this medicine, for family use, is not over rated by the host of recommendations it has. Our advice is, for all troubled with Indigestion, Debility or Bowel Complaint, to get a bottle and try it; our word for it, relief will be experienced.

BLESSINGS To The Invalids who use Dr. Sanford's Invigorator, for it will relieve them of their pains as soon as it is taken into their stomach. Pain and misery cannot exist where the Invigorator is used, for it will as surely drive them away, as daylight will banish darkness, of this there can be no doubt to those who try it, for it carries conviction with every dose taken. Another evidence is the thousands of certificates from those who use it or have been cured by it.—Try one bottle, if it does not benefit, then we are mistaken.

HEALTH OR SICKNESS.

CHOOSE BETWEEN THEM.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

The blood furnishes the material of every tone, muscle, gland and fibre in the human frame. When pure, it secures health to every organ; when corrupt, it scatters the seeds of disease. Holloway's Pills operate directly upon the elements of the stream of life, neutralizing the principle of disease and thus radically curing the malady, whether located in the nerves, the stomach, the liver, the bowels, the muscles the skin, the brain, or any other part of the system.

USED THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

Holloway's Pills are equally efficacious in complaints common to the whole human race, and in disorders peculiar to certain climates and localities.

ALARMING DISORDERS.

Dyspepsia and derangement of the liver, the source of infirmity and suffering, and the cause of innumerable deaths, yield to these curatives, in all cases, how ever aggravated acting as a mild purgative alternative and tonic. They relieve the bowels, purify the fluids, and invigorate the system and the constitution at the same time.

General Weakness—Nervous Complaints.

When all stimulants fail, the renovating and bracing properties of these Pills give firmness to the shaking nerves and enfeebled muscles of the victim of general debility.

DELICATE FEMALES.

All irregularities and ailments incident to the delicate and sensitive organs of the sex are removed or prevented by a few doses of these mild but infallible alternatives. No mother who regards her own or her children's health should fail to have them within her reach.

The London "Lancet" the London "Medical Review," and the most eminent of the faculty in Great Britain, France and Germany, have eulogized the Pills and their inventor.

I have tried during Nineteen Years of my life the various modes of doing business.

Firstly for Cash.

Secondly on Short Credit.

Thirdly, had to take Long Credit, Orders and Accounts.

Lastly, I have been compelled to wait for payment of Goods sold on Six Months time long enough for a man to visit California, get rich, and return, before payment could be forced or coaxed.

Now I wish to say, to my numerous friends and patrons, that I am thoroughly convinced that the mode of buying goods on time is both injurious to the buyer and seller.

I will hereafter Sell for Read, pay, at prices that will defy all competion in Town, State, or the United States.

No one should buy a dollars worth of Goods without calling at the

The Southern Wind.

BY J. Q. A. WOOD.

The Southern Wind comes softly up
The Mississippi's stream,
And if I'm dreaming in my heart
'Tis this that bids me dream;
For I am musing now of one
Whose cheek the Southern breeze
Did sweetly wo but yesterday
In coming from the seas
He brings the odor in his breath
Of many a Sothern flower—
The fragrance of the orange grove,
Where Beauty's heart throbs but to love,
And smiling, owns its power.

His voice is rippling in my ear
A dear familiar name,
And though he babbles indistinct,
Its import is the same.
I know it by the gentle look—
That look she always bore,
And by the fashion of her form
And vesture that she wore.
At ruddy morn he passed her by.
And smoothed her horse's mane,
As up the dewy slope he trode—
And gaily on the lady rode,
Shaking her silken rein.

O, gentle talking Summer Wind!
O, softly babbling breeze!
Shouldst thou e'er blow this way again
From purple Southern seas,
Speak sweetly with my wedded love,
For she is filly fair,
And darker than the raven's wing,
The midnight of her hair;
The birds have caught her gentle name,
And troll it in their song,
And down beside the dewy way,
The flowers look brighter all the day,
Where she doth ride along.

Cowper's Grave.

BY ELIZABETH BARRETT BROWNING.

It is a place where poets crowned may feel the hearts' decaying,—
It is a place where happy saints may weep amid their praying:
Yet let the grief and humbleness, as low as silence, languish!
Earth surely now may give her calm to whom she gave her anguish.

O poets! from a maniac's tongue, was poured the deathless singing;
O Christians! at your cross of hope, a hopeless hand was clinging;
O men; this man, in brotherhood, your weart paths beguiling,
Groaned inely while he taught you peace, and died while ye were smiling.

And now what time ye all may read through dimming tears his story,
How discord on the music fell, and darkness on the glory,
And how, when one by one, sweet sounds and wandering lights departed,
He wore no less a loving face, because so broken hearted.

He shall be strong to sanctify the poets' high vocation,
And bow the meekest Christian down in meeker adoration;
Nor ever shall he be, in praise, by wise or good forsaken;
Named softly, as the household name of one whom God hath taken.

With quiet sadness and no gloom, I learn to think upon him,
With meekness, that is greatfulness, to God whose heaven hath won him,—
Who suffered once the madness cloud to His own love to blind him;
But gently led the blind along where breath and bird could find him.

And wiped the weeping eyes from out the dimness of their blindness,
Until they stood before the throne, dry-eyed, in perfect meekness.
And he hath his open vision now, in sunlight of the glory,
Discerning all the mysteries, and learning all the story.

And so the man who died for men, the meekest name that any
Among the glorified have writ, and all in heaven call Master,
Who service sought by prayer and tear, and meekness and forbearing,
Is now the Crowned who stands and sings, the Priest who hears and sharing.

THE PRODUCE OF THE CHINSE SUGAR CANE.—Mr J. D Layton, conected with the extensive sugar refinery of Belcher & Bro, of St Louis, furnished us yesterday with samples of sugar and syrup, which can be seen at our counting room, by those curious in such matters, the produce of the Chinese sugar cane, from the plantation of Col Ives, of Terre Pœuf. In May last year, Col Ives put ¼ of acre under cultivation, which ripened by the first of August, producing two barrels of syrup and fifteen bushels of seed In December following, the second crop was matured. This season Col. Ives has, we learn, some two hundred acres under cultivation which he expects will be ready for cutting down in August, and will yeild at least 40,000.—N. O Delta.

ARRIVAL OF THE WABASH.—The United States steamfrigate Wabash, bearing the broad pennant of Commodore H Paulding, Capt F. Eagle, commanding, arrived at her anchorage off the the Battery yesterday afternoon. She made the passage from Aspinwall to Sandy Hook in 9¼ days This is a good passage for a side wheel mail steamer, and a remarkable one for a frigate whose steam power is only auxiliary. She brings 138 officers and men, 13 women and 5 children, who served under Gen. Walker in Nicaragua.

Seventy five are sick and wounded, some very severely. Col. Philip R. Thompson, formerly of the U. S. army, died of chronic dysentery June 24, and was buried at sea. His widow is on board H. B. M. screw steam ship of line Orion and steam sloop Tartar, and sloops of war Saratoga and Cryne, remained at Aspinwall.—N. Y. Times.

Skill is Capital.

A GENUINE NEW ENGLAND STORY.

Hiram Veazie was a plain, good-hearted, honest farmer's boy, whose parents lived on a farm where his grand father was born, and half a dozen miles from Augusta, Me. With a good common school education, and a natural aptitude, Hiram was considered at the age of twenty to be a promising young man, and was certainly of great service to his father on the farm. Old Mr Veazie was comfortably situated as to pecuniary means: first, because his wants were few, and secondly, because his lands very nearly supplied them all. But when Hiram asked father to advance him some small amount with which to commence business, the good old man frankly acknowledged his inability, and rather wondered that his son could not content himself on the farm as his father and grand-father had done before him

The truth was, that Hiram had from boy-hood, and during all his school hours, been the intimate friend and companion of pretty Lucy White, the squire's daughter, and this childish friendship had ripened with years into love. Lucy's father understood the position of affairs perfectly, between the young people but never interferred, until one day, when Hiram took the old gentleman one side, and asked him for Lucy as his wife, old Squire White as he was universally called, replied kindly but firmly, that Hiram must first acquire some trade, and means enough to support Lucy before he could give his consent to such an arrangement. The future looked black to Hiram, therefore, for he was but a poor farmer's boy.

Lucy was a gentle and loving girl of nineteen, as intelligent as she was pretty: she loved Hiram sincerely, but was too sensible to sit down with him and pine over the situation of affairs. She was a practical Yankee girl, and her advice to Hiram was sound and loving.

"Go," she said, "to Boston or New York. You are active, good looking, intelligent and industrious; the very characteristics that command place, I should say, in a large city, and see if you cannot find the means of earning such wages, as shall help you to lay by something I too, will be industrous in the meantime, and what little I can save shall go to make up the necessary sum for the purchase of a snug little home for us"

Hiram kissed his little schoolmate, and promising her that she should never for an hour be out of his mind, soon gathered a small sum together, and with the blessing of his father and mother, he took the cars for Boston. It was his first visit to a large city, and at the outset he was almost bewildered, but seeing economical lodgings he began at once to look about himself for employment. This he found it hard to obtain, but he was daily growing more and more conversant with city life and ways, and he wrote every few days to Lucy a digest of observations and fortunes A fortnight, or three weeks in Boston made fearful inroads into his slender purse, and at the suggestion of some new acquaintance he determined to go to New York

Here he passed some two weeks with various adventures, but without finding an hour of paying occupation. He wandered everywhere, observing and searching out places, inquiring freely of all until the close of the third week he had but a single dollar left in his pocket, and felt for the first time nearly disheartened. In this mood he strolled through one of the up town cross streets above Union Park, and found his attention attracted by the operation of a steam saw mill, which he entered and quietly watched the business of. He saw a small but sufficient engine driving four saws fed by four men, while there stood at the desk hard by, one, evidently the master of the establishment.

Hiram felt a strong interest in what he saw; there were piles of excellent lumber in the building, and he watched the process of sawing it up, carefully observing to what purpose the wood was put, and saw a couple of hands in a further part of the shop engaged in dove-tailing the pieces together, and forming the lumber into boxes of various sizes He consumed so much time, and was so minute in his observations, that at last the proprietor came up to him and addressed him pleasantly:

"You seem to be quite interested?" he remarked to Hiram.

'Yes I have seen a good deal of lumber in my day, I was calculating how much you probably used up in this way.'

'We use a good many thousand feet every week.'

'So I should think, and best number ones, too.'

'Yes we require the very best stock, and lumber is "up now."

'How much do you pay?'

'Twenty-four dollars a thousand, all clear and assorted.'

'What do you do with these boxes?' continued Hiram.

'We can sell them faster than we can make them, for packing soap, &c.

'Rather heavy for that purpose, I should say, added Hiram.

'Well they are rather heavy, but we can't get boards sawed any different, they are down to the lowest gauge of the lumbering mills.'

Hiram looked thoughtful, handled the boxes, examined the saws, talked good common sense in business style to the man, and at last said, half in jest.

'You don't want a partner do you.'

'Why, not exactly; though if I had one who would put in a couple of thousand dollars and would take hold heartily himself, I wouldn't mind sharing the thing with him and throwing in the machinery.'

'I haven't got any money, said Hiram, but I will give an idea about this matter, and I will take hold and give my time, in a way that I think will be worth as much as the sum you name, in a short time, provided you give me half the business.'

'I like the way you talk,' said the man, 'but this is an odd proposition.'

'You say you pay $24 a thousand for the boards?'

'Yes.'

'Suppose I bring them down to $12 at once, and make neater and better boxes for your purpose?'

'If you can do that I will share with you at once, for I would make my fortune.'

'Will you give me a chance to try the thing for one day, after my own fancy, say commencing to-morrow?'

'Yes,' said the man, after a moment's hesitation 'I can see no harm, though I am to be away to-morrow forenoon.'

After a little longer talk, and a careful understanding that there should be no experiment tried that should risk the machinery, Mr. Hurd the box maker gave orders to his people that Mr. Veazie was to be obeyed on the following forenoon, the same as though he were himself to give the orders, and that he should return at noon.

Hiram at once took off his coat, measured one of the saws, and asked if it was the largest. He was told it was; this he was at first sorry for, but still carefully taking his measures upon a piece of paper, he soon disappeared. He remembered a hardware store, not far distant, which he had passed that very afternoon; to this he repaired and selected a circular saw, twice as large as Mr. Hurd had in his shop, and of a different make in the teeth; he also got some braces and bolts of a size and style which he appeared to understand, and telling the storekeeper that he wanted them for Mr. Hurd, in the next street, he found no difficulty in getting them on credit. With matters thus arranged, he returned to his boarding place and studdied in his own mind as to how he would carry out the plan he had conceived

It was about twelve o'clock at noon on the following day when Mr Hurd, returned to his shop, where he found Hiram Veazie in his shirt sleeves and with a pair of "overalls" on at work before a large splitting saw, which he had erected upon one of the benches, and to which he had applied the steam power. He was splitting the boards, which were fully thick enough to admit of it, and thus making the boards produce just twice the number of boxes as heretofore, with an equal amount of labor. Since those who finished them up into boxes after they were sawed could work enough faster with the thinner lumber, to make up for the occupation of one hand to tend the splitting saw.

Mr. Hurd looked on with atonishment; already were scores of boxes and more manufactured of the new thickness, and they were naturally more valuable, as the thickness was ample for all purposes of strength, and the weight was reduced one half He was also delighted at his new acquaintance, who took hold of his work so handily, and above all he felt that he had once given him an idea worth half his business and more. Mr Hurd was an honest and faithful man, and unhesitatingly kept his promise, installing Hiram in the business with one half the profits.

The reader may imagine the letter which Hiram wrote to his faithful Lucy, and how the business proved exceedingly prosperous, and how it was enlarged, and Hiram found himself at the end of a twelve month, worth some two thousand dollars; and how Squire Whitd pressed his hand warmly, when he returned to ask for Lucy, and told him to 'take her,' and how Lucy blushing laid her fair cheek bathed with happy tears upon his shoulder, and her kind old mother said that she had but one regret, and that was to part with Lucy, who must now go away to live in New York.

But all this was so, and Lucy and Hiram were married, and their friends declared that Heaven made the match and worked a miracle for Hiram Veazie, who was so good, and industrious, and generous spirited. But these are not days of miracles, and the reader knows very well that it was brought about by the most natural agencies.

Three years only have passed since Hiram was married, as we have related in this veriable story, and on the Bloomingdale road, not a long walk from the large factory of Hurd and Veazie, live Hiram and his lovely companion. The large and pleasant house in which they reside is his own, and a handsome surplus besides. Each annual Christmas, they return to their childhood's home, and Lucy thinks the journey is healthy for little Hiram.

Kissing for the Poor.

Some young officers quartered at Metz, had, for want of something else to do, watched, day after day, the fair devotee going to mass at the Cathedral, which happened to be opposite the principal Cafe. Among the ladies, the one favored with the most admiration and attention was a young girl at once beautiful, modest and elegantly dressed.

"I would give a good deal for a kiss on that fresh, blooming cheek," said the captain, somewhat over fifty years of age

"I give nothing," said the Lieutenant, just over six and twenty, "but I would take it"

"I bet you wouldn't."

"How much?"

"Twenty-five Napoleons."

"Done," said the Lieutenant. "I take you all as witnesses."

Mass was just over, and the young girl was seen descending the steps of the Cathedral.

Arranging his stock and sword, with deliberate pace the Lieutenant walked across up to the foot of the steps, and then, as the young lady passed him, with a gallantry executed military salute, he accostd her:

"Mademoiselle," said he, "there is a sum of twenty five lous resting on your right cheek: will you allow me to take it off?"

"I do not understand.'

"For many a week, Mademoiselle, we have watched with admiration and respect, your daily visits to the Cathedral; the whole regiment is in love with you, and I have wagered twenty-five louis that I would obtain a kiss from you just on the right cheek—nothing more, upon my honor. The young lady blushed deep, and her eyes flashed with indignation.—The femme de chambre took her hands out of her apron pockets, and held them up in holy horror. All at once, the young lady turning to the officer, made him a profound curtsey. "Sir," said she, "You will not loose your bet; you shall take the twenty-five Napoleons on my right cheek, on condition that you also take the twenty-five that are on my left cheek, which I now offer you, and which I will immediately put into the poor-box here at the door."

The young Lieutenant was rather outgeneraled. He, however, had too much spirit to retreat, and accordingly won his wager at the price required, though it must be said that the laugh was against him.

☞ A little boy going to church on Sunday, remarked,—

"Ma, there goes a woman with a hat on; and O! see, mother, she's got boots on, too."

"No, no, my son, you are mistaken; it is only a gentleman with a woman's shawl on," replied the mother.

☞ Let me never fancy I have zeal till my heart overflows with love for every man living. Could like to see such sentiments more fashionable.

☞ "You have a dirty face," remarked one boy to another. "Can't help it," said the other, "father's a Black Republican."

☞ Laziness travels so slow that poverty soon overtakes her. Loafers should stick a pin there!

Bethlehem.

Bethlehem was a small city "among the thousands of Judah," and is little mentioned in Jewish history. Yet no city except Jerusalem is dearer to Christians, as it was the birthplace of our Saviour. Micah 5: 2.

It lies six miles south of Jerusalem, by a rugged and hilly road; and is now called by the natives Beit-lahm. In going to it from Jerusalem you pass near "Rachel's Tomb," less than two miles from Bethlehem, and a little west of the road, very possibly on the true site which we know was long marked by a monument. Gen. 35: 19, 20. Somewhat nearer Bethlehem is a high ridge, offering a fine view both of that city and of the Dead sea; the latter, though twenty miles off, seeming very near. The view of Bethlehem from this point, rising beyond a deep valley, is striking and pleasant. Midway on the road is a well of pure and delicious water, supposed to be the one of which David so longed to drink. 2 Sam 23: 15—17.

The houses of Beit-lahm are solidly but roughly built on very narrow streets, and many are in a ruinous condition—The most conspicuous object is a huge fortress-like monastery, at the eastern and lower end of town, enclosing various buildings; one of which, the Greek chapel, covers the traditionary "cave of the nativity" The very spot, as the monks pretend, is marked by a star made of silver and gems, around which an inscription in Latin states that "here Jesus Christ was born of the virgin Mary." It is known that the Arabs, in case of need, shelter themselves and flocks in caverns; but it is not probable that a subterranean cave, difficult of access, such as is now visitited, was the stable of the inn at Bethlehem.

A recent traveller, Dr. Olin, says, "The environs of Bethlehem are beautiful, but cannot be said to be well cultivated. The soil is fertile, but is encumbered with rocks The deep valley on the northern side of the town, overlooked by the road to Jerusalem, presents a scene of beauty and luxuriance unrivalled, so far as I have yet seen, in Palestine. The steep hill sides by which it is bounded are terraced with great labor and care, and covered with fine fruit trees. This delicious spot may be taken as a specimen of the general appearance of the hill-country in the prosperous days of the Jewish state, and of what it might once more become under the fostering care of a good government. It is only under the walls of considerable towns that agriculture is practicable. Within two miles of Bethlehem fields are permitted to lie waste, which once employed and amply rewarded the labor of a numerous peasantry. The Bedouins, who are always in the vicinity, seize the fruit and corn ever before they come to maturity. Under such discouragements, little attention is paid to agriculture. The people of Bethlehem make crosses, beads, and various ornaments, of pearl, and of the wood and kernels of olives that grow in and about the garden of Gethsemane. They supply with these the bazaars of Jerusalem, and press them upon travellers with annoying importunity." They are mostly nominal Christians, and number perhaps 2000.

In the valley of Bethlehem, more than three thousand years ago, Ruth the Moabite s gleaned after the reapers in the barley harvest; in the gate of the city she was publicly betrothed to Boaz, and from them David and Christ descended. Ruth 1—4. Here David the shepherd king was born, and anointed by Samuel the prophet to his royal office. 1 Sam. 16. On the hills and fields around, he fed his father's flocks, and praised God with harp and psalms. Over the same fields, ten centuries later, "a great multitude of the heavenly host," sung in honor of Christ's advent; while in a corner of the half-covered court of the inn of Bethlehem the Redeemer was born. Here he received the worship of the wise men and of the shepherds; and here the bloody Herod sought him in vain. The prophecy of Micah, 5: 2, was fulfilled So will be the prophecy in the angel's song: "Glory to God in the highest; and on earth peace, good will towards men"

☞ If there be no faith in our words, of what use are they.

☞ Past events are as clear as a mirror; the future as obscure as varnish.—But there are considerable exceptions, however.

☞ Brave actions are the substances of life, and good sayings the ornament of it.

DEEP CREEK.

ORIGINAL.

For the Tecumseh Herald.

Death of Hernan de Soto.

'Twas the evening of a sultry day
In the far and gnarled wood,
In a lonely hut, the bravest heart
Lay mouldering in its rest;
In gorgeous folds before the door
Drooped coolly blustery of Spain,
The yellow banner, lowly staff
Once borne upon a lofty plain.

But now upon the broadest air
Plants dark the seeds of death,
"The very chargers droop their heads"
And proudly pant for breath.
In burnished armor warriors brave
See wrecked their highest hopes,
They pine for Sierras snow clad mounts,
And Alpuarra's breezy slopes.

They had seen the Spanish arms
Reflect from Alabama's stream,
And filled the homeless prairies with
The terror of the Spanish name,
But now the mightiest spirit droops,
The conqueror of Peru,
The eye was dim, the sweat of death
Hung o'er De Soto's brow.

He calls Morcoso to his side
And raised his hand on high,
Swear not, but pledge in honors name,
So I in peace shall die,
Sound trumpets, heralds now proclaim
The leader thou shalt be,
To lead this royal army on
Now Morcoso pledge to me.

St. Jago cried the chief
No shout of triumph or applause;
Go Vasco—bid them sound again
In our loyal country's cause.
I'm dying comrades, hear me now,
No tears weep ye for me;
But with an anthem ringing high
I'll rest glad—joyously.

Ye shall sheath me in my mail,
With my helmet on my head,
My shroud and banner of Castile,
My river for my bed.
The dying heard an Indian's words,
Wild notes of the war whoop rang,
His ruling passion now prevailed
As to his feet he sprang.

His features flashing with new life,
St. Jago shouted he,
For Spain,—for Spain, my comrades shout,
De Soto and victory!
His spirit fled as notes rang high,
The sun had sunk to rest,
And torches flashed with crimson light
Along the prairied west.

The warrior to his home they bear,
Notes of the Te Deum swell,
The mournful music echoes high
Through woods and flowery dell,
There was a calm—a deep, deep pause,
A sullen splash, a startling boom,
The waters stilled—De Soto slept
Beneath his river—his long last home.

KATE MONTAGUE

RIOT IN A PENSYLVANIA THEATRE.—The Pittsburgh Dispatch of Saturday, furnishes the following:

A riot occurred at the theatre in Chambersburg, on the 4th, between a company called the "Owls" and citizens of the place. The Owls demanded admission free of charge, which was refused. After considerable fighting, they made an attempt to force the door, in which they succeeded, and rushed into the room, making for the stage, in order to grasp the theatre performers. As they did so, the wildest scene of confusion occurred, and the ladies set up a tremendouous cry of fear, and rushing in all directions for safety. The theatre men had gone out through a back door, and finding that their "bird had flown," the infurated "Owls" were prevailed upon to leave the room. Another scene of violence then occurred at the foot of the stairs, in which some of the citizens and the 'Owls' promptly participated, and which the police made unavailing efforts to prevent After ineffectual efforts to quell the disturbance had been made by the town officers, it was at last resolved to call out a military company, which had come into town from Gettysburg during the evening. By a prompt and well-directed effort, this company soon disbanded the crowd. One was fatally injured, but a larger number were cut and bruised more or less seriously.

EXTENSIVE ROBBERY AT THE DEPOT.—A man named Montgomery was robbed at the depot yesterday afternoon of $3,000. He came to the city on the Western Metropolis, and got aboard the 2:50 Chicago Express train. The car into which the unfortunate man got was crowded, and there was quite a rush for seats, during which his carpet-sack, which he carried in his hand, was cut open and the money taken out. The robbery was dexteriously committed, and the robber, whoeve, he was, made off unobserved.—Mr. M. got off the cars, made his case known to the police, and they are instituting a vigorous search for the adroit thief. The money with the exception of two gold twenty-dollar pieces is on the bank Carroll, Sandwich, New Hampshire, and was all earned, Mr. Montgomery says, by hard work on the Boston and Maine Railroad, of which he was for many years an employee. Mr. Montgomery resides in White Pigeon, Mich.—Toledo Blade 10th.

The Lady's Home Magazine."

The August No. of Arthur is likewise thus promptly received. Its embellishments, colored Fashion Plates, Patterns &c improve, rather than depreciate.—We notice among its contributions a fine poetic gem, from our old friend "Minnie Mary Lee" entitled "The Premonition" also a continuance of "Look Out" by Townshend and other articles of value.—Address T. S. Arthur & Co. Phila'd.—Terms $2,00 per annum.

Northern Lenawee Agricultural Society

It will be remembered that the Annual Fair of this Society will be held at Tecumseh, on the 10th of September next, at which time an Address will be delivered by Prof. A. B. Palmer of Detroit. The result of our Last Fair was such as to greatly encourage the Committee and friends of the society to make ample arrangements for a fine Agricultural and Horticultural display. The pamphlets containing the Constitution and By-Laws, also a list of the Judges and the prizes to be awarded in the different departments, is now published and may be found at the office of the Secretary.

Certificates of membership are also prepared and signed for delivery. It is now time that the friends of the Society, and of agriculture in general in this portion of the county should bestir themselves.—Members of the Executive Committee should supply themselves with certificates of membership and attend to their sale, for in accordance with the disposition heretofore manifested on the part of the officers of the county society, we must depend upon the sale of membership tickets and tickets of admittance to the fair, to meet the current expenses and premium awards, rather than any appropriation from the county agricultural Tax heretofore made by the Board of Supervisors, unless we choose to engage in litigation with the county society.

We do not despair however that the time may come when better counsels shall prevail, and the county society shall cease to interpose to thwart the action of the Board of Supervisors in this respect It will be seen that the arrangement of the Judges and committees for the present year embraces the towns of Cambridge Franklin, Tecumseh, Macon, Ridgeway, and Raisin in the transactions of the society. It will also be seen that some of the entries, such as farms—Ornamental shade Trees, Shrubbery &c should be made at an early day in writing with the Secretary.

Membership Tickets will be found with the Secretary and also with the different members of the Executive Committee where they can be procured, upon the payment of the annual membership fee, by those desiring to do so.

Upon the influence and importance of an association of this kind in promoting the interests of agriculture in our midst is it not necessary here to dwell, for they are sufficiently felt and appreciated, and it is only necessary to call the attention of our readers to the subject to secure for it the prompt and efficient attention which it demands.

LITERARY NOTICES.

Peterson's Lady's National Magazine.

The August No. Peterson is already upon our Table. There is no diminution in the beauty and freshness of its plates, patterns &c, nor in the high literary character of its articles—'Love's Labor Won' is not quite won yet, but we think it is drawing to a close. It has been throughout a production of well sustained interest, and cannot fail to add to Mrs. Southworth's already extensive reputation, as well as to the well deserved popularity of Petersons Magazine. Published monthly by C. J. Peterson Phila'd. Terms $2,00 per annum.

Hunt's Merchants' Magazine.

The July No of Hunt is received. It contains a fine steel, portrait of Joseph May, Esq. Its leading articles are Food Bread, &c. Political Economy, chap. IV Oswego. The great city of the Interior Minnesota Coinage of the U S. False Pretenses, &c The writer upon the great city of the Interior, who is J. W. Scott Esq., of New York, settles down upon the conclusion that this city will eventually be Toledo. John A. Wood, Esq. is the author of the article on Minnesota This excellent Magazine is published monthly by Freeman Hunt, Esq. No 142 Fulton street, N. Y. Terms $5, per annum.

Michigan Journal of Education.

The July No of this valuable Educational Journal is duly received and always welcome to our exchange. It contains an article upon Physical Education extracts from the N. Y. Teacher which is well worthy not only of perusal, but of careful consideration, by both parents and teachers. Published monthly by John Gregory, A. M. editor & proprietor, at Ann Arbor. Terms $1, per annum.

Michigan Farmer.

The July No. of the Farmer is also received and always regarded as indispensible to our agricultural columns.—We have selected from it a fine essay upon American Housewives, which is worthy a careful perusal by not only husbandmen, but husbands generally.—Published and edited by R. F. Johnstone Esq. Detroit.—Terms $1,00 per anum.

Poetry of Science

That there is poetry in science will be admitted by those who have but little faith in its truths, and little knowledge of its wonders. The poetry of flowers has been the theme of writers who know them merely by their odors and by their hues and the poetry of animals has been celebrated by authors who have seen them only within their prisons of stone or iron cage of iron. Even the moon with her cold radiations, has been signalized as the very paradise of poetical sentiment, striping the God of day in her influence over our feelings, and extinguishing in her lyric blaze all the sentimental glimmerings of the distant stars. The difference between the poetry inspired by the satellite of siver and the stars of adamant can have no relation to our ideas of distance or number.

Were the moon a ball of marble in our uper atmosphere chiseled by the sculptor into her rounded hollows and her mountain ridges, or were it a mammoth cheese at a lower level dimpled by the fingers of the diary-maid, she would still be invested with all the poetical feelings with which her light is associated. To the onlgal or mearly poetical eye the stars appear as close to us as the moon and wheather we contemplate them mearly as solitary lights in the fermiment, or as grouped into into brilliant constillations, they suggest none of those ideas of deep feeling and sublime emotions which are associated with the past, the present and the future contition of our race But no sooner dose philosophy, with her magic wand marshal the stray host, and arrange their planits and sattelites into the glorious systems of worlds which fill the immensity of space than faith takes up the wonderous tale and associates with these bright orbs, the fortune of immortal man. To study science for its useful applications mearly is to limit its advantages to purely sensual ends; to pursue science for the sake of the truths she may reveal is an endeavor to advance the elements of human happiness through the intelligence of the race

Has not science therefore poetry of the most noble and most holy kind—a poetry which shows to man lifes mystery—a science that revels with the forked-lightening, sings with the sounding thunders and dances with the sparkling stars, that mounts the sky and dives, beneath the earth. Science has conquored superstition, though many times she has fought—though meriods have burled their deadly weapons at her holy front, yet still she conquored and she ruled. She shows earths people where they are and unfolds to view the laws by which the earth itself is ruled. With mighty strides she steps from system to system and pries into their secret order and their laws By the agency of science and the operations of industry many of the mighty inventions of former days have reached their zenith, and wrought great works. Do we traverse the deep? Science lends wings to the ship and bids defiance to the natural opponents, the winds and tides. Do we traverse the land? Steam, the off-spring of science is harnessed to our chariot, and we out-strip the flight of the swiftest bird.

What science has done we all know, but what it may yet achieve remains a mystery. There was a time when the darkest shades of nigh hung o'er the land,—when man walked forth but little above the brute, and ignorance rulled the day. That time is past and with it fled thoss dark and dismal deeds, which history's page unfolds. Science sleeps no longer—how could she sleep, when within the precincts of her own mighty influence rests life and the wellfare of the immortal soul. The day is now dawning and the sun of intellect is pouring forth its mighty rays, which, hot will fall upon the head of infamy and crime. The day I say is but dawning, what will the meridian of that day be—can we imagine what new pearls may be discovered by that powerful light? 'Could we but fall asleep perchance to dream—and view with visions eye, the future, what strnge mysterious stories could we tell of science then, to men of science now. "We must learn to labor and to wait." Time will unfold unto our minds what science yet may do. Yet we must labor and not wate alone—what and where would liberty have been if freedom's sons had never struck for liberty? To toil, to strive and not to yield, should be our motto. Science requires hard study, a constant endeavoring to find.

Though science has brought man to know his duties and responsibilies as a man—yet it does not perform his obligations for him, nor does it render him a life of ease and luxury: Still pleasures and joys of the highest order are connected with it quenching at once the cravings of the immortal mind, and causing even solitude to be a lovely home and books companions of the liveliest tones
